Chancellor Hires Controversial CIA Officer as 'Visiting Fellow'

Official May Give Colloquia, Addresses

(Editors Note: The following is part one of a two-part article examining the controversy that led up to the appointment of CIA Officer George A. Chritton to UCSB's political science department.)

Embellished Central Intelligence Agency Officer George A. Chritton Jr. was appointed to the political science department on Friday by Chancellor Barbara Uehling, only one day after anti-CIA protesters were arrested in her office.

The controversial decision to retain Chritton was approved with a stipulation made by the political science department faculty that the CIA officer be considered a visiting fellow. Under the terms of the final agreement, Chritton would be unable to teach courses in his own. The 30-year veteran CIA administrator-operative will address individual classes and will not participate in colloquia.

Uehling said that her decision was based upon a recent political science department faculty recommendation and two guiding principles: the issue of free speech and the fact that normal university procedures were followed in Chritton’s case were followed.

However, the chancellor stressed that the main issue is “freedom of speech and the capacity of a university to provide for the expression of a broad range of ideas.”

“I firmly believe that a university must guarantee that differing points of view, especially those that are unpopular, can be heard and debated. To subject prospective appointees to political or ideological tests is antithetical to this essential purpose,” Uehling said.

Uehling cut Chritton’s proposed appointment by one year, allowing him to stay through the 1987-88 school year, but not through the 1988-89 year. She left open the possibility for Chritton to petition the university for a one-year extension to his position.

The chancellor’s decision was hailed as courageous by some and received bitterness by others. The issue has continued to generate debate campuswide, dividing students and faculty alike.

“I appreciate the chancellor’s decision,” said Chritton, who spoke publicly about his appointment for the first time Sunday. “The principle of the First Amendment has been upheld. My hope now would be that the volume of the rhetoric is lowered and the quality is raised.”

“The faculty of the department of political science fully supports the chancellor and the reason for her decision,” implied a press release issued by Cedric Robinson, chair of the political science department.

“The chancellor’s decision preserves the field so that the faculty, the students and the rest of the university community can begin to openly wrestle with the practical questions that the issue raises. I personally applaud her courage and integrity,” Robinson said in the prepared statement.

However, the question that Robinson personally poses — “How can a university, a place of free inquiry, coexist with a government or any other institution which operates under secrecy?” — still needs to be asked, he said late Sunday.

On Wednesday, in their quest to remove Chritton from campus, hope to ask the agent this question and many others. Meanwhile, they are “appalled at the chancellor’s blatant disrespect of student and faculty opinion,” said Rob Christiansen, a UCSB Associated Students Student Lobby official.

“I think that Mr. Chritton’s appointment violates the university’s own regulations regarding academic freedom,” A.S. Legislative Council Member Todd Gooch said. Gooch was one of the 38 protesters jailed after Thursday’s protest in Cheadle Hall.

“This isn’t a regular situation, a normal situation. I’m very concerned when the CIA begins to establish a presence on our university’s faculty. That would really go against the fundamental ideals of the university,” Gooch said.

UCSB's "eternal flame" monument was lit Friday afternoon by the mayor of Santa Barbara, Yalta. USSR, in a ceremony intended to help promote understanding between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Led by Chancellor Barbara Uehling, the ceremony was part of a five-day visit to the Santa Barbara area by Yalta Mayor Nikolai Sementchuk. The Soviet mayor's visit was primarily organized to consolidate a sister-city relationship between Santa Barbara and Yalta.

Thousands Participate to Make Homecoming Weekend Successful

They came back to UCSB this weekend, from as far away as New York, Washington and Boston.

Thousands of students, faculty, staff and alumni crowded the last three days of Homecoming events, making 1987's Homecoming the most-attended UCSB Homecoming since its reincarnation four years ago.

More than 4,000 revelers participated in this year's tailgate party and more than 8,700 people attended Saturday's football game in Harder Stadium. Overall, attendance was up between 10 percent and 20 percent at all activities, according to Alumni Association Executive Director Jack Kinney.

