

Graduation Gift Guide

A Nexus Supplement for Your Post-Degree Shopping Spree

June 8, 1995

Painting the Town Red on Little Dough

By Gringolet Rafalo

So, you've got the parents coming into town to observe your graduation, a noble event that you've worked hard for years to be a part of. Now that it's finally here, however, you are faced with a major crisis: What to do to entertain the folks?

While milking them for every penny they have on State Street in a grand "soon to be out in the world and will need some decent clothes" shopping spree is certainly a fun activity for you, Mom and Pops might not be enjoying themselves too much after the first four hours have passed and two credit cards have been maxed out. In a situation like this, you may find yourself scrambling to provide them with something to do that won't drain the pocketbook — but never fear!

Here, free of charge to any astute Nexus reader, is Gringolet's Graduation Guide to Guesting Gratis! Yes, even though Santa Barbara is an expensive hamlet, it offers a plethora of things to do that won't cost a cent, as long as you've got a vehicle to truck around in and a full tank of gas. Listed below are a few of 'em.

•The Beaches

After living on D.P. for the last three years, the

Yes, this could be you with your parents, strolling down the beach and sharing a unique moment with nature that none of you will ever forget. Awww.

mighty Pacific may not seem all that exciting to you anymore. However, for your hard-working folks who have been laboring ceaselessly to house you next to it, the ocean will probably be an appealing change of pace from the monotonous scenery San Bernardino or Lancaster offers.

Take this opportunity to stroll along Santa Barbara's beaches and let the parents take in the natural grandeur of our coast (dotted by the occasional offshore oil rig). On a clear day, you can see the magnificent features of the Channel Islands, and if you can remember back to living on campus freshman year, point out to where you can see the land masses and start rattling off names of various dorm buildings. This will make it seem like you really bothered to learn which isle is which in the last four years, and your folks will be impressed with your bogus knowledge of the community.

Not only are the beaches of Santa Barbara comparable in beauty to those of a remote, uncharted island in the South Pacific, but there's plenty of them. If you are downtown when the family decides to hit the sand, shell out a few bits and take the trolley down to Stearns Wharf, where East and West Beaches are there for the viewin'. Go down to the harbor and check out the assortment of sloops, or walk to the end of the pier. Have fun trying to explain why the sun seems to set in the north.

If you are closer to

DINING IN STYLE FOR GRADUATION

By Reynard Van Nguyen

The weather lately has been simply too gorgeous to spend any segment of the daytime hours indoors unless absolutely necessary. Magyar and I agreed upon this fact to the very depths of our souls. Moreover, this conviction penetrated deep into our emptied bellies. We needed to find a good restaurant that had patio dining, a view and that intangible essence that we know as ambience.

"Hey!" the thought hit me like Texas hail. "Let's get ourselves down to Papagallo's!"

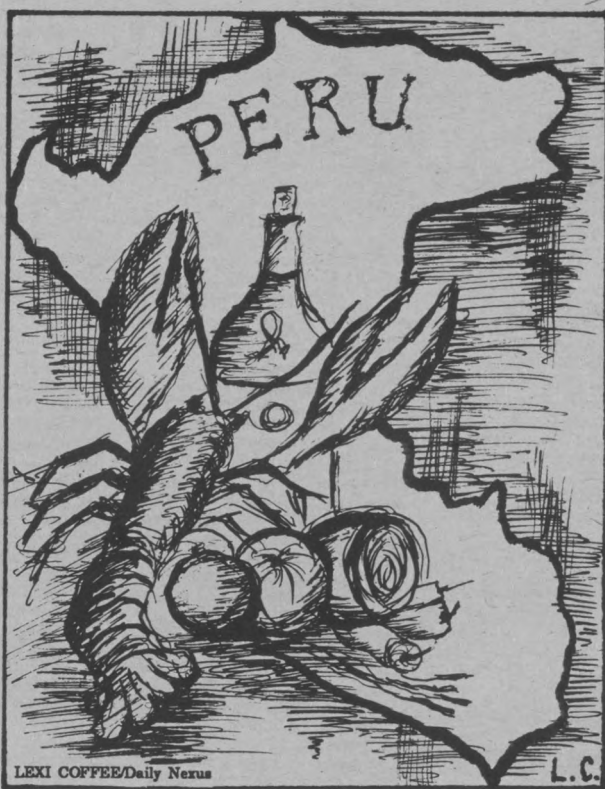

"We're there!" Magyar was into it. He knew, as did I, that when things just seem to be going their spiffiest, the only thing left to do is seek out adventurous dining to accompany, exemplify, augment and magnify your pleasure. Neither one of us had been to Papagallo's before, but the idea of fine Peruvian cuisine had been intriguing me for weeks. One thing Magyar knew was that, situated as it is on the rim of De La Guerra Plaza, there was the possibility of going al fresco. So we went.

