

Possible Trouble

Jarvis' Campaign $500,000 in Debt

By CAROLYN FRIDAY PAUL
SACRAMENTO—Although Howard Jarvis has raised $2.8 million so far, his campaign for Prop. 9 may be in trouble, according to disclosure statements which show the campaign to be almost half a million dollars in the red.

The statements, filed with the Secretary of State on May 5, show that Jarvis' two principal committees, Yes on 9, and Cut the Income Tax, have spent $3.2 million yet have managed to raise less than a million dollars since the initiative qualified for the ballot last December.

The dozens of No on 9 committees, on the other hand, have raised $179,000 more than they have spent. Since January, the opponents of the measure, which is expected to reduce state revenues from $2- to $5 billion, have reported contributions totalling $661,000.

The campaign disclosure statements, show the Prop. 9 supporters have spent $108,378 on TV spots and newspaper ads, and $1.1 million on direct mailers and administrative overhead costs this year.

A majority of the 250,000 pro-Prop. 9 benefactors contributed $100 or less. Since the Secretary of State does not require the names of those who donate less than $100, many of the contributions are anonymous.

Two notable exceptions were a $25,000 gift from Dart Industries, and $10,000 from Los Angeles investor Joseph Baird. Perhaps the strangest gift was $250 from Van Nuys Community Hospital.

The foes of Prop. 9, Citizens for California, received most of their money from union members, health officials, and state employees.

But the biggest chunk by far came from educators primarily in the first and second level managerial positions of the state

Draft Funding Approved by Full Committee

Transferring of $13.3 million to fund draft registration was approved by a voice vote in the Senate full Appropriations Committee on Tuesday, according to Bob Mills, a spokesperson for the committee.

The bill has now been sent to the floor of the Senate where it will be debated and voted on probably early next week, Mills added. "Assuming the bill passes in the Senate next week, it could be written into law by the first week in June. I think it will pass," said Mills.

Prior to the passage of the bill, several amendments proposed by Senator Mark Hatfield (R-OR) were voted on. "Hatfield first offered an amendment to cut the amount from $13.3- to $4.7 million and this failed 17-9. Another amendment to add onto the registration forms a box to check 'conscientious objector' was passed by a vote of 13-11," said Mills.

Additionally, appropriation of $440,000 for a public relations office to provide information to people on what they have to do to register was approved.

Department of Education and the public post-secondary institutions.

U.C. administrators chipped in a total of $13,100. Stanley Sheinbaum, who, together with Superintendent of Public Instruction Wilson Riles, was the only other Regent to donate, contributed $5,000.

After Sheinbaum, U.C. President David Saxon made the largest single donation from an individual by giving $1,250.

U.C. Chancellors Al Bowker and James Meyers, Chancellor-designate Ira Heyman, Vice presidents James Kendrick, Donald Swain, and Archie Kleingartner, and Special Assistant to the President David Wilson, were all listed as contributing $150 to $500.

S.O.N.T. sponsored a gospel rally in Storke Plaza yesterday which featured songs, speakers and testimonials.

Complaints Alleging Campaign Violations Filed Against A.S. Presidential Candidates

By LEE SHELTON
Some 15 complaints alleging various campaign violations in the recent A.S. Elections have been filed with the Associated Students Judicial Council by the Elections Committee.

According to Missy Hankin, elections chair, the allegations range from excessive campaign expenditures to illegal sign posting. Of what she termed a "knock down, drag out campaign," Hankin said that "Some people did not follow election by-laws and many common courtesies were violated." She added that in general, "The candidates were not considerate of each other," she said. Judicial Council has the authority to levy fines on the candidates against their $25 election bonds. While the total fines can go over the bond, the limitations are specified on the amount which can be charged for each violation.

Hankin said that misconduct could at least partly be alleviated by the adoption of more stringent campaign rules. "I think there should be some sort of by-law change so that in extreme instances a candidate could be disqualified."

An example of an extreme instance, according to Hankin, is the campaign party thrown by Bob McMahon who ran for A.S. President. The party included 20 kegs of beer and a live band, and is estimated to have cost more than $900.

The by-laws place a $100 limit on campaign spending. McMahon was allowed to continue his candidacy after the violation. However, the matter has been presented to the Faculty-Student Conduct Committee for review.

County Officials Fight Sanctuary Limitation

By JOE MANSON
Plans to fight a recent U.S. Commerce Department recommendation to give marine sanctuary status to only a limited portion of the Santa Barbara Channel are being made by county officials.

However, to date, no specific legal action is being considered to contest the decision by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration to urge that only Santa Barbara Island and the waters extending six nautical miles seaward around the four northern Channel Islands be in the proposed sanctuary.

"There may be some litigation in the future, but we recommended that none be started at this point," said Mark Levine, a county lawyer.

John Stahl, administrative assistant to Supervisor Bill Wallace, said that the County's Environmental Office will report back to the Board of Supervisors, and that the issue will probably be on the Board's agenda next week.

