Uehling Rethinks Academic Post

Chancellor Asks Crawford to Oversee Instruction, Budgetary Matters

By Joanna Frazier
Staff Writer

A week after meeting with faculty leaders to discuss charges that she neglects academic programs, Chancellor Barbara Uehling announced Tuesday plans to promote the university's chief academic officer to a post overseeing all campus operations.

Responding to complaints from faculty legislators that academic matters do not receive adequate attention, Uehling distributed a memo to the campus outlining a new executive vice chancellor post that will inflate the duties of academic affairs head Donald Crawford, who already currently serves as Uehling's second-in-command.

The chancellor did away with the executive structure when she arrived at the university six years ago.

"In this capacity, [Crawford] will serve as the chief operating officer of the campus and act both as my principal advisor and for me in my absence," Uehling's statement read. "He will be responsible for planning, budgeting, personnel actions, organization and resource allocation in all matters pertaining to instruction, research and academic programs, and academic personnel."

When Uehling eliminated the executive vice chancellor position and created the academic affairs slot in 1987, she cited the importance of academic planning for the move.

"Because I believe the academic function is so important, I'd like to make that a front-and-center position, a position that would take responsibility for the campus, should I become unavailable. ... This is the primary function of the university," she told faculty leaders just two months after she began serving as chancellor.

Some of the chancellor's critics said Tuesday that the move to restructure the academic administration, while a positive step, is a concession to a Faculty Legislature on the verge of voting "no confidence" in Uehling's ability to run the university.

Crawford, who Uehling hopes will move into the new post as soon as the UC Regents approve her decision, has served as vice chancellor for academic affairs since he came to the campus in July 1992 from the University of Wisconsin at Madison.

He has received a generally favorable review from faculty leaders, and some said he has been a competent leader and an excellent

Demoted Campus Cop Is a Sexual Harasser, Some Say

By Brooke Nelson

and Chris George

Amid allegations of misconduct, a former university police sergeant has returned to duty without his stripes after a six-month administrative leave.

Former Sgt. Christopher Profio left active duty in July and returned at the rank of officer Jan. 4, according to UCSB Personnel Director David Gonzales. Profio was on unpaid leave for the last 60 days of his absence from the department, Gonzales said.

Many individuals connected with the campus police department, all of whom spoke on the condition that their names not be used for this story, alleged that Profio's conduct on the job included incidents of sexual harassment and one instance of improperly possessing a gun.

An investigation regarding Profio was begun in July or August, Gonzales said. Police Chief John McPherson said he could not comment on personnel matters.

During a preliminary interview, Profio declined to comment on his return to the police force. Profio failed to return three phone calls during the past week and a half.

The Nexus could find no evidence linking the suspension or demotion to sexual harassment. Profio volunteered to take the demotion from sergeant to officer, sources said.

These sources said Profio's behavior has prompted numerous verbal and written complaints, and has had an influence on some employees' decisions to leave the department. Several sources said a sexual harassment complaint against Profio was filed by a female employee shortly before he went on leave.

One employee who resigned from a job close to the department this quarter cited Profio's return as a major reason for

Leg Council to Ask State to Reject Davies

By Kevin Carhart
Staff Writer

A bill calling for state legislators to reject San Diego lawyer John Davies as a candidate for the University of California Board of Regents will be considered at tonight's meeting of Associated Students Legislative Council.

The bill cites Davies' support for a $605-a-year student fee hike, and his backing of former UC President David Gardner's $2.4 million retirement package as reasons for the rebuke.

One of the bill's main arguments is that Davies' appointment does not demonstrate a board commitment to diversity so that the body will mirror its constituency.

But this allegation is unfair, according to Franz Wisner, a spokesman for Gov. Pete Wilson, who appoints regents before the state Senate votes on the nominees. "The governor has made two appointments to the regents — [Stephen] Nakashima and Davies," Wisner said. "Fifty percent of the governor's appointments have been minorities. Yet he is still being criticized."

Wisner defended Davies as the sole representative from that area. "Not only does the governor believe there should be diversity on the regents, he believes there should be geographic diversity. To deny Mr. Davies the position would be to remove a representative of San Diego from the board," he said.

"Davies is an outstanding candidate who has a wide array of experience and deserves to be confirmed on his background and qualifications," Wisner said.

The bill's author, Rep-at-Large Dave Ricks, was not at the meeting when it was tabled last week pending changes to the wording. He would not accept the amended bill, he said, if a line citing Davies' donation of $35,000 to Wilson's campaign was removed.

"A lot of times, people aren't willing to break from party lines," Ricks said, calling party loyalty a possible reason for objection to the bill. "I'm going to blow the whistle on corruption regardless of party. [Regent and State Assembly Speaker] Willie Brown is a liberal Democrat, but if he were in favor of fee hikes, I'd oppose him too."

Further opposition for Davies was brought to the foreground by Derrick Johnson, A.S.'s vice president for University of California Student Assn. Affairs, which has lobbied against Davis in the past.

"His confirmation would further the big business, big money, ignorant-on-student-issues regents," Johnson said.

Leg Council meets tonight at 6:30 in University Center Room 2.

At Economic Summit, Leaders Say State Must Help Itself

LOS ANGELES (AP)—With federal prescriptions promising little short-term help, California must try to find its own cures for a recession that has cost the state 750,000 jobs and its standing as the country's economic star, participants said as a state economic summit opened Tuesday.

The two-day conference, organized by Democratic Assembly Speaker Willie L. Brown Jr., underlined the extraordinary concerns that the long downturn has bred. Republican Gov. Pete Wilson joined his nemesis Brown, scores of politicians from both parties, business leaders and economists.

President Clinton called from Washington, saying the country can't fully recover from recession until California does. He pledged to work in partnership with state leaders so "California can once again be the beacon of hope for America and the world."

But while his plans for high-tech investment, health care reforms and retraining weapons workers may help the state in the long run, his higher taxes and defense cuts can only hurt in the short-term, most summit participants said.

Wilson and Brown said they hoped political prescriptions for some of California's problems may be at hand after years of gridlock. Brown has said he expects legislation to result; Wilson said the leaders owe Californians action, not just another talkfest.

"Is it more than just a pep rally? It remains to be seen," he said. "I hope it is."

Outside the meeting at the downtown Biltmore Hotel, picketers shouted complaints that workers compensation fraud wasn't being adequately addressed.

The issue is an extreme sore spot for California's small businesses, who pay among the country's highest premiums for insurance that gives injured workers some of the lowest benefits.

Wilson said Clinton's proposed $30 billion stimulus package, while some help, would do far less for California than easing the credit crunch. Regulators must ease demands on bankers so they will lend to builders and small businesses desperately in need of capital, Wilson said.

The governor said there is remarkable agreement on what is needed to fix California's economy in the many studies on the topic. Those include Wilson's own "Competitiveness Commission" and a Democratic counter-study headed by Assemblyman John Vasconcellos.

U.N. Officials Seek Aerial Surveys of Baghdad Sites

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP)—The U.N. plans to send more weapons inspectors to Baghdad and conduct aerial surveys of two sites where it suspects Saddam Hussein's government designed nuclear missiles.

The decision to challenge Saddam's ban on flights over Baghdad will test Iraqi compliance with U.N. Security Council terms for ending the Persian Gulf War. If Iraq refuses to comply, it could lead to President Clinton's first showdown with Saddam.

Tim Trevan, a spokesman for the U.N. Special Commission overseeing the destruction of Iraq's major weapons systems, said inspection teams had not flown over the capital so far out of respect for Iraqi sensitivities.

