A.S. Investment To Be Focus Of Advisory Group

By ADRIANNA FOSS
Nexus Staff Writer

At its last meeting of Fall quarter, Associated Students Legislative Council made decisions concerning the establishment of a student investment advisory committee for A.S. funds, and an upcoming Student Outreach Board survey. The council also discussed the expenditure of A.S. money on political issues.

A bill which will create a committee for interested students to meet weekly and advise A.S. how to formulate an investment strategy for A.S. funds was passed.

Associated Students President Jay Weiss wrote the bill in order to provide students with an opportunity to get involved and to get practical monetary investment experience. The proposed A.S. Investment Advisory Committee will be formed of a 12-person executive committee and sub-committees.

The executive council will comprise A.S. Investment Advisory Committee interior officers and a liaison to Finance Board, as well as the Finance Board chair. One of the executive officers will be social ethics chair, who will be in charge of reviewing and evaluating all proposed investments to determine their level

Question: Just How Dead Is 'Dead Week'?

By JOHN CAMPE
Nexus Staff Writer

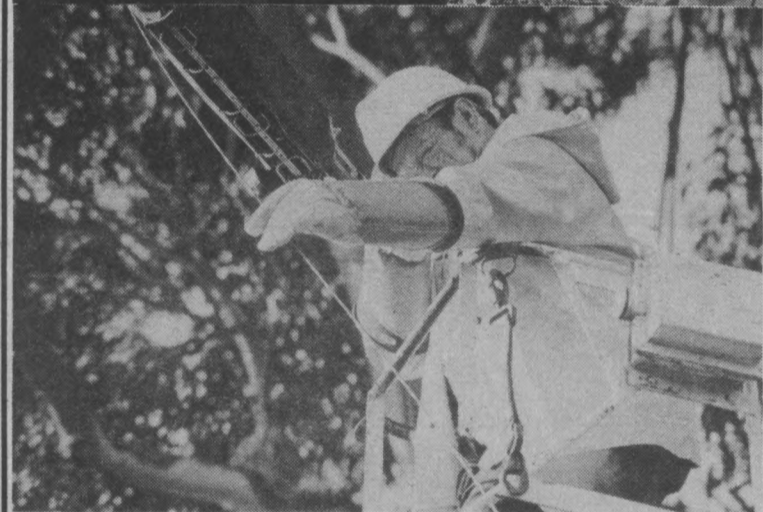

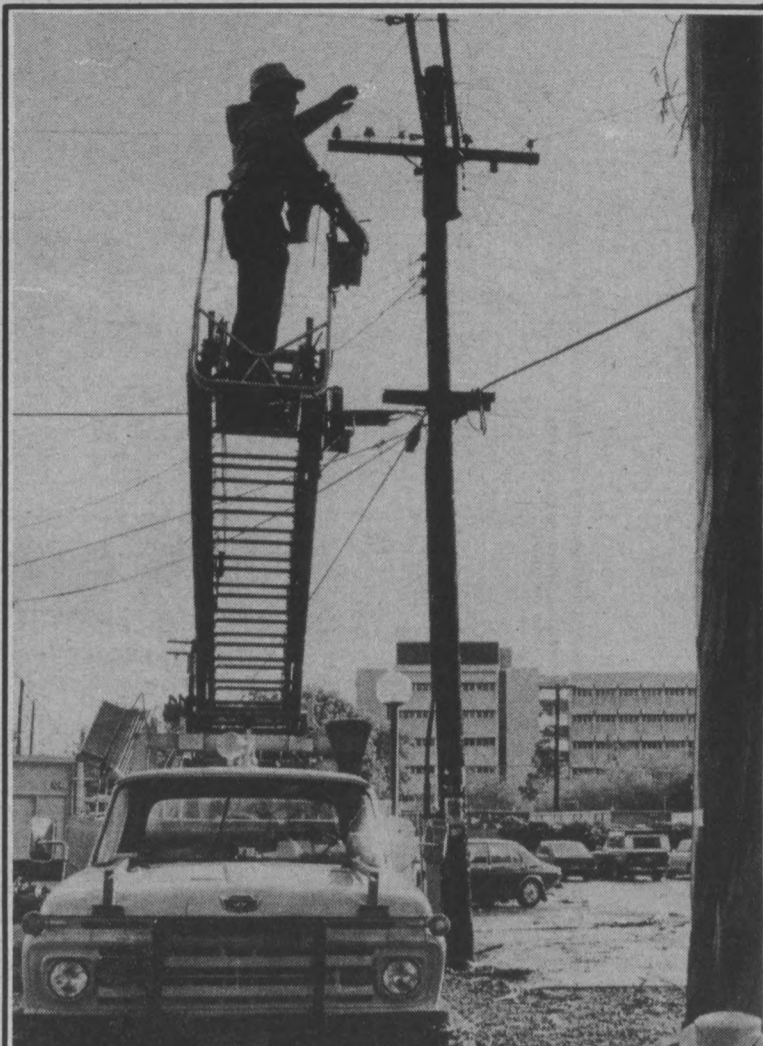

Although the purpose of dead week is to provide a quiet time during which students prepare for final exams, university policy of keeping activities, papers and tests to a minimum during this time is not always strictly enforced.

"Dead week is an attempt to reduce inappropriate and excessive academic requirements on students which enables them to prepare for finals," Professor Kenneth Millet, chair of the Academic Senate, said. "Although it is not enforced, there are policies to remind professors not to have major tests during dead week."

Last year Chancellor Robert Huttenback proposed to the Faculty Legislature that dead week be strictly enforced. Millet said the chancellor's proposal was looked at by the Committee on Educational Policy and Academic Planning, which determined that it was not workable. "The committee found that strict enforcement could adversely affect the Music Department and the College of Creative Studies, in addition to most self-paced courses," Millet said. The Music Department has finals and rehearsals during dead week and students in the College of Creative Studies work to a large extent on their own. Many students in self-paced courses must take quizzes during this last week.

Leslie Griffen-Lawson, director of the Office of Student Life, said, "There is a need for a definite statement on dead week." She

Student Regent May Get Selection Vote

By NOEL HASTINGS
Nexus Staff Writer