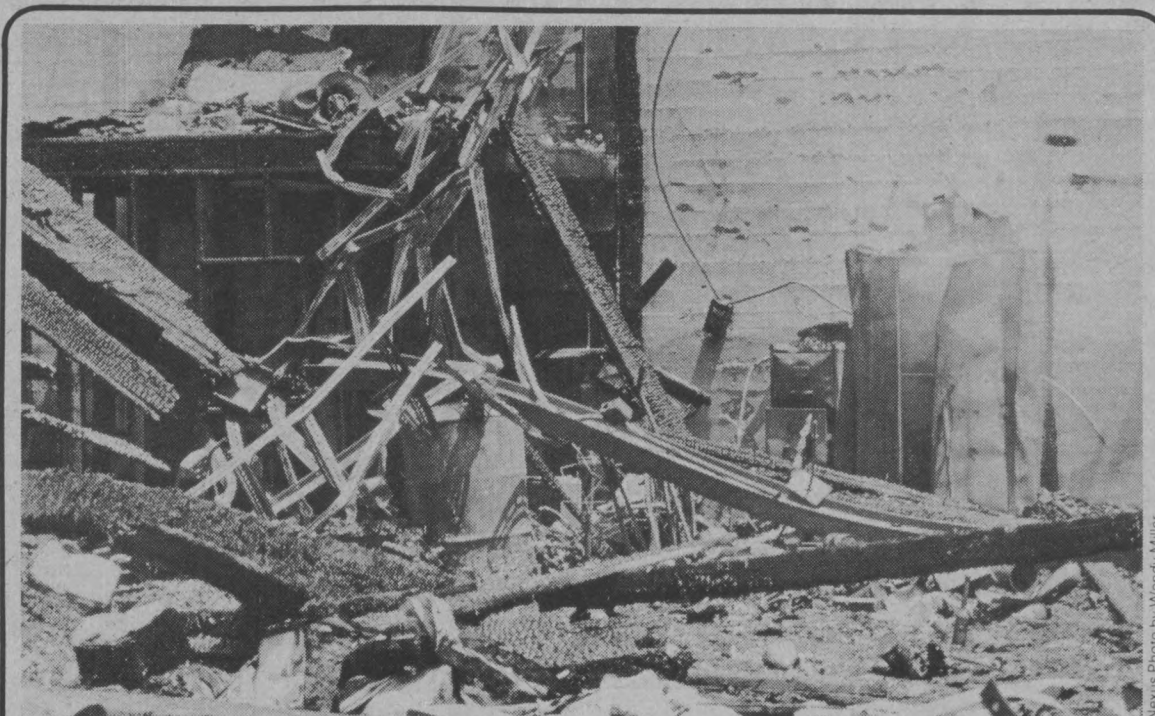

"We'll probably protest the decision," said Stahl, "But I don't know how much good that will do. We haven't had any luck at all with the Feds."

County officials and environmentalists are seeking to get sanctuary status for the entire channel, including the mainland shoreline and the islands. Hearings were held in Santa Barbara and Ventura last January to present the proposal, and objections to it by the Coast Guard, the fishing industry, and oil companies.

The proposal as drafted would keep the fisheries under present regulations and would not interfere with Coast Guard authority in the shipping lanes, but would prohibit future oil activity in the six-mile zone around the islands. Oil drilling already started in the area would be permitted to continue.

Additionally, the proposal provides for future revisions in the oil regulations if the need for the oil underlying the sanctuary area

A Wednesday morning fire did an estimated $500,000 damage to a downtown Santa Barbara office building.

S.B. Fire Results in Injuries

By PATRICIA TURNER
An office building fire in downtown Santa Barbara early Wednesday morning resulted in two minor injuries and property damage estimated at $500,000.

The fire broke out at approximately 2:15 a.m. at 910 Philenda, one block west of Milpas Ave. Six fire engines and 25 fireman fought the fire, which was brought under control by 3:30 a.m. Engines and fireman were brought in from Montecito to man the Santa Barbara station in case of additional fire reports.

Two fireman received minor injuries while combating the blaze. Captain Bob Markman was taken to Cottage Hospital for the treatment of an injured elbow and released, while Acting Captain Dick Johnson was treated for minor burns at the scene.

Damage to the property included the complete destruction of four of the six commercial offices within the building. The loss of several copy machines and mechanical equipment in one of the offices was responsible for the large damage estimate. Two of the offices received only minor damage.

According to a co-owner of the building, Bill Foerschler, "Most of the half-a-million dollars of damage was to property belonging to the tenants. The building damage was not over $100,000."

HEADLINERS

The Nation

The State

SACRAMENTO—The state Senate has approved a bill providing that new housing along California's coastline would no longer have to include low and moderate income units. The measure by Senator Marz Garcia is sponsored by the building industry and some coastal cities. It would require moderately priced coastal housing only when that type of housing was displaced by new development. The Menlo Park Republican's bill appears to have little chance of final passage because an assembly committee has already killed similar legislation. But the 22-7 vote that sent the bill to the assembly yesterday is a sign of displeasure with the state coastal commission. During debate, Republican Senator Jim Nielsen of Woodland called the commission "a bureaucracy gone completely wild."