But "we have the right to fly over Baghdad," Trevan said in New York. "We will exercise that right when we have operational need to do so."

Pierce Corden, an American who is deputy chief of the Special Commission, declined to comment about possible flights over Baghdad. But he said three to four new teams of weapons inspectors would be coming to Baghdad soon.

"Unless there is a dramatic change in Baghdad's attitude, Iraq has a long way to go fulfilling all the Gulf War Security Council resolutions," said Corden, who was in Baghdad preparing a report on the commission's progress.

U.N. Aid Convoy Blocked; Serbian Offensive Reported

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP)—Serb militiamen and tanks battered two areas in western Sarajevo and blocked the main airport road Tuesday in a major escalation of fighting as residents tried to conserve dwindling food supplies.

On the border with Yugoslavia, Bosnian Serbs also blocked a U.N. aid convoy for a third straight day from getting to an area in eastern Bosnia. The Serbs allowed a second convoy to pass through the same checkpoint.

Bosnia's Muslims have become increasingly hostile to the U.N. peacekeeping and aid operations because of the failure to stop the war or get aid to Muslims trapped by Serb forces.

Sarajevo officials are refusing to distribute U.N. food in hopes of pressuring the United Nations.

Leaders of Bosnia's Muslim, Serb and Croat factions are to resume peace talks Friday at U.N. headquarters in New York.

Economic Plan Will Raise Taxes Without 'Raw Pain'

WASHINGTON (AP)—On the eve of addressing Congress, President Clinton tried to smooth the way Tuesday for an economic austerity plan that would impose higher taxes on families making more than $30,000 but reserve the biggest blow for Americans earning $100,000 or above.

"I think that when you see the whole program, it won't be raw pain," Clinton said. "I think most middle-class Americans, when they look at the costs plus the benefits, they're going to be much, much better off."

The stock market tumbled nearly 83 points on fears that higher taxes would short-circuit an economic revival and would not be accompanied by deep cuts in government spending.

Clinton shrugged off the drop, saying, "The people in the stock market have known in general all along what was going to be in the program and the stock market's gone up markedly since the election."

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole said the market was reacting to Clinton's speech Monday night. "Dropping like a rock," Dole said. "Hold on to your wallet."

The president will go before a joint session of Congress with a nationally televised speech at 9 p.m. EST Wednesday to explain details of his $500 billion plan of tax increases and spending cuts over four years.

Bank Examiners Faulted by Congressional Investigators

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congressional auditors said Tuesday they have found surprising weaknesses in the examinations of banks and savings institutions by federal regulators for safety and soundness.

Only one of 58 randomly selected banks and thrifts was adequately examined, the General Accounting Office said in reports prepared for the House Banking Committee.

"Our review of the examination process shows surprising weakness in this fundamental regulatory function, which many have assumed to be an effective deterrent to unsafe and unsound banking," said Charles A. Bowsher, the head of the GAO.

The GAO issued four reports — one each on the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, Federal Reserve Board, Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and Office of Thrift Supervision.

Three Friends Found Dead After Canyon Hiking Trip

PALM SPRINGS (AP)—A plunge down a natural water slide in a desert canyon led to the deaths of three hikers in an icy whirlpool.

One of the five young men on the Sunday outing became fatally trapped in the swirling water and two others died trying to rescue him, one of the hiking party's two survivors said Monday.

The tragedy occurred in Murray Canyon in a park on the Agua Caliente Indian Reservation south of Palm Springs. The stream was flowing swiftly because of heavy rains and snowmelt in the San Jacinto Mountains.

Killed were Steve Martin Lopez, 19, who was the first to become trapped, Clayton Wayne DeFrese, 21, and Charles W. Kikuchi, 20, all of Riverside.

"The only reason why Clayton and Charlie and I jumped in was to save Steve," Torchia said. "Charlie and Clayton both gave up their lives for their friend, and to me, that's the ultimate sacrifice."

The other survivor, John Eric Coffee, 22, of Riverside, hiked out of the canyon when his friends became trapped and brought back rescuers, but only found two bodies. The third body was found Monday. Torchia alone had managed to get out of the water and ran shirtless and barefoot for two hours until he reached help.

Maximum-Security Inmates Participate in Disturbance

FRESNO (AP)—Sheriff Steve Magarian said Tuesday he needs more jail guards in the wake of a riot in a maximum-security unit that injured 29 officers.

A correctional officer who was beaten and had his keys stolen was the only guard checking 83 prisoners on the fifth floor during Monday night's head count, Magarian said. Another officer was in a security area which inmates couldn't reach.

"We need more help in dealing with these hard-core inmates," the sheriff said.

As officer Dan Randolph opened a cell about 11:20 p.m. Monday, three inmates inside attacked him and took his keys, Magarian added. Randolph escaped but suffered a concussion.

Officers regained control in about an hour, but 20 of them were treated for smoke inhalation, and nine others required hospital treatment, Mims said. All were released later.

Board Refutes Landlord Horror Stories

By Aimee Lewis
Reporter

The mantra of complaints has become familiar to Community Housing Office Manager Roane Akchurin: "All landlords are evil." "We'll never get our security deposit back!" "Our apartment is so rundown and the landlord doesn't even care."

These concerns and others have prompted campus officials to give landlords and their student tenants a forum for addressing problems through a recently formed landlord/tenant advisory board.

"After hearing complaints on both sides, I figured there had to be something that could be done to better the communication between the two and help resolve disputes," said Akchurin.

The concept was developed a few years ago, but plans to establish a committee were formalized during Fall Quarter, Akchurin said.

Eve Lopez, a student peer advisor in the CHO and committee member, agreed that a method of dispelling misconceptions is key. "The biggest problem seems to be the belief on the tenants' part that all landlords are bad and other landlord myths," she said.

“The biggest problem seems to be the belief on the tenants' part that all landlords are bad and other landlord myths.”

Eve Lopez
CHO student peer advisor

The committee is made up of CHO personnel, student peer advisors, representatives from the Isla Vista Foot Patrol, members of Associated Students and other campus groups, residents of the R-1 single-family home district in west I.V. and other I.V. residents and landlords.

Studio Plaza Apartments property manager Mary Quaid, who has managed I.V. apartments for six years, cited several problems between landlords and her tenants, who are mostly students.

"Personally, I haven't experienced a lot of friction with my tenants but one problem seems to be the pervasive view by students that the landlord is the enemy out to get them, their money and to not respond to their needs. This simply isn't true of most landlords and this attitude prevents good communication between the two parties," she said.

The first priority at next month's committee meeting will be to change the name of the group, since some believe that the word landlord carries negative connotations, Akchurin said.

Another aim is also to educate tenants about the CHO and its services. "Many students don't know we exist until a problem arises. We want to get the word out so that students are aware of their rights and responsibilities even before a contract is signed," Akchurin explained.

Mutual responsibility is important, since tenants often assume that landlords are responsible for the upkeep and repair of I.V. dwellings. Renters may forget that they, too, have responsibilities, Akchurin said.

Annual video inspections, already used by the CHO, will be more widely advertised, Akchurin said. The committee is discussing drawing up a model lease that all tenants and landlords can agree upon and use to cut down on conflicts.