Student Regent Linda Sabo may receive a vote on the committee for the selection of a replacement for U.C. President David Saxon if a charter amendment the Student Body Presidents Council has written is passed by the regents.

The amendment would make the student regent an ex-officio member of the committee, thereby enabling her to vote.

According to SBPC Chair Leonard Schmitt, the SBPC would like the amendment approved at the January regents meeting so that Sabo will be able to vote before the committee chooses the new president. The committee plans to announce its candidate at the February regents meeting.

Even without a vote, Sabo feels her views are being listened to. "I feel I speak as much, if not more than the other regents. I think they do listen to me. If I didn't think they were listening to me, I wouldn't be there," she said.

"The regents have said that Linda (Sabo) and Shirley (Conner) will attend all the meetings. (The regents) want a consensus and have said that Linda and Shirley will be a part of that consensus," but they are not members of the seven-member committee and technically do not have a vote, Johnson said.

Johnson said he talked about how the alumni and student regents were excluded from membership on the presidential selection com-

SBPC Attempts To Link With Regents

By NOEL HASTINGS
Nexus Staff Writer

In an attempt to "facilitate more communication" between U.C. Student Regent Linda Sabo and the Student Body Presidents Council, SBPC plans to name Sabo an ex-officio member of the council, SBPC Chair Leonard Schmitt said.

At its January meeting, SBPC campus representatives from the nine U.C. campuses will vote on whether or not to amend its charter to make the student regent an ex-officio council member automatically.

Tom Spaulding, A.S. UCSB external vice president and SBPC undergraduate representative, said he plans to vote for the added clause. He said making the student regent an ex-officio member of the SBPC will result in "some direct interaction between the SBPC and student regents. Student regents are not directly accountable to the SBPC, but this does bring them in," he said.

SBPC Graduate Representative Marie Antonini, GSA external president, agreed with Spaulding. "I will be voting yes, also," he said.

Like Spaulding, Schmitt emphasized that making the student regent an ex-officio member will "hopefully" ensure more direct communication between the student regent and the students. "In theory, the student regent will become more aware of what goes on before we take a stand — the debating, etc. Hopefully she (Sabo) will understand why a

SUNRAE Unveils Recycling Center

By KERANA TODOROV
Nexus Staff Writer

To help support their Isla Vista Recycling Center and to enforce local recycling efforts, SUNRAE has opened a new recycling center in Goleta.