BERKELEY—A University of California business professor says corporations are expected to contribute some $25-$30 million to political causes nationwide during 1980. That would be more than double the contributions of organized labor. Edwin Epstein of the Berkeley Business School says the Political Action Committee of American corporations will spend between $15- and $18 million on congressional campaigns alone. Citing his research, he says organized labor is expected to spend approximately $12 million on political races, adding that labor groups also contribute time and volunteer staffers to the campaigns.

LOS ANGELES—County Board of Supervisors voted unanimously to oppose construction of a new airport off Los Angeles-Long Beach harbors until Orange County develops an air travel plan. Supervisor Yvonne Braithwaite Burke authored the motion, saying that Orange County officials oppose the construction of new airport facilities in their own county, and said Los Angeles County residents should oppose any facility designed to meet the air travel needs of Orange County. Burke said local residents "are rightly concerned that they are asked to bear all the ground transportation and air quality impacts associated with such an offshore airport."

WASHINGTON—The administration asked Congress today to give the U.S. Olympic Committee $10 million to help make up for the loss caused by the boycott of the Moscow Games. A commerce department official said the USOC expects to lose up to $7.5 million in individual and corporate contributions, because of the boycott. The boycott is, of course, to protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. The Soviet Action was a topic of discussion at a NATO meeting in Brussels today. Our West European allies went along with President Carter's call for a stronger anti-Soviet stance. They pledged to increase military spending and assume more of the burden for their own defense so the United States can devote more attention to Southwest Asia.

WASHINGTON—Ronald Reagan's dream of winning the White House is looking brighter all the time. His twin victories in the Nebraska and Maryland primaries yesterday mean he's now just 177 delegates away from the Republican nomination. Opponent George Bush would have to win just about all the remaining delegates to catch Reagan. If Reagan were to face President Carter and independent John Anderson in an election today, a new poll says the former California governor would win. The "ABC News-Harris Survey" found that 39 percent of the Americans likely to vote would cast ballots for Reagan, 33 percent would go for Carter and 23 percent would pick Anderson. Despite the great odds against him, George Bush continued his campaign in Oregon today, vowing to keep on fighting. Reagan thinks that's a good idea. Campaigning in Michigan, yesterday Reagan said he's inclined to believe the competition is healthy for the party.

NEW YORK—A Vincent van Gogh oil painting entitled "Garden of the Poet" was sold at auction for $5.2 million Tuesday, the highest price ever paid for an impressionist painting, according to Christie's auction house. It was also the highest price ever paid for a painting auctioned in the United States, breaking the record set Monday when a Picasso was sold here for $3 million, and was a record for any work not done by an Old Master, Christie's said.

The World

LONDON—Iranian President Bani-Sadr says more than 90 American agents have landed throughout Iran recently. And he says they're expected to carry out sabotage and "stage plots against Iran in the next two weeks." Bani-Sadr also said 19 Iranians have been sent from the United States to guide sabotage efforts against Iran. Bani-Sadr's comments in a Tehran radio interview came hours after the Iranian Prosecutor-General's office said two American men are being held in a Tehran prison, in connection with the abortive U.S. military attempt to free the American hostages in Iran. An official says the two are in Evin Prison — where American free-lance writer Cynthia Dwyer of Buffalo, New York is also being held.

NAIROBI, Kenya—Uganda's 390-day experiment in civilian government was over Tuesday and a six-man military commission, the country's fourth government in 13 months appeared ready to set the East African nation on a socialistic course. The new Ugandan rulers are followers of Milton Obote, 56, ousted as president by Idi Amin in 1971. Obote, who ran a repressive socialist regime, has lived in exile in Tanzania for nine years. Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere, whose troops drove Amin from power, is intent on returning Obote to the Ugandan presidency. Obote said Monday in Dar es Salaam that he played no part in the military takeover, but Western diplomats here believe that the coup was part of an effort to return him to power.

BRUSSELS—The United States has begun withdrawing 1,000 nuclear warheads from Europe, a diplomat from a North Atlantic Treaty Organization country said Tuesday. Washington's intention to make this cut in its stockpile of about 7,000 nuclear warheads in Europe was announced in December, when NATO decided to deploy about 572 modern Pershing II and cruise missiles in Western Europe starting in 1983. The diplomat's disclosure was the first public indication that the cutback had begun. A statement issued at the end of NATO's ministerial council meeting in December said the unilateral withdrawal would be part of the alliance's decision to modernize its nuclear arsenal in Europe. NATO sources previously said that the 1,000 warheads to be withdrawn are mostly outdated nuclear mines and shells.

Daily Nexus Recycling Program Established by E.S. Students

By MARK MCADAMS

A new recycling program for the Daily Nexus, sponsored by the Environmental Studies Student Association, is currently in the planning stages and should be established in June.

Five receptacles will be located at the library, the Arbor, North Hall, Buchanan Hall, and the UCen when the project is completed.