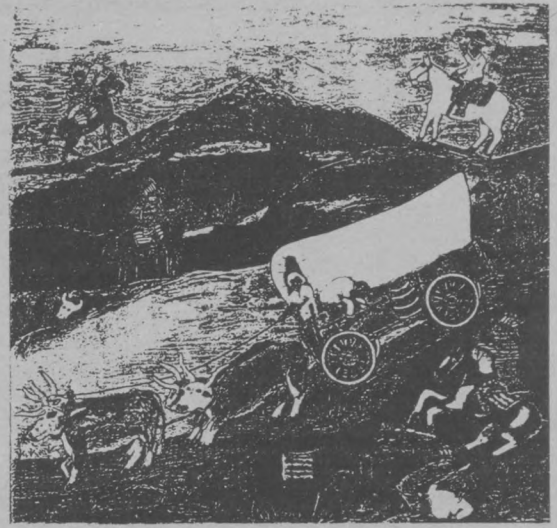

"The recent housing trends show that more students are opting to live in Goleta and Santa Barbara. This committee wants to find out why this is and implement plans to get students back into Isla Vista. By promoting the community through the committee, I.V. will hopefully begin to look more desirable for students," Akchurin said.

Beginning Feb. 22, the CHO will hold a two-week series of workshops about renting an apartment. Informational videotapes, discussions with landlords, question-and-answer sessions and a handbook will help students make the right choice when renting. There will also be information for veteran renters, Akchurin said.

A rental fair with landlords and photos of available housing will be held on March 1. "Don't panic! There is still a lot available, but get educated before you sign a contract so that there will be fewer unhappy tenants," Akchurin said.

Committee members agree that a rental advisory board will only help I.V. residents. "It is a needed process to put the students at ease. Most landlords treat their tenants as they would expect to be treated, with respect," Quaid said.

Ellwood Housing Talks to Go On

By Kimberly Epler
Staff Writer

The Santa Barbara County Board of Supervisors voted for continuances on most of its agenda items Tuesday, postponing a highly anticipated decision on a controversial housing development proposal near Ellwood Beach.

Southwest Diversified Inc. is seeking a Coastal Plan amendment to the Santa Barbara Specific Plan that will allow the construction of 161 dwellings with an additional 80-100 affordable homes on eight acres of county property.

An October County Planning Commission staff report recommended denial of the housing project because it would directly affect several environmentally sensitive habitats, including the Devereux Slough ecosystem, which is home to a fragile network of vernal pools.

The postponement appeal, made by Southwest Diversified representative Randall Fox, was met with disdain by several environmental activists who were not surprised by the company's actions.

"The developer requested the continuance because there isn't a full board to speak to ... especially with [5th District Supervisor] Mike Stoker gone," Save Ellwood Shores member Chris Lange said.

Stoker, who has voted for increased development in the past, was not at Tuesday's meeting. The board is slated to hear public discussion and make a final decision on the housing project on March 9.

Three other agenda items were deferred to a later date, including the Goleta cityhood ballot measure, acceptance of a grant for public health education and a car emissions control program.

A public hearing on the cityhood measure was put off until March 9 while supervisors consider County Administrator Kent Taylor's recommendation to request that the Local Agency Formation Commission evaluate the financial impacts of Goleta incorporation.

"There's no question that LAFCO and the county should work together on this," 2nd District Supervisor Tom Rogers said.

Santa Barbara County's high radon level made it the recipient of a $10,000 grant for public awareness education on the deadly gas. A movement to accept the funding was deferred for a week to determine the board's distribution authority.

"This is an issue we need to pay attention to in Santa Barbara," 1st District Supervisor Naomi Schwartz said.

A proposed old vehicle cleanup partnership program between the county and Chevron was delayed a week for further discussion. The project would pay $500 each to automobile owners who dispose of heavily smog-producing, pre-1975 cars through the program.

Ed Keller, an engineer for the Air Pollution Control District, estimates that local emission pollution would be reduced by 54 tons over a three-year period through the cleanup plan.

CAB Says 'Have a Heart' — Volunteer to Serve

In an effort to inform students of a multitude of volunteer opportunities in Santa Barbara County, Associated Students Community Affairs Board has set aside this week to encourage people to become involved with community service.

An annual event, Have a Heart Week provides students with volunteer information about homeless and hunger issues, job training, legal services, alcohol and drug abuse, child care and health.

"We set aside this week to recruit volunteers because so many people want to volunteer and say they've been meaning to do so, but they just don't get around to it. We make it easier for them to volunteer," said CAB member Scott Akin.

CAB tables in front of the University Center and the Arbor provide questionnaires asking people of their volunteer interests. In return for showing interest, prospective volunteers will have their names entered into a drawing for a pair of UCSB-UNLV men's basketball tickets.

"We get back to them and let them know about volunteer events," Akin said. "Most people are also directed to CAB, where they can look at the bulletin boards for what, where and when volunteer opportunities arise."

CAB, which works with over 200 agencies in the county, serves as a liaison between the UCSB community and the Santa Barbara and Goleta areas, said CAB Volunteer Recruiter and Have a Heart Co-Chair Susan Chang.

"We're hoping to attract about 200 students this week," Chang said. "We are not looking specifically into recruiting people, but to get out the information that their help is needed."

Junior Brittany Oates was one student attracted to CAB's recruitment efforts.

"I already do volunteer work at the Battered Women's Center, but I also want to get involved with the Rape Crisis Center or a hospital," she said. "I'm fortunate enough not to need to have a job while in college, and I feel I should do something."

quitting.

University employees interviewed for this story were worried that they would be fired if the university learned they spoke to reporters about Profio.

Sources said several employees have asked to have their schedules changed to avoid working with Profio.

"Women are reluctant to work with him," one source said.

"The atmosphere is so bad that we're willing to rearrange our whole lives not to work with the guy," another employee said.

Another individual close to the police department said Profio "sexualized the workplace" by showing an excessive amount of interest in the personal lives of female co-workers, and sometimes called them at home.

Allegations made to the Nexus charge that on several occasions Profio improperly ran the driver license numbers of women through a law enforcement computer. These sources said Profio used the computer to learn the identity and addresses of women.

Two sources in the campus community said Profio improperly kept a gun in his locker, while several others said he made unwanted advances at female employees and members of the public, and used abusive language when dealing with colleagues.

"I'm bummed that the department didn't protect everyone here. ... Getting rid of Profio would take care of it," one source said. "All the [other] cops are great cops. I've never once seen any of them pick up on any girl. You wouldn't find better cops anywhere."

However, one source said the complaints allegedly filed against Profio could be due more to personality conflicts than improper conduct. "A lot of their dislike of his personality clouds their ability to look at the real issues," the source said, adding, "It's an unfortunate working atmosphere."

Former dispatcher Naomi Benjamin, who left the department in August 1990, said in an interview from Santa Clara that she "never had a problem" with Profio. However, she said he is a "difficult" and "demanding" person to work with.

"Everyone had a different relationship with Profio," Benjamin said. She said she never witnessed him acting inappropriately on the job, but added, "He doesn't have a lot of respect for what others feel."

Another source said the university contributed to the problem by neglecting employees' concerns at the police department. "[Profio] works for an administration that wants the police department to be invisible and just take care of problems a few times a year, and then forget about them the rest of the time," a source in the law enforcement community said.

"The academic side of the administration finds it distasteful to deal with law enforcement," the source said.

Vice Chancellor of Administrative Services David Sheldon could not comment specifically on the allegations, but denied charges that the university ignores personnel problems. "I don't think that's true. I haven't seen any instance of people not caring and not taking these things seriously," Sheldon said.

According to UCSB Sexual Harassment Officer Paula Rudolph, harassment complaints can go through several avenues in the university, including her office, department managers and the Personnel Dept.