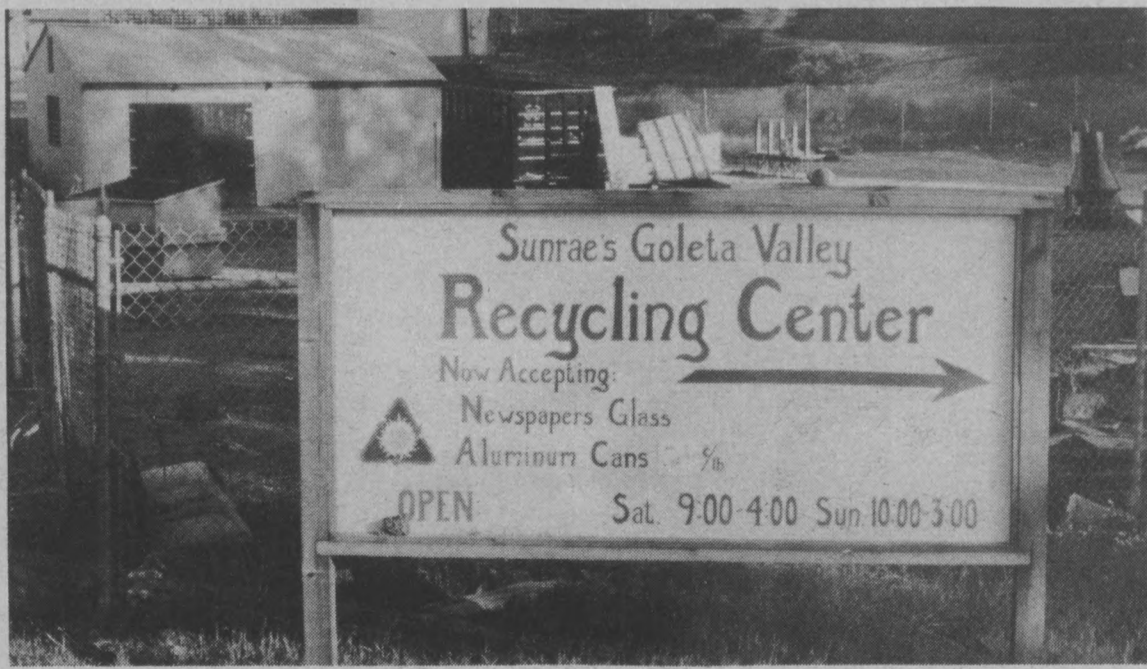

According to Ed Maschke, director of SUNRAE, it took three years to finally open the new recycling center located on Hollister Avenue.

Since it began operating three months ago, the new Goleta center has been considered a success by the SUNRAE staff. According to Maschke, SUNRAE has already been able "to make money" from this new venture.

The new center offers services similar to those at the recycling center located in I.V. The Hollister center collects newspapers, cans, and all kinds of glass.

Old newspapers and used glass, primarily bottles, are brought to the center by members of the community. Cans are also bought by SUNRAE from "fraternities, sororities, schools, churches, and girl scouts," Maschke explained. Later, Maschke said, these items are gathered and "sold to a cooperation in Los Angeles."

According to Maschke, SUNRAE has been affected by the recession. "Reaganomics" is responsible for having affected SUNRAE financially, according to Maschke. "There is less money available," he said.

SUNRAE is a non-profit organization and therefore relies heavily on public funding. In this capacity, SUNRAE has to manage itself with less fundings. This year, SUNRAE has been trying to cut the cost of its operation.

"We're working to trim programs that are the least cost effective," Maschke said. He explained that SUNRAE has tried to do this "in terms of finance stability and what the community needs."

