EDEN IN I.V.

By Reynard Van Nguyen

If you've never been to the Isla Vista Billiards Club, fold up this Weekend Connection and get down there. Finish this while you browse at the menu.

I've said it before and I'll say it again: The IVBC is way beyond cool. A cool shelter from the harsh world that the center of town can become, a place to run when fleeing the confines of an I.V. Theatre history class, a place to hoist a monster mug of Anchor Steam.

But the Billiards Club is more than that, oh so much more.

One large draw, naturally, is the billiards. A dozen tables, spaciouly laid out, the smoothest green, the soothing lights. Now I understand why they call it pool. Pools of soft light spreading out over pools of felt, colored spheres easing lazily across the tables into the pockets.

Actually, I'm not much of a pool player, but I noticed the recent addition of video games to the entertainment possibilities of the IVBC, which also has dart boards.

The main thing for me when visiting the IVBC, however, is the food. The first time I went there I marvelled at the variety and quality of the menu. When you first go there, it may be relief enough to get out of that pizza-sandwich-burrito rut. But the quality of the food is beyond compare anywhere.

For weeks I looked forward to the days when I could spend an afternoon or evening at the Billiards Club, grazing on the appetizers — calamari, garlic bread — and the pasta — angel hair, seafood, chicken pesto.

Then I went there not long ago to find that they had expanded their menu! Perfection has been topped! Now there was an expanded choice of appetizers like shrimp and vegetables tempura (exquisite ... and the sauce!), fish and chips (finally, England's best contribution to world cuisine returns to I.V.!) and most marvelous of all, the crab cakes.

That's right, crab cakes. They were the best! I cannot even begin to describe the naked luxury I felt when I first bit into those morsels. Ooooooooooh yeah.

Another addition to their lineup is a crew of pizzas. I had the Sicilian last time I went there and I was very nearly overwhelmed. A full pie of the best crust this side of Chicago, and cheese that bubbles all over rather than sitting in the middle of the pizza. They also have greek pizza with olives and feta cheese, cajun sausage pizza that I cannot wait to try, and other selections.

The love of my life, Odessa, likes the sandwiches. When we went there the other day, she had the ham and Swiss on focaccia. Served open-faced, it was so much more than a hot ham and cheese — which does sound kind of tawdry, admit it.

But don't stop there, I can heartily recommend the I.V. Patrol burger or the tri-tip sandwich — el magnifico! They also have burritos, but not like anyplace else.

But there is also a wide selection of salads — Chinese chicken and wonton and Caesar and even Waldorf. Soups abound as well; witness the broccoli clam chowder and the seafood steamer. Eat there every day you possibly can — you'll see me, just look behind the monster beer and plates of food, that'll be me.

The Isla Vista Billiards Club is located at 935 Embarcadero del Norte. Call 562-1240 for more information.

I couldn't keep the capricorn from listening. Last night she copied it, believing to be oh so sly. "Might you know where it is?" the foolish one asked. I laugh "Ha ha" as she rolled my back. You geev me sooch good hapiness. Kiss my snake. He lives on the shelf.

King's Tavern is a Bloody Good Time in Santa Barbara

By Reynard Van Nguyen

*Old King's Tavern was a merry old cavern
A merry old pub was it They'll serve you pint and darts you can throw
And it needn't make you fret one bit.*

No American town is complete, of course, without an English pub. There's just something reassuring about wading into one of those oaken and darkened rooms, hearing the thwack of a bullseye and talking to bartenders who measure their beer by the pint, not the cup.

King's Tavern on State Street in downtown Santa Barbara is a good example. The bar is solid, it looks strong enough to resist the Norman Conquest and the Hundred Years' War combined. Yet the density of the bar is offset by the delicacy of the glittering bottles of, ironically, hard liquor behind the bar promising those for whom a pint of stout is not enough.

When I went there the other day, however, a stiff pint (or three) of Double Diamond was what I sought. We — that's Odessa, Veronica and I — sat ourselves down at the table in the back of the front room. Perhaps I should explain at this point that King's Tavern has a back room, behind the front room, which houses the bar. The front room that is.