Kids Get Green Conscience

By Tracy Wells
Reporter

The Associated Students Environmental Affairs Board has established a pilot program this quarter to teach local children about the importance of the environment.

Under the program, 16 students — mostly environmental studies majors — will volunteer an hour of their time once a week to teach students at Ellwood Elementary School why it is important to be environmentally aware.

"The idea of the program is to give kids information on local environmental issues and then broaden it to a more global scope," said EAB Chair Spencer Crouch.

The students are taught a number of different themes, including the marine environment, endangered species, pollution, conservation and population.

This breakdown is a supplement to what they are already learning in the classroom. "The environment is something we talk about continually, the more they can get the better," said Melissa Colburn, a fifth grade teacher at Ellwood School.

The EAB looked into setting up programs at various schools and Ellwood School was the most responsive, Crouch said. "The school was really excited and wanted our students to participate fully," he said.

School, and volunteer without getting intern credit, Crouch said.

Many of the participating students hope to one day be teachers and see this as an opportunity to further their skills of working with children. "For some of us, our goal is to teach in the future, so we appreciate being able to lead the activities," said Lucinda Chrisman, a junior environmental studies major.

Geoffrey Green, another student teacher, also believes the program is good for both UCSB students and the children. "It gives college students a chance to be teachers and to pass on the knowledge of their professors to the younger students," the junior ES and biology major said.

Ellwood School children have been favorable to the pilot program, Colburn said. "The students are very responsive. They love to have someone new come in," she said.

The informality of the classroom sessions makes the program more enjoyable for the children, Green added. "They don't have to call us mister or misses. It's more like us being their big brothers and big sisters," he said.

UCSB volunteers went into the classrooms before the programs began to better understand the age group they would be working with.

Teaching the children about the environment is done through games that help illustrate the theme for that day. One game they use, for example, is about the ecosystem. Each student becomes a part of the ecosystem such as plants, animals or humans, and they learn what the relationship is between them all by being connected to a string that forms a web.

"It is a simple activity but it really helps to illustrate the concept," Crouch said.

Some of the activities planned include a recycling program, an art contest, tree planting for Earth Day and field trips.

Many UCSB students find the experience very rewarding. "I love hearing kids' opinions on the issue, and I am surprised at what they already know," Chrisman said.

The future of the program depends upon the success of this pilot, Green said. "I would like to see it become a standard portion of children's education, it has to start at this level."

The program is doing well so far, and is set to end by Dead Week. "There will be some trial and error, but we hope it will be a success," Chrisman said.

"I often tell people that I am an ex-drag queen, ex-hooker, ex-[intravenous] drug user, ex-high risk youth, and current 43 year-old postoperative transsexual woman who is HIV-positive," Norman said.

Transgenders are individuals who do not define their sex with the terms "male" and "female," said Richard Jenkins, Campus Activities Center advisor.

"They are trying to gain a definition and identity that is different from gay, lesbians, bisexuals and heterosexuals," he said. "They want a new identity and they want to give a voice to this new identity."

Transgenders include people who have undergone reassignment surgery without taking hormones; people who take hormones but have not undergone surgery; people who do not identify with either men or women; cross-dressers and hermaphrodites, Jenkins said.

"In indigenous American cultures, people possessed six, seven even infinite numbers of genders," Norman said. "Before the term transgender came around, people used the terms 'gender bending,' 'gender dysphoria' and 'sex reassignment surgery.'"

Norman plans to discuss the challenges of being transgender, including hostility from both the homosexual and heterosexual worlds, the high rates of substance abuse and suicide in the community and the "conditional regard" transgenders encounter in relationships.

"Transgenders find people telling them, 'I like you only if you act like a man or a woman, I like you only if you dress a certain way, I like you only if I can see you at night when my friends don't see you around,'" she said.

Tom Gunter, co-chair of UCSB's Lesbian/Gay/Bisexual Alliance, is pleased Norman and other speakers in the series will be given a chance to inform the campus of issues in regard to sexual identities.

"[The LGBA] has not had a request for it, so we have never felt there was a direct need to present a speaker of transgenders, but it's educational and it's something different for people to see," he said.

The last program of the series, "Bisexual Voices: Gaining Recognition," will be presented Feb. 24 at the same time and place. Speaker Mary McGhee, CAC activities advisor, will discuss experiences bisexuals encounter in both the homosexual and heterosexual communities.

Uehling Exhibits a Heartbeat With a Response to Faculty Anger, But What Will It Mean?

Editorial

Eighteen days after coming under heavy criticism from UCSB's Faculty Legislature, Chancellor Uehling has responded with a significant concession to campus faculty. Yes, self-promotion made up the body of her Tuesday memo — which outlined her intention to promote Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs Donald Crawford to the new post of executive vice chancellor — and she took issue only obliquely with the thunderous criticism hurled her way by professors last month. Those critics have charged her with being too detached, aloof and unconcerned with our campus' academic needs to adequately oversee them. She narrowly escaped a vote of "no confidence" at the Academic Senate's last meeting, and her subsequent silence was becoming unbearable.

But now we have a pulse. In the memo, Uehling states her intention to elevate Crawford, who currently holds the same rank as three other vice chancellors, thereby signifying her commitment to academics. The position would put Crawford just below Uehling herself. With this move, faculty will theoretically enjoy a stronger, more direct voice in what financial and political transactions go on at UCSB. In her note, Uehling states, "I believe the structure of our organization should better reflect the primacy of the academic mission."

Of course, it was Uehling, in an attempt to distance herself from her scandalous predecessor Robert Huttenback, who bumped the academic vice chancellor down to the level of the others six years ago. Although the faculty's new voice is something they say they have desperately needed, Uehling has ignored their complaints for six years — which is indicative of her detached role on campus. The chancellor's belated letter picks Crawford for a job that everyone had hoped, seemingly in vain, that she was taking care of all this time.

Of course — as some faculty have pointed out — this could be too little too late. It's also conceivable that Crawford represents yet another layer of bureaucracy for Uehling to hide behind, a part of her admittedly delegatory approach. This remains to be seen. If, instead of just a tool for placating the faculty, Crawford proves to be an intelligent and representative force in their favor, then Uehling's move is one of the better things she has done for the students in quite some time, as a happy, productive faculty means better teaching conditions for the student body.

Typically vague in the memo, Uehling does not respond explicitly to the warning shots fired across her bow by the faculty, but she does state implicitly her qualifications by tooting her own horn a bit. In some instances, she is right in doing so. It is true that, under Uehling's reign, UCSB has seen the "establishment of eight new academic programs and departments," and an "87% increase in gifts and donations." These statistics show that she has been extremely competent outside of this campus' walls. But inside is another matter.

The faculty's present opinion of Uehling, after the letter, seems to be one of apprehension. They say things like, "a step in the right direction," with the air of people who have been given back something that was rightfully theirs all along. While Uehling's memo is vague, and time will tell what comes of it, Crawford's promotion was a substantive move to assuage the concerns of others. It is the sort of action that UCSB has not seen enough of in the last six years.

Well, all I know is what I read in the Daily Nexus. Some fellow travelers directed my attention to a letter by Kief Hillsbery (Daily Nexus, Reader's Voice, Feb. 12). After casting a glance at it, I would have to characterize it as vitriolic and somewhat desperate, and so riddled with errors of fact that its author either intended to deceive its readers, or was supremely uninformed, to say the least, about the true story of the Sedgwick Ranch — in short, a typical document issued out of Cheadle Hall these days. Cheadle Hall is where Kief Hillsbery works as "senior public information officer" of the University of California, Santa Barbara.