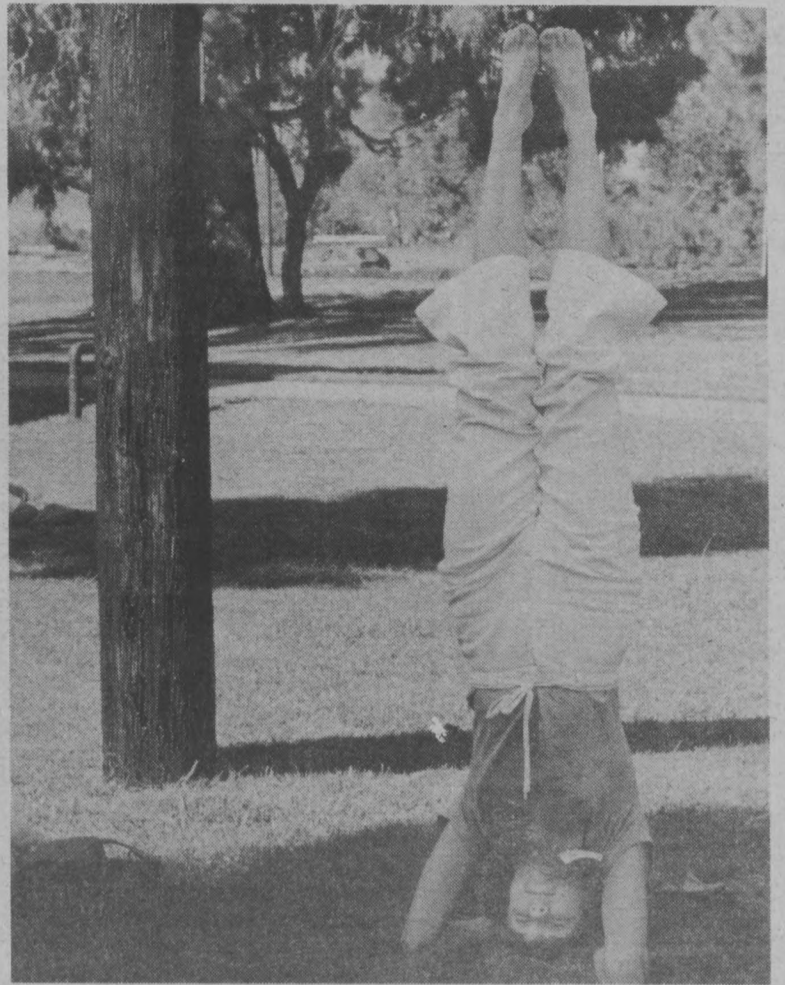

This year, according to Maschke, the new recycling center is sending $100,000 to purchase cans. Even so, the Goleta center is making a profit, Maschke said.

The new center has been profitable enough to "keep I.V. going," Maschke said, referring to

Slater Appointed Superior Court Judge To Push For Court Reforms

By DAVE GOTTLEB
Nexus Staff Writer

James Slater was sworn in as the newest Santa Barbara Superior Court Judge Monday. Slater, a former municipal court judge, hopes to institute reforms in the Superior Court system.

Although Slater said it is hard to initiate court reforms, (due to the plurality needed for such changes), he has a few things in mind which he would like to see accomplished in the future. "I'd like to see more civil cases handled by the Superior Court," he remarked. "We have plenty of criminal cases coming at us all the time; it would be nice to see in the next few years more civil cases in this court."

Slater said he sees problems with the present system by which judges are assigned to cases. He explained, "The present system enables a case at times to be presented to more than one judge. Many times one judge will make a ruling on the motions, and another judge will make a ruling on the trial itself. It would be a great incentive for judges, and would probably speed up the court process, to have one judge deal with an entire case throughout its proceedings." With this method, Slater explained, judges could plan their case load ahead of time and could do all the necessary research. "It would provide a great incentive for judges, because those who prepared for their cases quickly would have either extra time to pursue other cases or would be able to have some extra time for themselves," he said.

Slater will assume the normal duties of a Superior Court judge, working primarily with both civil and criminal cases on the felony level. At first, however, Slater will handle cases in the Juvenile Court, as well as finishing off some Municipal Court matters which are still pending. He will then gradually be handling more cases at the Superior Court level.