"Things have improved quite a bit over the past couple of years," Kinney said. "We're building momentum, all the programs are on the rise. We've got momentum, all the programs are on the rise. We're building momentum, all the programs are on the rise. We've got momentum, all the programs are on the rise. We're building momentum, all the programs are on the rise. BEIRUT, Lebanon — The Abu Nidal terrorist group said it fired two surface-to-surface missiles into Baghdad Sunday. Iraq reported that one missile hit a densely populated neighborhood, killing a large number of civilians.

The missiles, fired less than an hour apart during the evening, had struck the Iraqi capital and radio headquarters and the capital's central communications center.

On Sunday's twin attack was launched a few hours after an Israeli air raid killed a large number of Palestinians and Israeli troops aboard a Palestinian artillery pounded Safra and other southern Iraqi cities.

Planning of the campus and the lack of minority representation in the student body and faculty.

“We have a responsibility to provide opportunities to all races and both sexes,” Uehling said, ending her statement with a plea to alumni “to stay in touch with us and keep caring.”

Following the chancellor’s address, UCSB Alumni Association President Chuck Lorin presented the awards to the recipients.

Doiron received an award for his work as director of research at the Western Institute of Laser Treatment and Advanced Biomedical Instrumentation. His achievements have benefited many cancer patients, Lorin said.

Doiron felt “honored” to receive the award, saying “UCSB has come a long way since I was here. This campus has changed significantly since I came here and that’s to its benefit.”

Jeffries was honored for her work supervising and writing a season of hit scripts for the television series “Cagney and Lacey.”

The former Emmy Award nominee viewed the accolade as “a stamp of approval that I have arrived in the adult world and been a success.” Although Jeffries did not graduate from UCSB, she did spend three years here before transferring to UCLA, where she developed a distinct fondness for both institutions. Jeffries said that she began her writing career at UCLA, but at UCSB she “came of age socially, politically and even spiritually.”

“My seeds were sown at UCSB ... my family began here,” Jeffries remarked. Schoettler received her M.A. in 1969 and her Ph.D. in African history in 1973. Schoettler recounted an incident from her later years at UCSB, in which a professor told her that “it’s okay for you to get a Ph.D, you’re married and your husband can support you.” She said women can’t get jobs “... Well, I wanted to show him that women can, in fact, get jobs.”

After starting the Women’s Bank of Denver, Schoettler found herself featured as a cabinet member in Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm’s administration. In state government, a person can make a difference, Schoettler emphasized.

After the ceremony, many brunch participants quickly excused themselves to catch the tailgate party, which was

The chancellors then outlined their goals for the university, explaining that she wants to get to “know the external community.” She would also like to reorganize the administration. “It is quite critical to have the right team around me,” Uehling told the gathering, stressing that it is important to “get the job done and get on to what we’re really about – teaching students and research.”

Other items on Uehling’s agenda include the physical planning of the campus and the lack of minority representation in the student body and faculty.
UC BERKELEY — Condom vending machines will be installed in university-owned residence halls by spring in an effort to increase AIDS awareness. Several organizations recommended the installation of the vending machines, including Student Health Services and the Residential President’s Council.

The university has already received numerous offers from companies vying for the contract to install the vending machines. These machines will be placed in residence hall restrooms, “where people might feel comfortable to pick them up and where they won’t be offensive,” Assistant Director of Residents Jean Grech said.

UC DAVIS — The alternative newspaper, Third World Forum, has come under attack from members of the Associated Students who wish to cut the paper’s subsidy. Acting independently, Executive Council members Monica Fascher and Tony Niessan have tried twice to have the issue placed on the Nov. 18 ballot. The first attempt to cut the paper’s subsidy was ruled unconstitutional in a 5-4 vote. In a second attempt, Fascher and Niessan again failed as they tried to establish the subsidy cut as a congressional amendment to the UC Davis Executive Council’s constitution.

Los Angeles

UCLA — Due to pressure from students, four departments and two programs have started the UCLA Curriculum Integration Project in an attempt to increase the number of women’s and ethnic studies classes at UCLA. The program was founded by Edward Alpers, dean of honors for undergraduates, and Helen Astin, associated provost for the College of Letters and Science.