My growing pile of heretofore secret University documents makes it clear that high University officials began to conspire to sell the Sedgwick Ranch even before the ink was dry on the original grant of deed.

Happily, his fulminations are so close to libelous I get an opportunity to respond. This might shed some much needed light about the real story of the Sedgwick Ranch and the necessity of its preservation.

My growing pile of heretofore secret university documents makes it clear that high university officials began to conspire to sell the Sedgwick Ranch even before the ink was dry on the original grant of deed. For the first 20 years of the story, from 1967 to 1989, there's not a word about a desire to give even a penny of the projected loot to the art community on campus — I defy anyone to find a document with "Sedgwick Ranch" and "University Art Museum" in the same PARAGRAPH, let alone the same sentence. However, in 1989, when university officials began the process to break the "no-sale" clauses in the grants of deed, university lawyers encountered unexpected opposition from Patricia Barboza, a staff attorney of the Attorney General's Office, which represents the interests of the dead Duke Sedgwick. She saw no good reason to remove the no-sale clause. They eventually worked out a compromise, that sale of the ranch would be permissible only if the revenues raised were put to a specific project consistent with the donors' previous charitable intentions. Voila — the art museum!

Now the university is locked into the bizarre algebra that:

- Sedgwick Ranch = Art Museum
- 100 acres = one statue
- 1,000 acres = one fireproof wall

This has saddled people like Hillsbery, Chancellor Uehling and President Peltason with a real PROBLEM — besides making no sense at all, it clearly violates Duke Sedgwick's express intentions in giving the ranch.

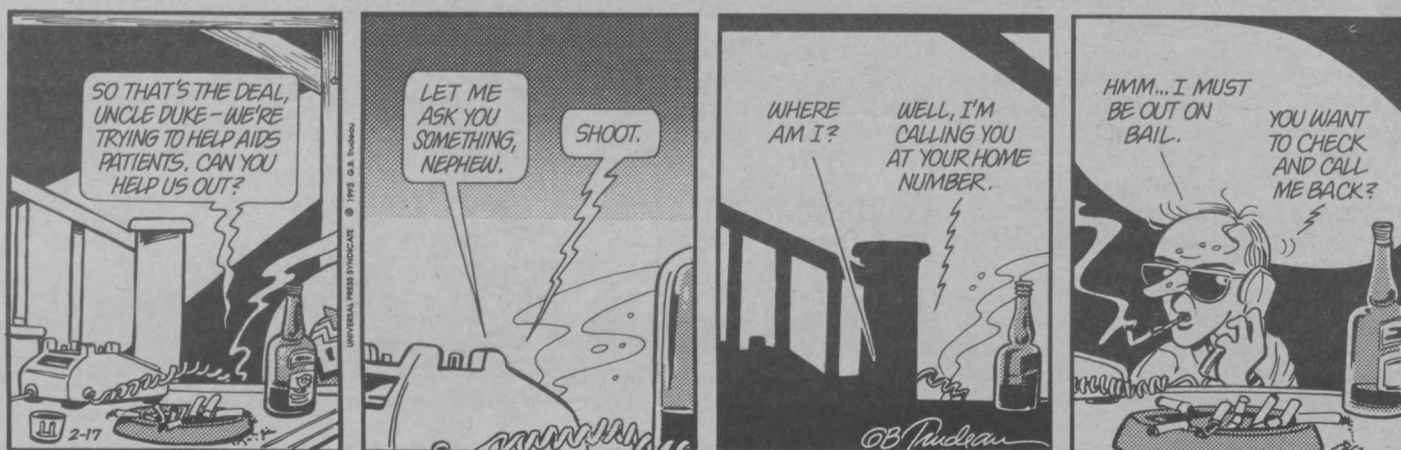

University officials have responded to this difficulty by callously maligning Duke's intentions, or by quoting tiny snippets of Duke's writings out of context in order to bend his words to their new plan. Hillsbery does both in his letter.

Hillsbery rants at the Nexus for not noticing that Duke gave his half interest in some paintings to the university in his will. He quotes a portion of a sentence from the will that the paintings "shall be on exhibition on the Santa Barbara campus in a fireproof building." I wonder why he didn't quote the whole sentence. It begins: "This bequest is made upon the express conditions that the paintings hereby given shall never be sold or disposed of by the university" — the same stipulation Sedgwick made about the ranch! I guess Hillsbery didn't want to remind you readers...

Hillsbery says that the only environmental uses of the ranch Duke mentioned in his will are "the production or development of oil or natural gas deposits on the ranch."

The amplifier attracted mysteriously a representative from the Dean of Students Office who tried, and failed, to get the speakers unplugged. The document contains a section on possible uses of the ranch by the Natural Lands and Water Reserve System, which was the predecessor of the Natural Reserve System, advising that part of the ranch might be brought into this system for "uses akin to those already enumerated and for others related to the purposes and objectives of the Reserve System, thus strengthening this critical program."

The regents voted June 22, 1967, to accept the gift, based on the background document just quoted, and based on the letter Duke Sedgewick wrote to the regents June 9, 1967. Hillsbery rants that the Nexus has portrayed Duke Sedgewick like a member of Earth First! Obviously, someone who died 20 years before the organization began couldn't have joined. Duke Sedgewick was, however, the founding president of the Citizens' Planning Association, the Santa Barbara County environmental advocacy group. The CPA strongly supports saving the Sedgewick Ranch, as does the Sierra Club, the Santa Barbara Museum of Natural History, the California Native Plants Society, the United States Forest Service, the Santa Ynez Reservation Tribal Council and probably most of the citizens of Santa Barbara County, and most people at UCSB.

And Duke Sedgewick too. Let the man speak, 25 years after his death — not doled out in misleading snippets from Cheadle Hall hacks like Hillsbery. Here are the first three paragraphs, complete and unedited, from the letter Duke wrote June 9, 1967, offering the Sedgewick Ranch to UCSB:

"Feeling a deep affection for the land we live on, some 6,000 acres as varied and lovely as ever God created, and taking a profound interest in the University of California, particularly the Santa Barbara campus (about half an hour's travel away), it has long been my wife's and my intention to unite these two under your one management. Indeed, seven years ago in our wills we bequeathed the ranch to the university. However, just as in the case of the 'Sedgewick Collection' of old master paintings, originally bequeathed and subsequently given, we now desire to give — or rather to start giving, with an initial 51% — our land (two acres including our residence excepted) to the university that the use thereof may begin immediately.

"We believe this conjunction of learning and land will be mutually propitious: for the former, room in which to expand the physical plant; for the latter, preservation of large areas of pristine beauty. Thus, there will be also a benefit to the whole County of Santa Barbara and even to the state, and so, in a measure, we can thereby express our gratitude to the bounties offered us, so often taken for granted by those fortunate enough to live in California.

"When I think back to the time I studied at Harvard and at Trinity College, Cambridge, in England, it is borne in upon me the immeasurable advantages which would have accrued to these great universities had they, in the days of surrounding sparse population, been provided with a like area, subsequently beyond purchase."

Now Uehling, Taborsky and Hillsbery, and other high-salaried charlatans, tell us we should be grateful that even a part of the ranch be preserved. Better still to dump their bankrupt vision and return to the policy of the UC as it was originally pronounced, in the letter of reply to the Sedgewicks accepting the first 51% of the ranch, written by Harry Wellman, acting president of the University of California, on June 29, 1967:

"You may be certain that our stewardship of your gift of one of the most beautiful and unspoiled portions of this state's natural land areas is one we shall embark upon with dedication."

property." Hillsbery is profoundly ignorant of the truth. I believe he is unaware of the extensive correspondence between university officials and Duke and his lawyers prior to the gift of the ranch.