Slater started his legal career in 1964, working in a local attorney's office. A year later, Slater moved into the District Attorney's office, and a year after that went on to establish his own practice. His private practice involved primarily criminal cases, but he also handled some civil cases, and what he described as cases of social consequence. He kept his practice for about 10 years, and was then appointed as a judge for Santa Barbara County Municipal Court. Additionally, Slater served for a number of years on the Board of Supervisors concurrently with his private practice and his judgeship.

After six years as a judge for the Municipal Court, he applied for the Superior Court seat. "I enjoyed the six years as a Municipal Judge," he said, "but, after four years I felt I wanted to move on to something more challenging; I'm very happy to have received this position."

Judge Slater is looking forward to his work as a Superior Court Judge, and stated, "I'm looking forward to doing a good, hard working job."

Graduate Issues To Be Discussed

By ANDREA WOODWARD
Asst. News Editor

UCSB will be the site of the second annual systemwide Conference on Graduate Student Issues which begins tomorrow and continues over the weekend with workshops and speakers including Assemblymember-elect Jack O'Connell and Senator-elect Gary Hart.

Events, which will take place in and around the UCen Pavilion, include a panel discussion of graduate fees and tuition; speeches by O'Connell and Hart; and a panel discussion of the threatened status of graduate programs. Participants of that panel will include UCSB Dean of Graduate Students David Simonett; U.C. Academic Vice President William Frazer; William Pickens, Coordinator for Fiscal Planning for the California Post-Secondary Education Committee; and two Student Body Presidents

Cheating

Fourteen cups of coffee...A few drugs...1600 pages to go...12 review questions to outline...5 hours until the exam...the sun is rising...

The ritual is final exams. The price is physical and mental anguish. The relief is vacation.

But for some students, the quarter break is too far in the future to be of any immediate solace. Instead, an easier and more accessible academic aid is resorted to: cheating.

"Cheating at U.C. Santa Barbara?!" The mere suggestion causes many naive professors, administrators, and students to gape in disbelief. But it is time to face the facts: as most students know, cheating is widespread on this campus and it must be prevented.

At this level, attempts to solve many of the factors which contribute to the propensity for cheating are likely to be fruitless. Increased academic competition, tight job markets, parental pressure, financial problems, and moral bankruptcy are among the contributing factors which will persist and which are beyond university control.

Preventing the act of cheating, however, is not beyond university control. Cheating is a despicable aspect of university education and the responsibility to remove it falls on each of the three major university groups: professors, administrators, and students.