"The advantage to recycling the Nexus is not so much that it would be cost effective because there is mixed sentiment on that issue. It is important that it is on campus allowing students access to recycling," said Rom Pembleton, coordinator of the project effort. "If the program develops, it could very well become a cost effective situation where it actually generates revenue."

According to Pembleton, the upcoming program will combine with the dorms' current recycling effort which is sponsored and administered by the Resident Hall Association and the Community Service Organization.

Currently, the CSO's check the receptacles located at each of the dorms about twice a week, according to Pembleton. They also transport the collected newspaper and aluminum to SUNRAE's Isla Vista Recycling Center.

"It has not been going as well as we would like to see it because participation has not been as high as anticipated. I want to re-emphasize the fact that there are currently recycling facilities on campus in the dorms," said Pembleton.

Pembleton and others are also involved in a survey which is studying the feasibility of an office paper recycling program.

The two-week survey will involve the Environmental Studies Department, the Biology Department, the Daily Nexus, the Office of Housing and Residential Services, the Office of Student Life, and Cheadle Hall's Information Office.

According to Pembleton, such a project is important because it can generate a great deal of revenue if run properly.

"The office workers are very responsive. They have come up to me and said, 'Well it is about time that it is being done, I am glad that someone is finally working at it.'"

Recycling efforts began because nothing was being done to recycle office paper and the Nexus. Pembleton, who is a transfer student from UCLA, said that UCLA was used as a model because it has had a very comprehensive and effective recycling program for nine years.

"I know that individual students, if given the opportunity, will cooperate with our program," said Pembleton.

Campaign Violations

The majority of other complaints filed were for minor violations, such as sign posting. Many candidates did not restrict their advertising to space on campus kiosks which were reserved for such purposes.

Charges of illegal campaigning on election day were also made. According to A.S. election by-laws, campaigning is illegal if done within 50 feet of polling places while balloting is taking place. While warnings were, for the most part, enough to stop such activities, the committee "did have to file some violations," said Hankin.

In addition to explicit rule violations, a number of campaign tactics were employed that, although not illegal, were the subject of controversy because they were of questionable taste.

For example, a flyer "warning" sororities and fraternities of possible consequences to them should Tibby Rothman be elected A.S. president.

The flyer, distributed by "Friends of Sherry Studley," accused Rothman of being "hypocritical" and a "hot-headed radical." The flyer also alleged that while a member of Finance Board, Rothman assumed a strong anti-Greek stance.

Studley, Rothman's opponent in the run-off, denied authorizing the advertisement. A.S. External President Brian McDonald did admit taking part in the writing and distribution of the flyer. "I felt it was misleading the way she (Rothman) acted and I thought people should know about it. But, in retrospect, it was done in a hurry and that was probably not the best way to word it," McDonald added. "As far as I know there was no violation."

While acknowledging that many improprieties existed in the election campaigns, Studley commented, "I ran a clean campaign, it was a fair fight from my end and from Tibby's end." McDonald disagreed. "The general mood of the campaign was not very good."

IVCC Positions Available

Today is the final day to file petitions for seats on the Isla Vista Community Council in the upcoming election.

Three at-large positions and the District Five position are open to prospective candidates. The at-large positions involve representation of Isla Vista in general, while District Five representation include the area extending west from UCSB to Camino Pescadero and south to Trigo Road bordering on the Embarcadero loop. Candidates must live in District Five to qualify for candidacy.

District Five is a powerful district in need of strong leadership, according to IVCC Public Information Officer Dave Hefferman.

"The apathy so far has been strongly on the part of a pull between the students living in I.V. and an in-and-out basis and the people who have been living there for a long time. We need someone responsible for what changes take place, someone who can act on a growing concern for the needs of their community," Hefferman said.

Hefferman added that IVCC needs volunteers to work the polls for a couple of the IVCC elections on June 3.

Petitions for IVCC positions are available at the I.V. Town Hall at 966 Embarcadero. For more information, call 968-8000.

Bahama

A fairly large international controversy has developed over Monday's Mig attack on a Bahamian patrol boat. The Cubans gave the reason that they believed it to have been "a pirate ship."

Such international attacks cannot be tolerated in any situation. There was no reason to fire on an undefended patrol ship, and such actions can only be seen as openly hostile.

Cuba has had its share of international events lately as it is, with the mass migration off of the small Caribbean island to Florida. The exodus still continues from Castro.

We hope that Cuba will soon realize that such actions are not only unnecessary but also totally wrong. In no case should any nation attack a nation which has no harmful intentions upon it. These recent acts seem to point to a renewed hostility with Cuba and Castro.

We are angered at this warlike attack, and feel that Cuba cannot continue in such a fashion. We hope Cuba will soon realize its mistakes.

Cleaning

Dangerous chemicals are becoming more and more evident in our society. The real problem, is not, however, only the chemicals, but also where to store such toxic chemicals once we are done with them.