The statement allowing oil and gas production on the ranch had to appear in the grant of deed, regardless of Duke's desires one way or the other. Why? When the Sedgewicks bought the ranch from its previous owners, those owners only sold them 75% of the mineral rights, retaining the rest for themselves. The heirs of those previous owners STILL own 25% of any oil on the ranch. For Duke to have forbidden oil development would have violated the previous owners' compact over the mineral rights.

Hillsbery says, "If we really wanted to pay respects to Sedgewick's expressed wishes, as your Editorial advocates, we'd be drilling for oil and revving up the bulldozers." It's amazing how ill-informed a "senior public information officer" can be. The university already tried it 10 YEARS AGO! In 1982 consulting geologist Robert Ortalda was hired to evaluate the prospects for drilling for oil and gas, using test wells and seismic tests. He concluded the prospects weren't good enough to proceed. In 1989, the consulting firm Cavigli and Mee was hired to explore the prospects of selling the entire ranch surface, but with the university retaining the mineral rights. Hubert Mee argued against any oil development by anyone. He politely noted that "to fully develop and operate such an area would greatly, if not totally detract from the beauty of the property." The plan was dropped.

Now let's get to the heart of Hillsbery's mendacity, his statement that "what you WON'T find anywhere in Sedgewick's will or his correspondence is an expressed interest in adding any portion of the property to the UC Natural Reserve System." Well, since Sedgewick died in 1967, and the Natural Reserve System didn't exist at that time, it is perhaps explainable that Duke didn't mention the system by name. But what was his intent?

Since Hillsbery refers repeatedly to Sedgewick's will as the source of the ranch, I deduce that he doesn't know the elementary facts of the case. In truth, in June, 1967, Alice and Duke Sedgewick, both still alive, offered the university 51% ownership in the ranch, effective immediately. That left the Sedgewicks with 49%, or 24.5% each. Duke left his 24.5% to the university in his will, passing after his death in October, 1967, while Alice assigned her remaining portion to the Sedgewick children. When the original offer of 51% was made to the UC Regents, the paperwork was sent to Oakland accompanied by a UCSB background statement explaining the gift, and its possible uses. That statement contains three pages of suggestions, and here are just a few of the highlights: "An upland field station to provide areas of relatively undisturbed or recovering habitat, ... the ranch would be an ideal site for current investigations on species of birds. ... The ranch would serve admirably as well for field work in courses in field vertebrate zoology. ... Parts of the ranch could be set aside as an undisturbed area for experimental population biology research of the sort upset by human presence. ... As an area readily available for class use, the ranch would enable faculty and students in this discipline to complement laboratory instruction with field exercises. ... It would be useful as well for geological field studies. ... The property could be used in part to improve faculty-student communication on an informal yet organized basis. ... It might well be considered as a likely site for the development of a UCSB alumni camp patterned somewhat after Berkeley's Lair of the Bear...

help students get organized to voice concerns, in a legitimate place. In other words, they specialize in deferring your concerns: on a busy day, they look up concern type A and find overpaid employee #202 who oversees the thorough placcation of your gripe. I couldn't take my eyes off of the man standing next to her. The sentiment behind his condescending sneer whispered, "They just haven't learned to accept rape yet."

So yesterday in the chancellor's office I said, "I've been deferred to your office hours for the last time. You see, I've signed 12 different petitions to have you recalled like Pete Wilson, but petitions take too long. Red tape bores me, so I've taken the liberty of composing your letter of resignation. Hey — don't mention it. Just sign at the bottom and trust that it's for your own good. If you'd pull your nose out of Jack Peltason's ass for a moment you'd smell the smoke. Your position here is smoldering. Every building you've managed to erect on this campus is one gust away from total incineration.

"For today's history lesson, Chancellor Uehling, turn to page 1968, and study the student uprising in Paris: High ranking academic officials like yourself, were if nothing else, drastically inconvenienced. On a day like today in the spring of '68 someone like you would exit her office in the Sorbonne and find that their car had been turned into a pissoir. I know how public toilets repulse you, lady, so sign on the dotted line. Take the money you've stashed in the Caymans and get the fuck out of here," I shouted. It was an altogether empowering visit, for both of us I think.

ups who discourage an emergence from this paralyzed, old knowledge-circulating institution: Step off. That includes all codgety professors who blow the dust off the yellowed notes of their former professors to disguise cultural and ethnic purity as a virtue. You know who you are: Behind your tenure you hide from the eighth complaint filed against you by the sexual harassment office — You're fired! Write those books no one will ever read and migrate to Florida. It is thanks to you that graduates leave here like stillborn children, deaf to the screams for change, blind to the need for it. You hinder our potential because you come from the culture that says, "If you can't do anything to stop the violation, just lay back and enjoy it."

I refuse. You are fired. Because only when this university lays in beautiful ruins will we begin to learn, to live. Tatyana Collins is a junior literature major.

Las Vegas Sends Softball Home Losers

By Michelle Imperial
Staff Writer

Opening up the conference season in Las Vegas isn't the easiest way to start things off, as the UCSB softball team found out the hard way over the weekend.

The Lady Gaucho sluggers dropped a doubleheader to the #14 Runnin' Rebels of UNLV on Saturday, losing the opener 11-10 and dropping the twilight game 8-1.

"We were disappointed with the losses, but we know it is not the end of the world," UCSB Head Coach Sandy Pearce said. "Winning and losing is important, but we look more to what we improved on these games."

The UCSB sluggers were hoping to put the brakes on their losing ways, which found the team split with non-conference Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo, and drop two to Cal State Northridge over the past few weeks.

The Gaucho squad needed to wake up its offense which had posted only two hits in its last matchup, and ended the drought by piling up 12 hits in the first game against UNLV.

The Lady Gaucho sluggers went on a hitting rampage in the third inning by compiling six runs to jump out to a 6-1 lead.

"We were concerned after the lack of offense at Northridge, so clobbering all those hits felt real good," Pearce added. "The [players] were psyched because they have been working on hitting in practice."

UCSB right fielder Ginny Mike led the squad in the first game, going 2 for 5 with 2 RBIs, while center fielder Krissy Kyriazis doubled in two of UCSB's 10 runs.

The score was tied going into the last inning when the Vegas squad scored the winning run with no outs. Gaucho relief pitcher Becca Berline (0-2) got the loss in relief of starter Stacy Atwood. Berline pitched 3 2/3 innings, giving up five runs on nine hits and four walks.

In the second game, the Santa Barbara sluggers were silenced by Vegas pitcher Amie Stewert, who went the distance and gave up only one run on two hits, striking out two. UCSB junior Margo Melendrez scored the Gauchos' only run in the first inning when third baseman Annjanette Vitulli drove her in.

"We came out in full force in the second game, but we were just mentally and physically tired," UCSB's Alison Brickner said. "We know we really need to work on staying focused."

Santa Barbara pitcher Kelli Schott (0-1) took the loss, going 3 2/3 innings and giving up seven runs on eight hits with one strikeout.

Cont. from back page all four of his routines and his 9.4 on the parallel bars was good for fourth place.

UCSB's best team event was the floor exercise, where it managed a 45.25, a season best.

Team members indicated that the squad learned a lot from this meet, and UCSB Head Coach Mircea Badulescu noted that it was especially helpful for Santa Barbara's six newcomers.