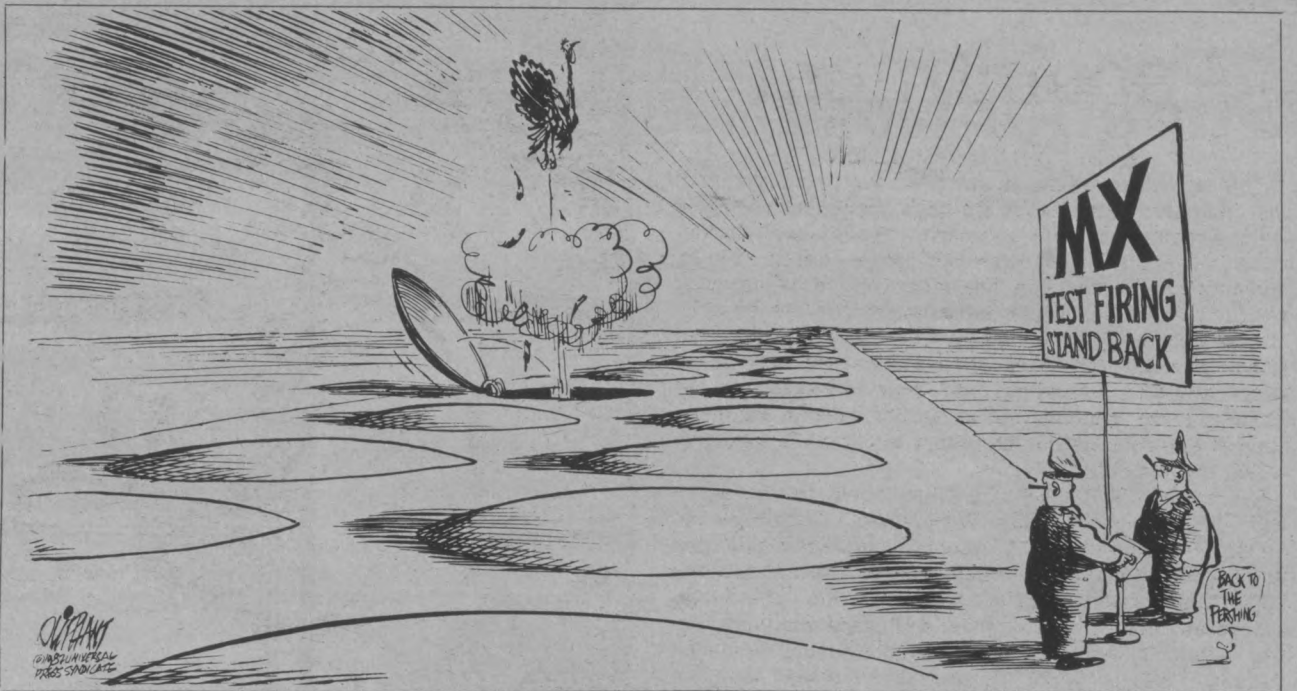

UCSB Professors have typically been blind to the prevalence of cheating. They are either too blind and far removed to see it, or too proud to admit that it occurs in their classroom. As a result, certain professors will continue to issue the same exams each year, fail to provide even cursory monitoring of test situations, or refuse to take any action if incidents are brought to their attention. To many students, this represents an open invitation to cheat.

Administrators must also share the responsibility to prevent cheating by embarking on a major campus awareness program — similar in nature to the Sexual Harassment Program — emphasizing the widespread existence of cheating and the methods available for handling the problem. Although it will be tempting for administrators to ignore this reputation-damaging state of affairs, continuing to sweep the problem under the rug will only compound it by reinforcing the notion that there is no institutional support for those rare people willing to blow the whistle on offenders.

Ultimately, the burden is on students to put a halt to academic misconduct. At present, only a handful of students are willing to report other students known to be cheating; most submit to the peer pressure that urges students to remain quiet. This "comradery" is extremely harmful; it not only provides cheaters with a seal of approval but also shields the extent of the problem from professors and administrators.

Most of us have heard the age-old maxim: "If you cheat on a test, you will only be cheating yourselves." This maxim is, quite frankly, bullshit. Students who cheat hurt themselves only if they are caught, which is rare, or in the vague and meaningless sense that they will have failed to learn some piece of information which will probably be of no practical use whatsoever in their future life anyway. Instead, they hurt all the honest students who worked diligently preparing for an exam.

Herein lies both the real crime and the best chance to reduce its impact. Although many do cheat, they are still a minority at UCSB, just as they are at other universities. The most effective way to stop it is for the majority to refuse to put up with it and make the decision to turn such people in. Cheating has no place in the shared learning endeavor going on at the university; anyone who is unable to abide by such a code should be tossed out as well.

Nicaragua

Editor, Daily Nexus:

When the Associated Students Legislative Council passed the bill condemning American military involvement in Nicaragua it was stepping outside the bounds of its proper role at UCSB. I am not condoning the American presence in Nicaragua, as Pete Zerilli said, "What's being done there is wrong." But the Leg Council is supposed to deal with problems here at UCSB not national issues; we have a Congress for that. Such things as rapes, deteriorating bicycle paths, inadequate lighting of certain areas of the campus, the need for more CSOs for escort service, and the prospect of raising student fees by $1,000 a year (from "President Discusses Impact of Deficit," Daily Nexus Monday, Nov. 22) are the true concerns of the Leg Council. Zerilli is pushing the Leg Council into the same rut as Congress is in; specifically, he is trying to clean up someone else's backyard while ignoring his own which needs work.

I would be willing to bet that most UCSB students are unaware of the two rapes where the rapist kicked in the windows of his victim's residence to gain access. One of these crimes occurred at Tropicana Gardens, an off-campus dorm, where the concentration of people is such that it is surprising no one investigated the noise. Although such news items are very disturbing, they are needed to alert the student body to potential dangers so precautions can be taken.