Anyway, we sat ourselves down at the table underneath the print of the HMS Victory, which was Horatio Nelson's ship. Perhaps I should explain at this point that Horatio Nelson was a British admiral who won the Battle of Trafalgar, even after he died, and is now commemorated by a statue in Trafalgar Square in London where there are more pigeons than anywhere else in the world. Trafalgar Square that is.

Anyway, I was charmed, in a masculine sort of way, by the framed British soccer jerseys that were on display against the wall opposite us. They call it football everywhere except America. Unless they call it futbol, of course.

Anyway, before we knew it, the place was packed. This should attest to the wide acclaim that King's Tavern earns, as well as the smattering of people with a true appreciation for the British Pub in the Santa Barbara area.

That, of course, needs no explanation.

King's Tavern is located at 4324 State Street. Call 963-9163 for details.

Greek House Tavern -

By Reynard Van Nguyen

The gods of Olympus looked down upon Goleta, and zounds! Behold, they declared a feasting temple to rival the ambrosial product of Ganymede's kitchens! The Greek House Tavern, like the salty springs of Poseidon at the Acropolis, rising from the Earth like the foam of Aphrodite, sweet, sensual, heady.

Odessa and I went down to the Greek House Tavern the other day, taking advantage of a quick getaway during a slow period at work. I had never been there, and neither had she, so we went. We were curious about what seemed like an incongruous bastion of comfort between the vacuum cleaner repair shops and dive stores on Hollister in Goleta.

Once inside, I was amazed quite profoundly. The rafters, held up by columns of the Corinthian order, were solid. When I say solid what I mean is this: heavy timbers seasoned with the scents of gyros on the grill, of roasted victuals casting a savor that floated up and into the ceiling, saturating it.

But the ceiling was too high for me to smell whether or not my suspicions were accurate. Nevertheless, the vines that snake 'round the columns made the word authentic take on a whole new meaning. The balconies hanging over the central area were arranged as if the food to be set before us was virtuosity worthy of an audience. Of course, it was.

Odessa and I decided to begin with an appetizer — fried calamari. That's squid for you landlubbers. Needless to say it was great, and the sauce ... well, you know about the sauce.

We followed that up with our individual entrees. If you're the kind of person who thinks Greek food is what the cook makes at the sorority house, think again. If you're the kind of person who thinks Greek food is limited to gyros or pita pocket falafels, think yet again.

The nation that popularized the idea of a god of wine would not have a cuisine so limited. The Greek House Tavern has gyros, and they are excellent, as gyros are wont to be most of the time. I should know; Odessa, she of small tummy, gave me a portion of hers. The were excellent, grilled just so, with fresh vegetables and a warm quartered pita.

I, on the other hand, went with the moussaka. If you're not familiar with this dish, become so. Let me see if mere words can convey the majesty of the Greek House Tavern moussaka — picture this: a careful blend of sliced eggplant and ground beef, flavored with herbs to conjure images of a feast at Parnassus. Oh yeah. Cover that with bechamel cream, fluffy and thick and melting in your mouth. Zounds!

Obviously, I ate my fill, washing it down with lemonade (it was a little early in the afternoon for Ouzo). Odessa vastly enjoyed her gyros as well, and I remarked that I hadn't had such great Greek food since we went to Aesop's Tables in San Diego. Oh yeah.

I've heard that as the evening progresses, so does the fun at the Greek House. The dinner menu has specialties like seafood entrees and I've heard there's even singing going on sometimes. Check it out.

The Greek House Tavern is located at 5782 Hollister Ave. in Goleta. Call 964-6463 for details.

End Notes:

Howdy Club Scenesters! Sorry to say not much caught my eyes (or ears) this next couple of weeks.
But — there are a few noteworthy events — check out the Red Ants at Busters on Friday, the 28th! (Crazy girls from L.A.)
Pennywise was supposed to be playing at The Red Dog, but it was feared that the show would be too darn rowdy — so no show! Be warned though, there are some good bands going to be playing there soon. Late.