When we got there, our glimmering anticipation was inflated to elation by the discovery that not only did Papagallo's have patio seating, but the aforementioned patio has a fountain. After being greeted by a radiant member of the Team Papagallo, the two of us headed straight for the table nearest the bubblingly musical cascade of water. Birds were chirping around us in the late afternoon sun, and we ordered two glasses (one each) of the house white wine. Upon its arrival, we found it to be a surprisingly spunky vintage.

Next we perused the menu. So many options leapt right off the page and into our appetites that it was quite a sweet vacillation for several minutes there. A chalkboard listed the fresh seafood specials, which included shrimp and scallop dishes. The menu (which offered prices in both American dollars and Peruvian soles) presented more bounty from the ocean, as well as pasta, chicken and beef. Our waitress, Kara, checked up on us from time to time, and ultimately I suggested that we get a gathering of appetizers rather than getting fixated on just one entrée each. This helped narrow the choices down somewhat.

"Hey, how about this Ocompa?" Magyar queried. It was as if he'd read my mind: This dish of roasted potatoes smothered in a peanut/lime sauce had me deeply intrigued, and I was eager to try it. Magyar also decided that we should order a sautéed fish dish that had caught his eye.

Then it was my turn. I was entertaining the idea of having the soft-shell crab in the garlic sauce. I was about to say as much when Magyar spoke up.

"The soft-shell crab looks good," he intoned. "I'm not kidding! It was as if mystical forces had conspired to make the occasion simply perfect. We placed our order eagerly, and Kara brought us some hot and crusty rolls with plenty of butter to get us going.

It is important at this point to clear up a few things. You might be thinking that Peruvian food might be some variation of the Mexican food ubiquitous throughout California. This is not so, for South American dishes reflect a strong Italian, as well as Spanish, influence. Let me illustrate.

When our food arrived, we were delighted to discover that each platter was

This is Your Last Chance!!!

You Have Two choices of what to do before summer begins...

Choice A...
Goto Woodstock's. It's the perfect place to hangout before, during and after finals. Happy hours are an excellent remedy for too much studying.

Choice B...
Don't go to Woodstock's, and wallow in freakish misery as all your friends laugh and throw rocks at you. In your final moments of consciousness, your last thought will be of all your friends downing beers at Woodstock's, talking about your failures.

Just a friendly reminder from Woodstock's Pizza.

GREAT GIFT GUIDELINES

By Justa Noe

I remember being at my friend Dave's house the morning after his bar mitzvah, sorting through the hundreds of presents that were lavished upon him by friends and family, critiquing and analyzing the thought process that went into buying each one. It was not only a fun experience, but a very educa-

a nice photo album or a new stereo just because it's become sorta cliché to do so. Trying to be different and memorable is often the gift-giver's downfall. For example, one of the stranger gifts Dave got for his bar mitzvah was an embroidery set. True, he'll never forget the couple who gave him the gift, but he would have much rather received a nice swerito at a nearby taco shop. That was a gift that didn't last too long.

The beauty of a durable gift is that the graduate won't be able to help but think of the giver every time s/he watches C-SPAN on the new television and composes great works with the new engraved pen, and will constantly be reminded of what a thoughtful gift giver thank-you note writing. I agree that people who refuse to write thank-yous are really rude and lame, but I ask you, the gift giver, to please remember one thing: If a grad doesn't write a thank-you note, refrain from giving a guilt trip. The whole idea of guilt trips negates what gift giving is supposed to symbolize. Unfortunately, Dave is a nice kid who Don't be afraid to buy your graduating loved one a bitchin' new stereo, such as the one above, just because it's what everybody else is buying their soon-to-be alum. Remember - you can't go wrong with cash!

tional one as well, as we learned a number of rules that we still apply today to the gift-giving process.

Being graduation time and all, and knowing that you might be in a bind trying to figure out just what the heck to get for that special grad, I figured I'd share three of Dave's and my rules.

The first rule of thumb when shopping for gifts is to look for the obvious. Don't avoid buying a gradater than a kit that showed him how to make his own.

Secondly, remember that useful, long-lasting gifts are almost always hits. Items that will be used often and for years to come by grads will be held near and dear. For example, someone who ignored this rule gave Dave a Whitesnake CD for his bar mitzvah. Minutes after he returned it to the Wherehouse, Dave was found chowing down on a burrito. This is why I recommend stocks as an idea. Stocks are good gifts because not only do they show that the giver has an ingenious side, but they are also practical and can feasibly last forever. Call your broker and ask for a recommendation of a solid stock and you can't miss.