The fact that I had to hear this information from sources other than the Daily Nexus and local news publications points up the inadequacies of the present system. The Leg Council needs to plan more and better rape awareness programs; surely even the simple task of keeping the student body informed of these crimes would help. Rape here at home is in the very least as important as American actions in Nicaragua to those who have been elected to Leg Council. With the limited time available for Leg Council meetings, problems concerning the well being of UCSB students are more pressing than those of the entire nation.

If Zerilli feels so strongly about the American involvement in Nicaragua he could have instigated a petition for those interested to sign. This would have created a much greater impact on Congress and preserve the true purpose of the Leg Council.

Leg. Council

Editor, Daily Nexus:

Adrianna Foss' report in the Daily Nexus about A.S. Leg Council's passage of a bill regarding American destabilization of Nicaragua, and the reasoning behind the bill, should be of interest to all UCSB undergraduates. No one desiring peace in Central America and the world should be so uncreative as to resort to further destabilizing an already shaky society such as that in revolutionary Nicaragua. On the other hand, no one desiring peace should be so ignorant of the world political scene that they would advocate a simplistic pullout of the American presence in that region. The Carter administration's support of moderate Nicaraguan elements helped the democratic cause no more than did the pre-Carter administrations' support of the Somoza dynasty. The Reagan administration's support of Somocista elements is no more appealing than earlier efforts to influence the region's political development, to say the least. The question from our point of view, if we bought into the idea that Leg Council should address such problems, is what is our better plan for ensuring a genuinely independent Nicaraguan development and encouraging moderate elements to do their best to influence that development in a democratic direction?

The reasoning behind the bill in question shows very clearly that not only is there no alternative plan being offered, but, worse, that there is a clear lack of understanding of many aspects of foreign policy and its impact on domestic developments. Mark Schwartz, an ethical rep, is sadly misinformed when he contends "Increased military spending in Central America causes our reg fees to go up." The economic reality, for those of us in California, is that our reg fees are derived from state, not federal, taxes, and that with our large share of defense contracts our reg fees are actually kept lower by increased federal military appropriations — because the state is able to proportionately increase its income. Mark, of course, would doubtlessly support the bill in question even with this economic aspect of the problem corrected. That's understandable. Yet the point implied remains: When you take action when you are inadequately informed, you make errors and do more harm than good for your point of view. The insight that idealistic sniping on the part of students is irresponsible and causes those in state and federal government to generally disregard student input is an important one to grasp, if we really do want to have some effective input.

If you don't buy into the notion that Leg Council should be bumping around in the dark on foreign policy issues a long line of administrations couldn't solve, then you may wonder more specifically what the council is doing with the $60,000 per year paid by students to be administered in our best interests by our elected representatives sitting on council. With all the unsolved problems on this campus and within the U.C. system, why is the council spending its time and our money on Nicaragua, the Coors dispute between a union and a corporation in Colorado, etc.? Even after we solved immediate problems, like bike paths, rape, housing, and so on, there are still major problems with the larger U.C. system. The projected $100 million shortfall in U.C. income for '83-84 and President Saxon's desperate call for a school tax increase, U.C. investments in firms doing business involving racially-based exploitation, the cooptation of the proposed U.C. Peace Institute, and a lack of attention to high-growth departments like computer science, business econ and engineering and many more serious problems go begging for solutions while we fritter away precious time and money undermining our own credibility. We voted in November on Nicaragua and other aspects of foreign policy.

We vote again this spring on campus policies. Look into which reps support different bills. (Maybe ask the Daily Nexus to publish who votes for what each week like the Santa Barbara News-Press does for City Council...) As Patricia Ramirez urged recently in the Daily Nexus, let your reps know what you want council to do. We have a democracy if we want one.

Peggy Bado

Pipeline

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I read everywhere that now the sanctions have been lifted on the Soviet pipeline, U.S. relations with Europe will be back to normal. This is wishful thinking because:

1) Reagan insists that sanctions were lifted because of an incoming "historical" agreement on technological transfers to the U.S. This agreement exists only in Mr. Reagan's blabber which itself has the purpose to cover up the fact he is the loser in the story. But Europeans do not like to be taken for fools (wiz. Britain and France's declarations on the matter).