Chemical dumps have begun to cause more and more environmental damage as time goes by. In the last several years, the dumps have been traced to many cases of cancer and other diseases in the people living near them. Recently, some ray of hope has come on this otherwise bleak scene, with the House Commerce Committee approving a "superfund" which will finance the eventual cleaning up of the hazardous chemicals and other waste which has slowly built up over the years.

The $600 million, four-year cleanup would relocate dangerous chemicals to one, well-monitored region.

We applaud this action, and hope that it will do as well on the House floor. Such action on these dangerous materials has been needed a good long time. Now, perhaps, we will see the first in a long series of bills designed to protect the environment and people from such dangerous chemicals.

Such dangerous chemicals, if unchecked, eventually will devastate the environment and tragically affect thousands of people. We applaud this vote and hope that such concern will continue to be felt by our legislators.

Budget?

The economy of late has been pretty inconsistent. Interest rates rising and suddenly dropping, inflation and prices running rampant. To try and stabilize things a bit, the Senate drafted a balanced budget this week.

It is not an easy task; the budget hasn't been balanced for 12 years, and so the feat is even more impressive. At the same time, it looks like America may be going into "reduced expectations" soon in the future.

In the approved budget there is no surplus, no oil fee, and perhaps the one which will hit first, no more mail service on Saturday.

We applaud the action. It has been a step which has been needed for quite some time. We can only hope, however, that such cuts will not adversely affect the nation.

One other disturbing note was that the military outlay was one of the two highest figures on the entire budget. The current international situation has made it much easier to get such programs through, and the military has taken advantage of it.

We feel that a close examination of this budget be given by the legislators of this country. We must ask ourselves if such spending is truly necessary. It might be that it was not needed at all. Other programs which may need the funds are going to be cut due to this massive allocation. A long hard look must be given.

Books to Not Read

WASHINGTON—From time to time—about once a year actually—someone asks me if I will publish a collection of my columns, but the truth is that I would prefer to publish something else. I call it the Bedside Cohen. It will contain the one or two pages I have read in the books that everyone else has read all the way through. My favorite is Moby Dick.

I have read the first couple of pages of Moby Dick about 102 times. I have it memorized: "Call me Ishmael, etc." Call him anything you want. I cannot get much past that point. I know it's a classic, and I know it's terrific and I must say that I really liked the movie. But I cannot read the book. The first two pages go into The Bedside Cohen.

Next, I will have selections from terrific books I have read just for the dirty parts. The first, just for nostalgia's sake, will be the cellar scene in A Stone For Danny Fisher, my first "dirty" book. It is in this scene that Danny, on his bar mitzvah as I recall, got some girl in the basement and did certain things. I read this scene 55 times before my own bar mitzvah, where I had to settle for Baked Alaska.

Next comes the very last page of Ulysses, a book I have never read about four times. This is the famous scene in which the word "yes" is used over and over again and from which I have formed my unshakeable opinion that James Joyce is a great writer. He is even better in Finnegan's Wake, a book I have not read about twice. That was more than enough.

My dirty section proceeds with about 14 scattered pages from Lady Chatterley's Lover, and about 12 pages from the collected works of Henry Miller who, I reluctantly concluded after a lot of page turning, has a wholly undeserved reputation as a dirty writer. The Bedside Cohen would include, though, the scene in the Paris lavatory and one page from the Good Earth which seemed awfully gamey back in high school, as did, for that matter, all references to the Non-Intercourse Act of 1806 and the lyrics to the Gilbert and Sullivan song about willows. Life was simpler then.

My book will also include one page from The Prophet, a book read by all of my girlfriends but never by me, and Man's Fate, which I have not read about a dozen times. Along with Moby Dick, this is the book I buy before most vacations. I have about ten copies of it scattered around the house and may single-handedly turn it into a best seller.

I will include the wonderful first chapter of Pride and Prejudice, which everyone has told me may be the best book ever written. I know the beginning quite well and I now have it in three versions. I like it fine and can't for the life of me figure out why I don't read on.

I will also include one page from every book written by John Le Carre, all of which I have not read at least once. Ditto Catch-22, which I have not read three times, but which I quote all the time. The Bedside Cohen will also include short selections from the poetry of Keats, Shelley and Wordsworth, all of whom I repeatedly did not read in high school. I will have a bit of Aristotle, the Marshall McLuhan of his time. I'm sure once he is understood, his reputation will suffer.

I want some Edmund Burke who is quoted by all conservative columnists and a little bit from Thoreau who is the darling of my side of the aisle. I haven't been reading them both for some 20 years now. I will call Tolstoyevsky, a major Russian writer who writes dreary books of massive length, only some of which have been turned into what are called major motion pictures. I have not read War and Peace several times, which is about the number of times I have not read the Brothers Karamazov. I have read some of the others, though, and recommend them wholeheartedly.

Back to books. My collection will include a page from the Tom Sawyer I have never read and the Huck Finn I have never read and also the last page of Gone With the Wind ("Frankly my dear...") For journalists, I will include a little Mencken I never read and some Lincoln Steffens I never want to read. I will include the first two or three pages of Bleak House by Dickens which are absolutely brilliant and timeless and which, alas, is all that I have ever read of that wonderful book. I have, though, not read it several times.