San Diego

UC SAN DIEGO — Dr. Herman Craig, a UCSD researcher at the Scripps Institute of Oceanography, was awarded the Vellenon Prize for geology. An oceanographer and geophysicist, Craig received a gold medal and $50,000.

Irvine

UC IRVINE — Condom vending machines were installed this month to encourage safe sex and to help combat AIDS. In other campus news, the UC Irvine Rainbow Festival, an event held Nov. 4 and 5 to promote cultural awareness, was called a success by participants, although organizers had hoped for a higher attendance.

Riverside

UC RIVERSIDE — A man charged with the shooting and attempted murder of a UC Riverside student pleaded not guilty Nov. 4. Michael Stroud, 30, has been charged with the shooting of sophomore Peter Jeter, who was wounded in the leg and is now listed in satisfactory condition. Jeter, a member of the university’s track team, said he had met Stroud in a bar and had accepted a ride home from him.

Santa Cruz

UC SANTA CRUZ — The UC Santa Cruz administration is presently battling several suits against the university’s planned building projects. Three UCSC students have charged that two building projects currently underway violate an environmental law.

In a separate but related suit, the city of Santa Cruz is using the university for other building practices. The suit expresses the city’s feeling that the university is growing too fast and is not controlling enrollment. Currently, the university has 9,121 students, a 900-student increase over last year and an overenrollment of 200. In addition, some faculty members and alumni are also threatening to sue the university over another planned building project.

In another aspect of the controversy, Chancellor Robert Stevens made incorrect statements concerning the lawsuits during a KCSC radio broadcast. Stevens incorrectly said the university had planned to build on an unused baseball field, but that the project “was held up due to litigation,” when actually the building project would have been limited regardless of the lawsuits. Stevens also incorrectly said the campus rent rates were competitive with those in the city of Santa Cruz, when in fact campus rates are several hundred dollars higher.

FLAME

Afterward, Uehling said that although “it would take many efforts to increase ... understanding,” the relighting of the eternal flame and the establishment of the sister-city relationship are positive moves toward this goal, in addition to bringing something in which the UCSB community could directly participate.

When asked about the possibility of UCSB faculty members or students visiting the Union, Uehling said that the sister-city relationship has been finalized. Uehling said this idea has not been discussed yet, but she feels optimistic about the possibility.

Several students at the ceremony expressed approval of the sister-city relationship. “I think it’s a good idea,” senior Mark Allen commented.

However, the Soviet mayor’s three-member delegation has encountered protesters who disapprove of Yalta as the choice for Santa Barbara’s sister-city. Many Eastern Europeans view Yalta, the location of a historic conference held in February 1945 between the United States, Great Britain and the Soviet Union, as a symbol of the United States’ betrayal of Eastern Europe. At the Yalta Conference, Franklin Roosevelt, Winston Churchill and Joseph Stalin agreed to allow the Soviet Union to have a “sphere of influence” in Eastern Europe.

Approximately 10 protesters attended the relighting ceremony. Many said they did not object to the relighting of the flame, rather, it is the establishment of the mayor of Yalta and the idea of Santa Barbara being Yalta’s sister-city that they oppose.

“We have no quarrel with the Russian people, but their Bolshevik government is very bad,” said Dr. Nikolay Altankov, a native of Bulgaria.

still going strong hours after the football game began. An estimated 3,000 people crowded Storke Field with barbecues and kgs to participate in pre- and post-game socializing, according to student Homecoming coordinator Linda Woodmansee. "It was a great turnout. It's the best we've had so far in the history of recent tailgaters... This is definitely a tradition to build on and it seems to be increasing," she said.

And, as tailgaters were partying on the field, football fans converged on Harder Stadium for the annual Homecoming game. The Gauchos defeated Cal Lutheran with five seconds remaining in the fourth quarter. The ending capped off an eventful day, alumni said.

But, many seemed content just to be back at UCSB, reminiscing about old times. "If you graduated before the bank burned, you're ancient history in this school," quipped Steve Cummings, a 1969 UCSB graduate who now heads the Ventura County Club of the Alumni Association.