"For the freshmen, this was a new experience. They will be much better as a result," Badulescu said. "The potential is there, it is just a matter of everyone hitting at the same time."

Despite the pressure, the freshmen performed well. Reed Lovan scored a 9.0 on the floor exercise and a 9.1 on the vault. David Cassie nailed a 9.05 on the vault and Andre Zimmerman pulled off a 9.05 on the floor exercise.

UNLV Assistant Coaches and Their Really Bad Haircuts

 With new duties pending, Crawford said the transition will take adjustment, but he has seen the system work while under a similar system when he was dean of Letters and Science at Wisconsin.

"This structure isn't designed to take the chancellor out of the loop," Crawford said. "[My office] will have to do a little restructuring to adjust to the new responsibilities. There will be big changes under stressful budgetary times." Crawford said his relations with faculty have been "very good" since his arrival at UCSB.

 There will be big changes under stressful budgetary times.

Donald Crawford vice chancellor for academic affairs

 While the announcement to change Crawford's job description back to one that existed under former Chancellor Robert Huttenback is a favorable step for academic planning, details of the post are sketchy in the prepared statement, some faculty members said.

"There are few details in the statement. Lots of things just aren't there," said Duncan Mellichamp, former chair of the Academic Senate. "It was a mistake to change the structure originally, and the change back is long overdue."

The issue of Crawford's pending purview over the budget is unclear in the statement, however, he said.

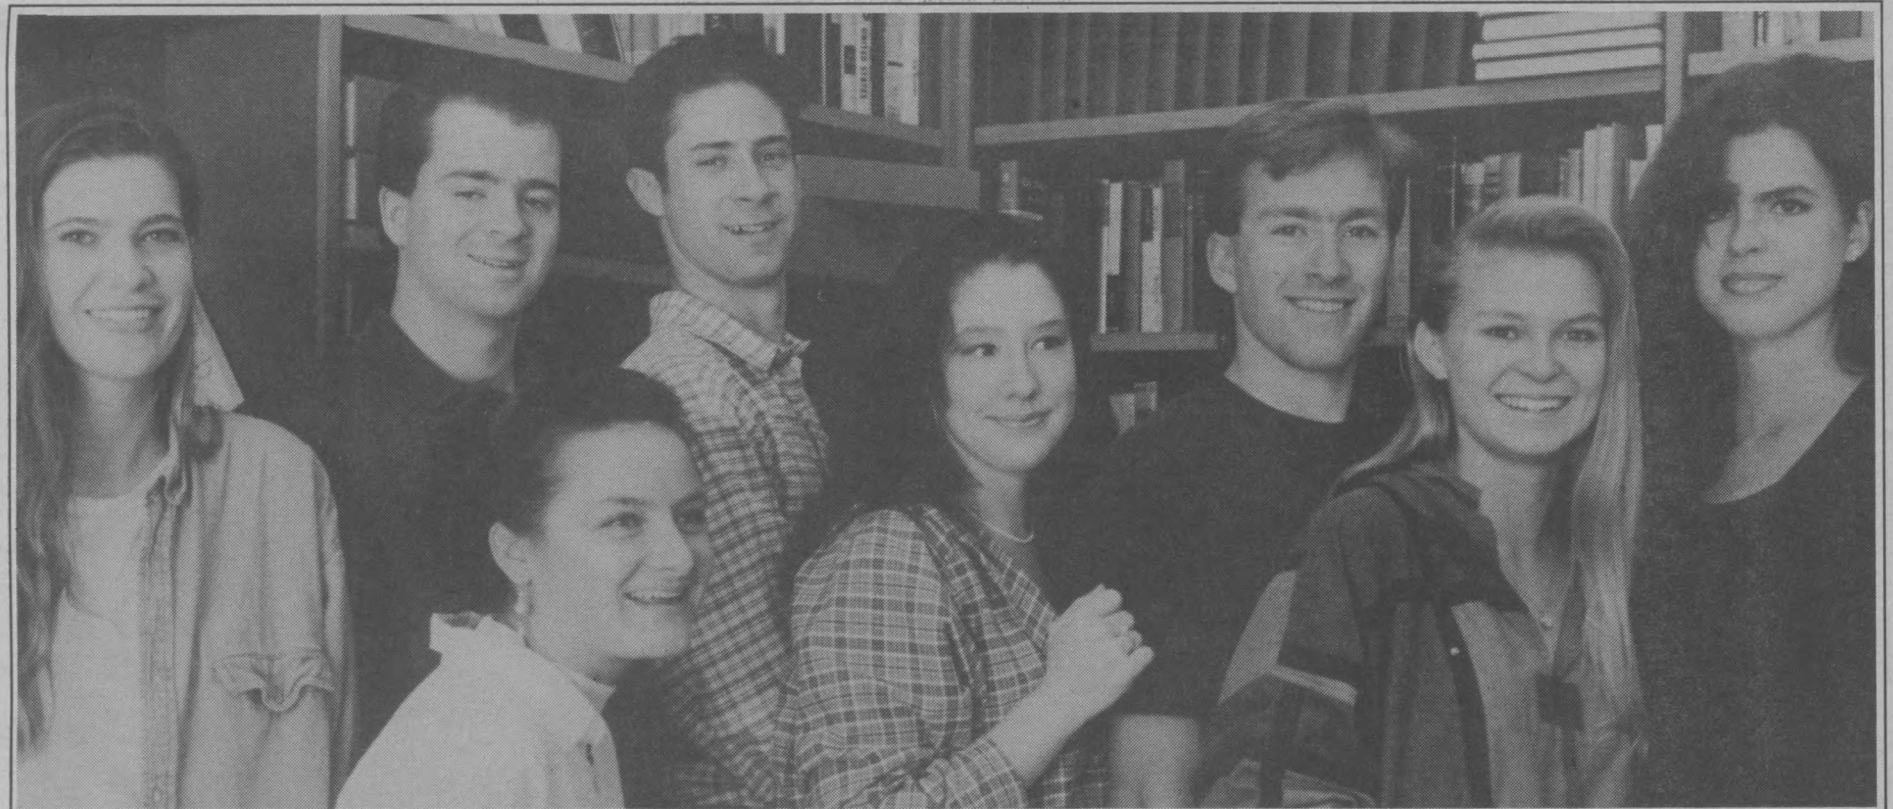

Whether Crawford would be able to have a hand in how money is distributed through the various vice chancellorships is of particular concern, said Eduardo Orias, a member of the Faculty Legislature's executive committee who met with the chancellor last week.

"This position doesn't mean anything unless it's accompanied by budgetary control. This is the only practical way to subordinate all other [departments] to the primacy of teaching and research," he said Tuesday, adding that the chancellor's office would be getting back to him this morning to clear up the budgetary issue.

Crawford, however, said it was his understanding that the Office of Budget and Planning would be reporting to him as executive vice chancellor.

Academic Senate Vice Chair Douglas Morgan said, though he had not seen the statement yet, the restructuring would be a welcome addition. "It's a movement in the right direction to revitalize the academic mission of this campus," he said.

Spikers Snatch a Victory in Lions' Den

Loyola Marymount Battles, but Falls to #5 UCSB, 15-7, 12-15, 15-10, 15-9

By Dan Solomon
Staff Writer

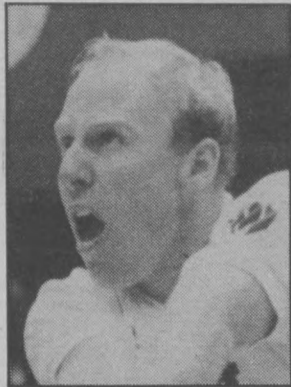

LOS ANGELES —It was a streaky Tuesday evening on the campus of Loyola Marymount, as the #5 UCSB men's volleyball squad traveled south for a match that was characterized by streaks of points from both teams.