The Bedside Cohen concludes with the first line of Love Story ("What can you say about a 25-year-old girl who died?"), not because I'm ashamed I never read it, but because I'm ashamed I did.

Solidarity

Editor, Daily Nexus:

When I was an anti-war marcher in the '60s, my father complained to me that what bothered him about the movement was its self-righteousness. Being blinded by the certainty of my rightness, this criticism did not bother me then, but it returns to mind as I see the anti-draft marchers of today.

It is easy to say one is against war. It is easy to despise those who seem by their support of the military to be "for" war.

Students today face a situation completely different from that of the '60s. Today the United States is not intervening in Vietnam or anywhere else; today the world's aggressive imperial power is the Soviet Union. They are much more ruthless and much less principled than we ever were, at least in this century, and opposition by American citizens to American weapons development and American military rearming is likely to be seen by the Soviets as evidence that we are vulnerable and divided. When they notice that many are willing to denounce as "reckless militarism" even our half-hearted and tentative attempt to rescue our innocent countrymen in Iran, can we be surprised if they decide to push us while they can? Ironically, this image of weakness places us in really serious danger of a world war initiated by the Soviets, who may feel they will never have a better chance. Students must go beyond repeating slogans that are in themselves unopposable, e.g., "no more war," and ask if their actions might not be helping to create the conditions for the occurrence of that final disaster.

Burn It! Down!

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I say burn the ROTC building! The military was responsible for Vietnam, and shall be held responsible for all future Vietnams. And who is to say that I should be held responsible for serving in my own country's defense, by registering for the draft? I say each person for himself; after all, that is what our present society is all about.

Furthermore, let's rid ourself of the entire military system, because I'm sure that all of the other nice countries in the world would be more than happy to treat the U.S. with equal respect whether or not we had the muscle to support our beliefs. I mean, look at the current world situation. Everyone seems to get along by just keeping a sense of what is fair and just, right and moral, noble and humane.

On second thought, maybe the military can serve an important function in society. No, that wouldn't be true, because all of mankind is basically peaceful—we don't need the military when communication is the key. Well, all I know is let's burn the ROTC building. And while we're at it, let's burn the bank again in the name of "popular feelings of protest."

Pure Bull

Editor, Daily Nexus:

Mr. Hubenthal draws a provocative and fertile analogy in equating socialism to "a crock of what the cows left in the pasture." To people in developing nations, cow manure is a valuable commodity, which one can use for cooking or heating (instead of expensive, hard to get oil or wood), or which serves as fertilizer for nutrient poor, all-important agricultural fields (instead of unaffordable imported fertilizers). The dearth of manure can result in poor harvests, for priority is given to its use as a fuel. We can thus conclude that for these people more manure must be better. From your analogy, Mr. Hubenthal, one can only conclude that you believe socialism is (or at least should be) highly regarded in the Third World and is desired in greater quantities by its people. Thank you for clarifying your views on this subject by such an apt and meaningful simile. It is a strong statement that the socialist philosophy warrants serious investigation. Perhaps those who believe in it are not convinced that they have "cornered the market" on worthwhile political-economic theories.

WOMENWISE

Historically, the Chicano family has been patriarchal and authoritarian. Economic, social and political leadership in our communities traditionally has been based on the male. All that has been traditional is now changing for La Chicana, just as it has been changing for all women. How much is changing and how it is changing concerns all of us.

Who is La Chicana here at UCSB and in the communities we come from? She may be of Mexican, Puerto Rican, European Spanish, Central or South American descent or a combination of any. (Identifying oneself as "La Chicana" is not limited to women of Mexican descent born north or south of the border. This writer knows women from Central America and New York who consider themselves part of our group. For purposes of clarification, "La Chicana" shall include what some writers call "Hispanic." The figures given will include all women with Spanish surnames.)

According to the Bureau of Census, March 1977 in a population survey, over 12 million persons reported their origin or descent as Hispanic. Fifty-one percent (6,196,000) were women. Specifically, the Hispanic-origin population in the United States included about 7.2 million persons of Mexican origin, 1.8 million of Puerto Rican origin, 700,000 of Cuban origin, and about 2.4 million of Central or South American or other Hispanic origins. The largest concentration of Hispanics was in the five southwestern states of Texas, California, Arizona, Colorado and New Mexico as well as large numbers in the state of New York.

Chicanas share with every group in this country perplexing problems of diversity. She may have arrived very recently from Mexico or her ancestors may have been in this area since 1848. She may be rural, urban, poor, middle class. She might be a high school drop out, a Ph.D., a teacher, a professor, a saleswoman, a secretary, an attorney, or a migrant working the fields. Her roots are in the development of the Indian and Spanish culture, its languages and its histories. She also shares in the history and has participated in the development of this nation. Her part in the development of the Southwest is as vital an aspect of our national resources as any element given value.