Cummings, a former clarinet player in the Gaucho band, remembers the good ol' days, when the band sported 90 members. "We opened this place up during the '66 season," Cummings said. And, as members of one of the entries in the Not Ready for the Rosebowl Parade walked by, Cummings recognized the uniforms: "They look like they haven't been cleaned in 20 years."

They hadn't.

The Ventura Alumni Club, like others, is an organization of UCSB alumni that supports the association from various geographic areas across the United States. The clubs are of particular use to recent graduates, according to the Class of 1964's Andy Ancel, past president of the New York Metro Club. "If they don't know anybody else and they come out here, we can be of assistance," Ancel said. "A lot of graduating students are participating," he continued: "We put them in touch with different people."

Sober as a Judge

Today we see the members of the Baby Boom generation coming into power. People such as Ginsburg are from an era that questioned the values of the World War II generation. These are the people who were widely exposed to the "evils" of humanity and, instead of blindly accepting the principles of their parents, sought to find their own answers through experimentation. The clash of these two separate ideologies can now be witnessed in the attack on current political campaigns.

Members of the old-line administration are not terribly in touch with the reality of the situation. It appears that these conservatives are so shocked by the "immorality" of the younger politicians that they cannot see far enough to discuss the truly important issues. Important topics such as racism, poverty, world security and the deficit give way to "Have you ever covered thy neighbor's wife?" and "Have you ever smoked marijuana?"

It's time that the older generation realizes the inevitable. Values and morals in society change.

As Democratic presidential candidate Senator Albert Gore stated, "There is a difference between the way older Americans look at it and the way younger politicians that they cannot see far enough to discuss the truly important issues. Important topics such as racism, poverty, world security and the deficit give way to "Have you ever covered thy neighbor's wife?" and "Have you ever smoked marijuana?"

It's time that the older generation realizes the inevitable. Values and morals in society change.

There are a lot of people around in America who want to change things. For one reason or another, they perceive problems or threats in the course of recent history, and they are trying to address those problems. I am going to call these folks, as an aggregate, the progressive movement. I think it is obvious there is a problem at the moment. Lacking the broad spontaneous popular support it enjoyed during the last decade, the early '70s, the movement has lost in numbers to a large extent. There are a few, however, that are fighting on and, that going through this period of eclipse, they are trying to force the movement's members to rethink the assumptions, and that a new synthesis may emerge.

The progressive movement has its roots in a strong tradition of justice. Going back to Selma, back to the Abolitionists, even to the Founding Fathers and the original American revolutionaries, progressives were people who banded together to combat injustice and to defend themselves against the whole thrust of the movement. Beginning in the late '50s and early '60s, however, a new generation of people joined the ranks of those who were trying to effect change. These were the conservatives and the environmentalists, who had different ideas, different tactics, even a different way of looking at things. To those in this new branch of the movement, problems were seen differently. Justice and fairness were not overwhelming concern. Instead, the problems to be addressed were ones of balance, of competing future generations and for the delicate systems which underlie and support life. To vastly oversimplify things (as a historian, I usually try to avoid this kind of thing), the bimodal distribution was created, with those primarily concerned with the police at one end and those more worried about balance on the other.

This was far more than a schism, a difference of ideas. It was, and is, a difference in paradigms, in ways of perceiving the world. A good illustration of the ways in which the situation in Central America is seen by the two groups is how justice people see oppression as the main problem and tend to focus on the...

Editor, Daily Nexus,

This letter has two purposes. The first is to ask you to clarify what I read in the Daily Nexus Legislative Council's meeting on 11/04/87.

I was misquoted in Friday's Daily Nexus as saying that I knew of a funding "director of some sort," which I did not. THIS IS INCORRECT. What I said is that KCBS's General Manager, Malcolm, told me that he knew of the funding director one-and-a-half years ago, and that the rest of KCBS's Executive Committee (made up of student managers) were informed of possible funding problems JUST THREE WEEKS AGO. This is a much worse situation than my misquote implies. Any problems that directly affect the radio station's ability to stay on the air are of utmost importance. Who cares about a new record player if you're off the air and can't listen to music?