The third rule of gift giving is not actually concerned with the giving process itself, but has to do with the arduous task of wrote thank-yous to everyone, so I can't use him as an example this time. But, the point is to give of yourself without seeking anything in return, right? Right. Good luck hunting!

Surviving The Ceremony

By Odessa Robinson

Probably the best part about walking — as in commencement — is parading down the streets of Isla Vista in those flowing black robes, carrying your goofy square hat (which in my case was two sizes too big). Well, the long procession across campus to the blue and yellow seats attractively arranged in front of the lagoon isn't bad either. But face it, that's just about as good as it gets.

The ceremony, beyond being uncomfortable due to the heavy, dark sheath covering your attire, is downright boring. Not to mention the pain in your neck that develops after spending several minutes attempting to locate family and friends in the expansive audience.

But before you can even get there you're herded like cattle into the Thunderdome where you take a last minute restroom break, attempt to fix the cap so it doesn't slide off again and line up. Then, you stand around for a while listening to warnings that those bottles of champagne and other intoxicants you've stashed need to go to another location. Then you stand some more.

Basically, it's a pretty trying experience. Don't get me wrong — it's worth it in the end if for no other reason than pleasing the parental units and other family members. But it's nothing that you're going to want to repeat again any time soon. It's kind of like going to Graceland — the best part is saying you did it.

However, there are a few things you can do to make the experience as enjoyable as possible.

First, arrange yourself around as many people you know as possible. Yeah, pretty basic, but conversations with fellow graduates is one of the few things that will keep you sane. Don't rule out bringing some sort of game.

Secondly, refrain from drinking any alcohol before the ceremony. This is mainly to prevent having to urinate during the middle of it all, which isn't really possible, and being left trying to "hold it" until all the names have been called. This only serves to drag out an already dragging event. Not to mention, this isn't one of the times in your life you want to be walking funny. Also, there's no better guarantee of a pounding headache than sitting out in the sun in constrictive black clothing as the buzz wears off.

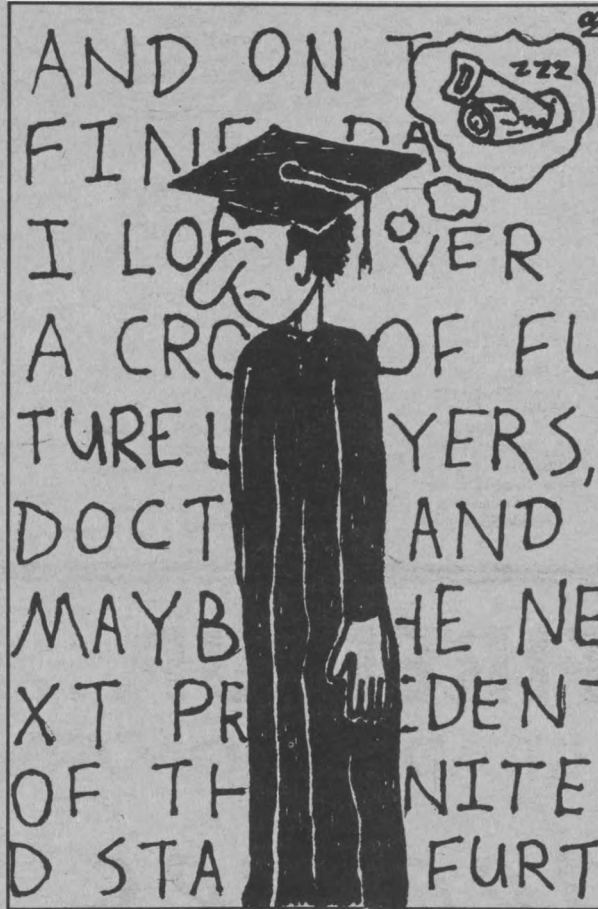

Be sure to warn the invited guests that no famous people will be speaking and it's likely to run on a bit. This will save on complaints and side comments later in the evening which is already stressed because you're rushing to meet the reservation time you set up two months ago. Along with everybody else. Be prepared for a slight traffic jam, remember there will be a lot of drivers who aren't from the area invading campus and Isla Vista. They'll also all be trying to leave at the same time. A little bit of warning could make all the difference.

Lastly, kick back and try to soak it all in. Or, if this proves more irritating then relaxing, drift off into your own world just like you did in that one really bad class you couldn't stand but had to take and think to yourself, "Thank God I'll never have to do that again."