Myths and stereotypes about Chicanas continue to abound because very few resources have ever been allocated or legitimate research done on or by Chicanas. But, that is changing. Chicanas from California to New York disagree with the position and images imposed on them. Their feelings concerning their strengths as women, their status within their homes and communities are currently under question by Chicanas themselves.

In a March 1977 survey it was reported that the median years of school for Chicanas of 14 years and older was 10.4. In that same year it was also reported that her median income was $3,700. Only about 6 percent achieve four or more years of college. It is true that she is a necessary part of the work force, but the occupations she is found in include the service area and clerical positions traditionally low paid. It is not just the Chicana motel maid striving to become housekeeper who has suffered discrimination. Her highly educated sisters have only recently been able to overcome the barriers of discrimination and have obtained positions of authority and policy levels in business, education, local, state and federal agencies. The efforts of these few who have succeeded have been extensive, laborious and frustrating.

If finding higher education an opportunity to participate more fully in directing the life she wants for herself, her family and her community has been a new adventure. She also has experienced unique problems upon entering the Anglo-dominated institutions of our society. The Chicana soon realizes that part of her education as a decision maker in society is to learn the behavior pattern of the dominating "culturally learned male role." This is another challenge to her individuality.

But too frequently, La Chicana is finding similar experiences while working on obtaining her college education.

La Chicana may be part of what the press has called "The Silent Minority" but look around and you will see that the days of silence are over. She is sitting in classes with you as a student. She is lecturing in different departments. And, is that professor a Chicana? Yes, she is here. And you can see her everywhere.

A Number One Energy Source

Intensity is Best Strategy for Frosh Helena Manset

By ERIC BIDNA

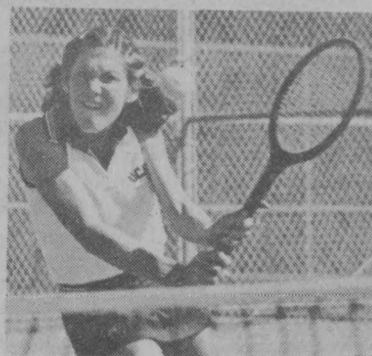

Intensity is the name of Helena Manset's game.

Manset (pronounced Mah-say), the superb number one UCSB women's tennis player, uses enough energy when hitting her cross-court forehand to light an entire city.

It is her do-or-die enthusiasm that carried this freshman from Santa Barbara into the number one spot on the women's team. That same energy carries her into the number 17 seed of the Regionals today at 9 a.m. at the Campus Courts against Cal State Fullerton's number three player, Karen Peterson.

"I'm ready for the Regionals," Manset said. "I'm in pretty good shape, although my strokes aren't exactly where I want them. I feel like I can outlast anyone, both mentally and physically, on the court."

Manset faces one of her toughest matches ever if she defeats Peterson. Her next opponent will probably be the second-seeded Alycia Moulton of Stanford. That match will take place at 11:30 this morning.

"I hope I can mentally outlast her. I feel I have a good chance to beat her. I know she's a big girl. I'm expecting her to hit hard and have a big serve. That's usually the pattern when you're big,"

Manset said.

With the Manset philosophy, she might be able to pull one of the biggest upsets today against the Stanford woman.

"The worst feeling I could have is if someone went up to me after a match and said 'you gave up.' I'm satisfied knowing I just gave my all," said Manset.

"I feel like I never give in. I always feel like I can do it even if it's their match point. Anything can happen: a lapse in their concentration or you might see a weakness in their game."

As a Santa Barbara (actually Montecito) product, Manset has had a long tradition of trying her hardest from her family experience.

When she was about 13 years old, a young Manset was playing three sports: tennis, volleyball, and basketball.

"I wanted to devote all my time to one sport and I chose tennis. My mom and dad have been real influential. They said, 'Do your best at it. Try your all at whatever you do.' I'm glad I made the choice for tennis."

Manset has been playing tennis since she was about seven, she said, although she did not start taking it seriously until she was 13.

Her stomping ground was the Knowlwood Tennis Club (ironically where Saturday's and Sunday's Regionals matches will be held), where she practiced three or four hours a day with the regulars at the club.

"I didn't do too well at the club. Then I started playing a net game. A lot of girls don't have a net game," claimed Manset.

Presently, Manset's best shot is her serve and volley game.

Manset said, "When my serve is on, I win a lot."

"Right now it looks like I'll be at UCSB for another four years, but I'll take it day by day."

"I'd never want to turn pro and all I have is tennis, but there is a good possibility I'll be pro someday," said Manset.

L.A. State Raps Two in Ninth

It was a long ride home for the Gaucho baseball team after they lost Tuesday, 8-6, in a final inning fluke to Cal State L.A.

In the bottom of the ninth inning, with two outs and the scored tied 6-6, L.A. hit a two-run homer off Dave Walsh to win the game.

Walt Combs started the game for UCSB, throwing seven and two-third innings. He collected nine strike-outs and gave up only two runs.