The second purpose of this letter is to state my opinion about the position of a full-time engineer at KCBS. Not only have we two independent reports on KCBS clearly concluded that a full-time engineer is necessary to the 24-hour functioning of the radio station, but as Production Director and a full-time student, I would have a lot more problems with the business activities of my job.

Simply put, I do not have the time to learn everything there is about my job. The ability to get help from a full-time engineer is extremely crucial. I cannot count the number of times I have gotten assistance from the 'in house' full-time engineer, and putting a part-time engineer in addition to hiring an engineering consultant would only make the problem from the functional, as well as the financial, standpoint.

I would like to ask the UCSB students to support us, as we support you. Staying on the air, and providing quality programming to UCSB, Santa Barbara, and the entire Tri County means a lot to me.

Bellomo Leads Way as Squad Heads into Season's Final Five Games

By Daniel Vasen
Sports Staff Writer

Having defeated their competitors in eight of their last nine matches, the UCSB women's volleyball team is giving the textbook example of how experience against big non-conference teams comes into play late in the season.

The 10-4 Gauchos defeated two more league opponents over the weekend, improving their overall record to 22-10. The Gauchos disposed of the Fresno State Bulldogs (3-11 in league, 8-18 overall) in four games, 15-8, 15-17, 15-9, 15-9. Then on Saturday, UCSB travelled south to defeat the San Diego State Aztecs (5-10, 10-16 overall) in four games, 15-11, 9-15, 15-9, 15-9.

Senior middle blocker Judy Bellomo led the Gaucho attack against Fresno, smashing in 31 kills for a .288 percentage, and accumulating 13 digs, three block assists and six block blocks. UCSB Head Coach Kathy Gregory said. "We have a big block, so if it is solid the next time we meet, the match might end differently than tonight."

The Aztecs were led by senior middle blocker Angelica Jackson, who had 16 kills, five digs, three block assists and one block solo.

Sophomore Amy Erben led SDSU defensively with 15 digs and she served three aces. Senior Melissa Stokes had 29 assists, but their offense was never in sync as they hit .100 percent as a team.

"UCSB has a good, hard hitting team but they are kind of small," Overstreet said. "We have a big block, so if it is solid the next time we meet, the match might end differently than tonight."

The Gauchos next opponent will be UC Irvine on Wednesday in Rob Gym at 8:00 p.m. The Anteaters are presently 4-4 in league and 9-10 overall. UCSB defeated Irvine in three games in their last meeting on Oct. 17.

"Our offensive line worked up on the final drive. They played with a lot of guts, and in a game like that, you've got to play with a lot of guts," said Q.B. Paul Wright. "Our defense did a stellar job today as they've done all season." On receiver Russell: "When you need something, they definitely played with a lot of poise, especially in the second half," said Kingsmen QB Tom Bond. "Their second half was very controlled, they knew what they had to do and they did it."

"There's nothin' like it, that's for sure. I'm speechless," Russell said afterwards. On his TD catch: "We'd been waiting all game to do it and that was the perfect time. I just ran the pattern, looked up and it was there."

"We were really pissed off before the game. (Labban) was talking, heckling and stuff, but they were a good team anyways," said senior linebacker Klaus Leitenbauer. "(Bonds) is a good scrubby, very slippery and hard to take down. He worked for the open spot and was hard to contain, definitely an asset to their team."

After the initial jubilation died, Warren was better able to put the game in proper perspective.

"Probably the toughest thing to overcome in our situation is the lack of tradition and lack of belief on the part of our players that they can call on the strength and solidity that comes from a long-time program," he noted. In terms of the game, we didn't have any players that were unscathed, and I think we were down on the standpoint that we just kept coming at them. Our kids are in a real good shape. It was UCSB's biggest win in a long time and one that will greatly benefit their football program in the long run, because it was the Homecoming game. The victory upped the Gauchos' record to 7-2, with tough Sonoma State on the slate for next week."