Well, forget the last part, I guess you may have the same feeling out in the real world. But look at the bright side — at least someone will be paying you for being bored rather than you paying them. Congratulations.

Heading Out to See the World

By Hedly McFrisco

Postgraduate travel is much ballyhooed as a form of "broadening one's horizons." Oh sure, you're book smart by now. You've contemplated the complete work of Ezra Pound from nearly every angle and can apply Schrödinger's Equation to most subatomic processes without really thinking about it. You're so proud.

But then comes the perspective attack. "What good is any of it?" you ask yourself, feeling crowded by conventional wisdom. "I mean, if society collapses or I'm stuck on an island without a bank loan or something, what tools will I have to survive?" Your confidence falters. You find yourself sweating beneath your rented hat and gown, motor skills out the window on the day that some say marks your crossover into adulthood. You offer everyone a clammy, nervous handshake and wish Mom would put the camera down.

Fear not, graduates! Conventional wisdom, in all its infinite, well, wisdom, has provided a safety net for those "real world" jitters. To compensate for your ignorance of what's really out there, you will go out there. At least, you'll go to Europe. Part of it. And correct me if I'm wrong, but you'll go with nothin' but a backpack on your back and a rail pass in your pocket. Just you and your ego and maybe a Walkman and a few thousand American dollars in traveler's checks. And you'll go for a few months, maybe three or four, until the traveler's checks run out. I knew it!

Boy, I envy you. You're going to have a great time, and I know because I've done it. Don't worry about crime: If you've ever survived a week in L.A., you can live indefinitely in Europe, a land that still can't fathom our ridiculous gun culture. Also, bring a hat and mosquito repellent, and always carry a roll of toilet paper, lest you wind up having to use your map of Greece. And bring a couple of good books to whittle away the long hours you'll spend on a lonely, rattling train.

But please, do the Old World a favor and avoid becoming a cliché, specifically a cliché of the American-backpacking-through-Europe variety, one of the worst kinds (the German-backpacking-through-Europe variety can also get pretty bad, but there's nothing you can do about that). Granted, the simple act of traveling through Europe after graduation isn't the height of novelty, but never mind that, travel is worthwhile and enlightening. No, I'm speaking of the American travelers who, no matter how long they've been living in Barcelona, still look and act like they're in La Puente, putting fluorescent decals on their pick-ups and what-not.

Oh, the problem isn't just their appearance, but I'll start with that: college logo tank tops and sunglasses that cost more than an average Bulgarian's yearly wages. Most important, the shoes: While sturdiness is a virtue, ugly Americanness is not. I'm referring to MTV shoes like Nike Air Assault Something-or-Others, the kind Americans kill each other for.

If you are traveling to Europe this summer, remember to bring quality reading material to pass idle hours.

Imagine walking across the famous Charles Bridge in Prague, sharing its beauty with sojourners from around the world — the lighted arc of street-lamps glowing off a wide river below, navy blue in the twilight — when three guys wearing hightops that pump, flash, play music and have a special switch to go from "indoor" to "blacktop" come bouncing your way, talking loudly about "getting laid, Czech-style." I should warn you that in many Eastern Bloc countries it's legal to kill someone if they're wearing stupid shoes. Or acting stupid, for that matter.

Behavior is another point of interest. Many times, I've been given Europe's impression of American behavior, and no matter what country I'm in, the stereotype is the same, roughly that of a used-car salesman. We talk loud, slouch, wolf our food, etc.

We're pigs.

But I'm not going to discourage you from slouching or cramming baguettes into your face. There's nothing worthwhile or enlightening about that, but I'm not your parent. Much more offensive to Europeans — more so even than bad shoes — is the arrogant supposition that since everyone in the United States speaks English, so should the rest of the world. More than once I heard some American brat, frustrated because he wasn't being coddled like back home, scream, "Don't you speak any English?!" He may as well have asked, "Do you have any idea who you're dealing with? I'm an American!" In this country, that sort of thing gets people shot, but Europeans just disgustedly ignore the little whelps.

The trick, you see, is to blend in. Sure, no matter what you do, the natives will be able to pick you out immediately as an American, but there's nothing wrong with that, especially if you're trying to learn as much as possible about the culture you're traveling through. What's more, the Europeans will be incredibly polite (even the Parisians). But for Americans with bad shoes and complexes, nothing worthwhile or enlightening ever happens.