UCSB dominated the first five innings, scoring three runs and committing no errors. L.A. then rallied behind Gaucho reliever Glen Magpiong for four runs in the eighth inning to take the lead.

Dave Jorgensen led off the ninth inning, belting his fourth home run of the season. Grabbing three hits on the afternoon outing, Jorgensen raised his average to .344.

UCSB loaded the bases and walked in their final two runs of the day. The Gauchos gathered seven hits with their six runs and L.A. cracked ten hits for eight runs.

Glen Magpiong took the loss for the day and Mike Merk stole his 21st base of the year.

The loss ended any Gaucho hopes for an SCBA championship. They now hold a solid fifth place slot at 13-12 in league standings.

L.A. moves into fourth spot, posing the main challenge to UCSB. UCSB could move into L.A.'s place if they win their three contests. Any losses would put UCSB further down the ladder.

The Gauchos begin their final three-game series of the season against Fullerton on Friday at Campus Diamond. UCSB upset the former NCAA championships at home earlier this season.

UCSB winds up the season Saturday in Fullerton with a double-header.

"It took me years to complete the Critique of Pure Reason. When I did, the only logical thing to do was open a Grenzquell." —I. Kant

ROTC Students Win Various Awards in Spring Ceremony

By STEPHEN NASSTROM
Representatives from 15 distinguished organizations presented awards to 25 ROTC students for outstanding achievement at the Army ROTC Spring Award Ceremony on May 2. Cadet Lieutenant Colonel Bjorn A. Nilsen received the most prestigious award: the Society of Colonial Wars Sword Award. It is an official replica of an officer's sword of the Royal American Regiment. The society presents three swords every year in California, one each to an Army, Navy and Air Force cadet.

The sword is given in recognition of the senior cadet who has demonstrated overall excellence in military leadership, scholastic excellence and the personal qualities of character, presence and appearance.

Other awards included the Military Order of World Wars Award, received by Cadet Nancy Kelly; Daughters of the American Revolution Award presented to Cadet Robert Crummy; the Retired Officers Club of Santa Barbara Military Excellence Award given to Cadet Vicki Millan; and the Sons of the American Revolution Award awarded to Cadet Eleanor Conrad.

Lieutenant General Robert G. Gard Jr., president of the National Defense University in Washington D.C., was the guest of honor and main speaker at the ceremony. Gard spoke on the "challenge of the volunteer force." The challenge being that, in competing for man-power, the military must offer satisfying work and an environment of personal and professional development.

Gard also discussed the decline of military ability since 1959 and the importance of the ROTC as the supplier of 75 percent of the officer corps. "War rarely ennobles man," Gard stated, "but preparation for it does, in mental, moral and physical qualities."

According to Captain Les Sweigart of the UCSB Military

Science Department, more and more students are discussing service to their country. Sweigart sees a "shifting of moods" toward a "more aggressive spirit among our young people," a change from the "me" orientation of a few years ago to an "us" orientation, stated Sweigart.

Sweigart believes recent foreign affairs have played a significant role in pushing students toward the collective goal of making America a first rate nation again.

Unfortunately, several of the tenants do not possess insurance. "We're (the owners) trying to do what we can to help them," Foerschler said.

While the cause of the fire is unknown, the fire department doubts it was deliberate. "We do not have a cause," said Fire Marshal Gene Lindley. "However, we do not have any indication at this time that it was arson related."

An initial investigation of the scene of the fire failed to determine the cause of origin of the fire, but the fire department intends to continue the investigation.

"The fire scene investigation is completed...but we'll keep it as an open file," said Lindley.

Although the department is currently considering several possible causes, Lindley felt that arson was not one of them. "There was no sign of forcible entry. We have a theory, but it's not based on an arson fire." Lindley refused to speculate further on the blaze's origin for insurance reasons.

According to Lindley this fire is one of several commercial fires which have occurred in the last year in Santa Barbara.

A majority of these fires have occurred in the early morning hours and were set deliberately, Lindley added. "The Chrysler-Plymouth fire was very definitely arson," he said.

However, Lindley doubts that last night's fire was related to these cases of arson. "In most of the others we had very good indication of incendiary force," he said.

Defense Center and an environmental studies lecturer at UCSB. "The government has a general duty to preserve areas such as the coastline for present and future generations. This is part of the common law doctrine requiring the government to protect the general welfare.

"It's also a specific violation of the public trust, because this area was promised as a sanctuary," said McGinnes. "Now, out of political expediency, that promise is being broken."

increases and the drilling technology becomes environmentally safe.

The sanctuary, which would cover 1,252 square nautical miles, would be established by the Secretary of Commerce with the president's concurrence, and would not require congressional action.

Environmental activists, including representatives from the Sierra Club, the Scenic Shoreline Preservation Conference, and Friends of the Earth, have expressed disappointment at what they consider the proposal's denial of essential environmental protection for the sake of compromise with oil and other interests.

"It's a violation of the public trust, in two ways," said attorney Marc McGinnes, executive director of the Environmental