In the end, however, the Gauchos were able to string together the most runs, and came away with a 15-7, 12-15, 15-10, 15-9 victory over the Lions.

Game one opened with the Lions (2-4, 1-4) taking an early 6-3 lead. However, the Gauchos (9-4, 5-1) went on an 11-point run, and ended the game with a cross-court kill at match point by senior outside hitter Stace Lougeay.

In game two, LMU broke open a 3-3 tie with a 5-1 run, aided by a couple of attacking errors from freshmen Amaury Velasco and Doug Hughes. UCSB responded with a run of their own and took the lead, 12-11. But a series of attacking errors from Santa Barbara, combined with kills from LMU's Jason McEntee and Andy Zimmerman, tied the match at one game apiece.

"I was impressed with their emotional intensity,"

three kills

UCSB Assistant Coach Jose Gandara said. "We never got into the right rhythm and we gave them the sideouts instead of having them fight for it."

The evening of streaks continued in game three as the Gauchos built an early 9-0 lead. However, LMU came back with a 10-1 run of their own, which included a series of five plays in which McEntee amassed three blocks and two kills. But in the end, a five-point run from UCSB closed out the game and gave the Gauchos a 2-1 advantage in the match.

"They changed their lineup and were hungry for the victory," UCSB Head Coach Ken Preston said. "They were very confident against us."

In game four, UCSB broke open a 7-7 tie with a seven-point run that was led by the blocking of seniors Jason Mount and Jeff Zevely. The Lions chipped in two more points off service aces, but UCSB won the game and the match after a lifting call on Zimmerman.

The Gauchos outit the Lions on the evening .323-.175. UCSB also outblocked LMU 22-12.5. But the match stayed close mainly because UCSB committed 20 service errors, some at crucial points in the match. The Lions had only six service errors.

"Our serving was beginning to wear thin on me," Preston said. "We'd go with one style and that worked, but then it would fall apart and give them the ball."

LMU was led by McEntee's 18 kills and four blocks. Zimmerman added nine kills for a .467 hitting percentage. For the Gauchos, Velasco recorded 24 kills for a .370 mark, while Hughes added 14 for a .611 hitting figure. Mount had 12 kills (.409) and 13 blocks and Zevely had 58 assists and nine blocks.

HE'S THE BOSSO: Gaucho Chris Bosso demonstrates his form on the rings in a meet earlier this season. Santa Barbara finished last in a weekend meet.

Men Find That Last is Not Least

By Michael Kohn
Staff Writer

Why are the UCSB men's gymnastics squad members so elated about finishing dead last in the Southwest Cup last Friday? Several reasons, actually.

First and foremost is their score. The 255.35 mark was a season high for road meets, and should be enough to push the Gauchos back into the top-20, according to team captain Chris Bosso. The squad fell out of the rankings last week, after being #18 at the beginning of the season.

The Gauchos, 2-3 on the year, also take solace in the fact that the loss was at the hands of some of the strongest squads in the nation. Number two Ohio State narrowly edged #8 Oklahoma to take the title, 280.15-279.05. Number 14 UCLA, a team which UCSB had lost to earlier this season, scored 277.35, a school best. Host Arizona State, #12 despite being winless this year, tallied 274.75, and #11 New Mexico finished with 271.80.

All-American Chainey Umphrey of UCLA scored 56.8 to win the individual competition. UCSB's high score came from junior Jeb Brandon, who used excellent scores on both the vault (9.45) and floor exercise (9.4) to achieve a 52.4 all-around total.

"The vault was one of the best routines in my life. It just came together and I nailed it," Brandon said.

The most consistent Gaucho performance came from Bosso. The senior hit

Inexperienced Women's Track and Field Squad Gets Its First Notice

By Matt Allen
Reporter

With only a few returning letterman and a team dominated by freshmen and sophomores, UCSB Head Coach Jim Triplett didn't know what to expect from this year's women's track and field team.

On Saturday, he got a better look. "With our women being young and inexperienced, I think they were a little intimidated and nervous," Triplett said after the Lady Gauchos turned in impressive individual performances against Azusa Pacific and Westmont College.

Julie Thomas led the Gauchos in the distance events by competing in both the 800-meter and the 1,500-meter races. Thomas led a Gaucho sweep in the 800-meter with a winning time of 2:21.11, while Kara Bradbury, an all-conference cross country runner, placed second in 2:24.91. In the 1,500-meter race, Thomas and Bradbury again finished 1-2 for the Gauchos.

"Our strength this year is in the distance events," Triplett said. "With Bradbury coming off an all-conference year in cross country and a talented junior in Thomas, our distance team should pick up a lot of points."

In the 400-meter hurdles, the Gauchos placed 1-2-3 with Lisa Knott leading the way (67.51), followed by Alison Higgins (68.27) and Julie Mosier (70.1). Becky Thomas placed second in the 100-meter hurdles in 15.30, while teammate Knott finished third in 15.40.

"We're a young team but we are very talented," Triplett said. "We figure we have a shot to be in the top-4 of our conference. As our women gain experience they'll continue to improve. In a couple of years we should be very strong."

The Gauchos get a chance to gain more experience when they take on Cal State Fullerton and CSUN at home on Saturday.

Men's Squad Ready for First Meet

By Matt Allen
Reporter

In a tune-up for its season opener next week, the UCSB men's track and field team hosted a three-way non-scoring meet Saturday against Westmont College and NAIA powerhouse Azusa Pacific.

The Gauchos had some fine individual performances, including Dan Huber's third place finish in the 55-meter sprint (6.74). Azusa's Osmond Ezinwa won the race with a time of 6.40. Ezinwa, the 10th-fastest 100-meter runner in the world last season, did not compete in the 100 meter dash, enabling Huber to win the race with ease with a time of 11.4. UCSB's Rich Frank won the 200-meter race in a time of 22.5.

In the middle distance events, freshman Brian Steip won the 800-meter in his first race as a collegiate (1:57.76). Teammate Andy Allard placed second with a time of 1:57.76. In the meet's most exciting race, Westmont's Eben Robinson had a sizable lead going to the final 300 meters of the 1500-meter race. UCSB's Gus Harper caught Robinson with 100 meters to go, but Robinson used one last sprint to take the narrow victory.

UCSB's Marc Kallick placed second in the discus (141'1"), finishing behind Dave Pope of Azusa (150'0"). Gaucho Brad Tower placed second in the javelin (185'0"), while teammate Trey Smith finished third (170'0"). UCSB's Jeff Gartenberg (170'0") easily won the hammer throw over Azusa's Ryan Root (143'3").

In the field events, UCSB's Ernest Morrell set a personal best in the long jump, placing first with a jump of 23'4". Teammate Frank Smith also placed second in the triple jump with a jump of 47'4", while Eli Gladden jumped 6'6" in the high jump to finish second.

Regi Johnson led a 1-2 finish for the Gauchos in the 55-meter hurdles, winning in a time of 7.55, just ahead of teammate Killick (7.75). Paul Goodrich led a sweep for the Gauchos in the steeplechase with Scott Fairbanks and Jason Pinmarta finishing second and third, respectively.

The Gauchos will be at home this Saturday, when they face CSUN and Cal State Fullerton in the first scoring meet of the year.