Since you know what and how, now the last point is where, and to this I say, "Doesn't matter." Go anywhere, anywhere at all, so long as you steer clear of McDonald's and Hilton hotels. You may, once or twice, get a bit homesick and therefore be tempted by a little down-home coo

Sweet Home Isla Vista when your clan craves a beach excursion, you could (if your folks happen to be particularly athletic and have the entire afternoon free) park the car down at Goleta Beach and walk on the sands from there to Ellwood Shores. A beautiful trek, to be sure — but watch out for that pesky tar!

•Lake Cachuma

Over the expansive Santa Ynez Mountains, which trap Santa Barbara between the ocean and their steep peaks, lies a great stretch of wilderness. Amongst this rampant nature lies Lake Cachuma, the reservoir that provides life-giving liquid to the county's populace.

A large and tranquil body of water, Cachuma is surrounded by picturesque parkland, complete with trails, trees, plants, birds, rocks and things. Once again, if your family feels up to a hike, then Lake Cachuma couldn't be a better spot to go. Pack a picnic lunch for the journey, dining in the midst of the forest like our ancestors did before micro-waves or Top Ramen.

If your family begins to miss civilization while at the lake but doesn't yet feel like returning to Santa Barbara, keep going down the long and winding road to Solvang, a town dedicated to the culture and spirit of Denmark. After an afternoon there, you'll learn more about the Danish than a doughnut baker. (Hah! Hah! Try that one on your dad for a big chuckle.)

•The Mission

Hundreds of years ago, religious men wandered up and down the California coast, building missions one day's horse ride apart from each other so that lonesome desperadoes could safely venture up toward Oregon from Mexico. Well, maybe it didn't happen exactly that way, but Santa Barbara is one of those cities blessed with a mission, and if you go there, you can learn the actual story of how and when it was built.

Not only is the Santa Barbara mission a historic landmark, it is also remarkably well cared for and a must-see for a frugal tourist. Although there is an admission price to get inside normally, there is none when they are performing services, so if you can convince a monk that Flag Day is a religious observance, you may be able to sneak in for free.

•On Campus

They've been paying for its construction and beautification for years, and yet your folks have probably never really seen UCSB for everything it has to offer. Set aside a day to show them around the campus by the sea. Share your excellent navigation abilities that only four years of searching for Girvetz 1006

The picturesque Santa Barbara Mission is one of the many local attractions you can visit with your parents while they're in town for no money down. A rich history is behind this architectural masterpiece, and you can trod upon the same ground trodden by ancient monks and cowboys. Or something.

could develop. Take your little brother on his first panty raid in one of the dorms. The possibilities and things to do on campus are limitless (well, OK, expansive), and with a little creativity they'll have a great time.

In closing, it's important to remember that no matter what you do with your parents, they'll be happy to be with you and proud of your accomplishments. With any luck, you can ride this pride all the way through summer while lounging on the couch, freeloading while "looking for work." Good luck!

Class of 1995

kin' or friendly room service, but be strong. Don't sell out to these bulwark travel companions, if not for ideological reasons then purely for aesthetics: It's such a cliché! Every walking American cliché in Europe — bad shorts, camera, brought their dog — will be eating at McDonald's and staying in Hiltons, so don't you do it (all right, maybe one cheeseburger a month, tops, but never stay at a Hilton).

Avoiding travel clichés is actually quite easy, but so many backpackers simply choose not to do it. If you don't care about the mental health of the Europeans you encounter, think about us back here in the ol' U.S. of A. We've all got a little pride in our country, you know.

well blanketed with its own sauce. We could tell simply by their visual textures that we were in for a treat of epic proportions. The fish was swimming in a mild salsa with onion wedges of the most gentle variety. The peanut sauce was somewhat reminiscent of Thai, but with a fruity undertone that cleansed the palate. The wine served this purpose as well.

ever, was the crab sauce. Succulent garlic flavor permeated the velvety concoction, and we had to request another round of rolls in order to ensure that we didn't miss a single drop of the ambrosia that fate had deigned to send our way. It was great.

Now, of course, I'll have to make Papagallo's a regular stop on my dining-out rotation. Odessa will probably kill me if I don't take her there, once she reads this. Hey, tell you what, I'll see you all down there and we can bask once again in the glory of Peru.

The masterpiece, how-

Escaping The Rat Race

Hey there mates, all hail the Class of '95. Congratulations! To celebrate let's shine all finals and head downtown to see desmond Dekker tonight at the Underground. Since this is the last one of these for the year, I gotta say, enjoy yourself — it's better that way. Have a great summer and also adieu Gloy. Quote of the Year: "When I was a junkie, I learned to ski and wrote Exile on Main Street." — Keith Richards
