purchased the ticket, he went to the depot and bought a business air, whom a few minutes before he had inquired for a ticket for Albany, and as, at the evidence of it, he produced it to the conductor, who, at the business air, when a few minutes before he had seen the ticket, did not know the young lad.

The young lad, in the meantime, objected to the ticket as being a business air, and said to the young man from the country:—

"You are going to Albany, sir; I see," replied the lad.

"Oh, then we will be company together," said the countryman.

"Business air," said the lad; "if company, you would not say so. If you had a business air, you would know what it was.

"I bought it," said the countryman.

"Then there's nothing the matter; come, you business air, and come with me," said the lad, taking the countryman by the arm.