2) The embargo, which was imposed while contracts had already been signed with USSR (thus in violation of international trade practice) has proven U.S. companies to be potentially unreliable. Europeans will now try to rely on their own technology, or if unavailable, on the Japanese, hence loosening the (already strained) economic ties with the U.S.

As far as I am concerned, and as a European, this crisis was all for the best. It was high time the U.S. be shown that European policies are determined in Brussels and Strasbourg, not in Washington and that Atlantic Alliance policies are discussed in common not imposed by ukases.

Black Commentary

Appointment

By DR. MELVIN DONALSON

Presently, there exists an unwritten rule which requires that members of the Black Studies Department possess a Joint Appointment with a second, "traditional" department. If a Black Studies Professor does not attain such an appointment, he/she can not move into a ladder-rank position; a position which initiates the process towards attaining tenure at the university. If the Joint Appointment is not received, the Black Studies Professor becomes a temporary and, sometimes, part-time instructor. In addition, he/she remains ineligible for certain financial support and release-time necessary to complete scholarly research and writing.

Last spring, the Black Studies Department, in association with the Chicano Studies Department, completed an inquiry — entitled "Joint Appointment, An Evaluation Study And Suggestions" — which assessed the impact of the Joint Appointment since its 1968 inception. The Study asseverated that "though created with good intentions" by the administration, the Joint Appointment produced "adverse effects" upon individual professors and the department as a whole.

According to the study, individual professors pursuing a Joint Appointment confronted "indifference" and "hostility" from the "traditional" department in regards to the hiring process, efforts at retaining a position, and promotions. Black Studies professors have endured agonizing, exhausting struggles to secure Joint Appointments and to be recognized for the scholars that they are.

As for the effects upon the department, the "arbitrary imposition" of the Joint Appointment gives Black Studies the "appearance of a program instead of a department." Consequently, Black Studies seems to lack "credibility, prestige, and integrity."

The study concluded with a program of ideas and suggestions for correcting the problems which have resulted from the Joint Appointment process. The study, dated June 30, was forwarded to Chancellor Robert Huttenback via the vice chancellor and the dean of the College of Letters and Science. At present, a formal response has not been received by the Black Studies Department.

However, the primary question for this writer is, why? Why must Black Studies professors — as opposed to History, Sociology, Music, or English professors — obtain Joint Appointments? Is the Joint Appointment a condition which has to be, or is it a matter of university hypocrisy?

Having observed the impact of this unwritten rule for a third year, evidence suggests that the Joint Appointment is, basically, a hypocritical treatment of Black professors at UCSB. And, of the numerous conclusions deduced from that evidence, two egregious factors surface as primary issues — departmental legitimacy and academic double standards.

The issue of departmental legitimacy was addressed in a previous BLACK COMMENTARY article, entitled "Black Studies and Academic Integrity" (11/19/82). In short, the administration attributes a lesser merit and value to Black Studies than it does to "traditional" departments. Inextricably bound to that classification is the disrespect for the departmental autonomy of Black Studies. For example, in a recent case, a "traditional" department refused a Joint Appointment to a candidate, deciding the professor showed no potential for scholarly writing. That same candidate, however, was evaluated as a promising scholar by the Black Studies Department. Without a thorough investigation, the administration upheld the former decision, stating that the departmental autonomy of the "traditional" department could not be challenged. Implicit in that statement was the blatant denial of the departmental autonomy of Black Studies.

The same case above underscores the academic double standards which pervade "traditional" departments. When the candidate was presented to yet another department, the Joint Appointment was denied because the candidate researched and taught Black American literature — which was derided as "too specialized." This academic double standard, in its various forms, stigmatizes Black Studies as an insignificant discipline simply because it is Black Studies.

There are other examples and cases, similar to the above, which astound logical thought. The Joint Appointment surfaces as merely a symptom of deeper institutional and political issues. Although established as one method of Affirmative Action, the Joint Appointment actually functions as a deleterious rule which cripples the growth of Black Studies. Significantly, it serves as a hypocritical crutch, allowing the administrative and departmental powers-that-be to limp along slowly in an insincere commitment to Black Studies, and, consequently, to the university community.

Dr. Melvin Donalson is a Visiting Lecturer in the Black Studies Department.

Plight of the Palestinians

By RABBI KERRY BAKER

The United Nations designated Nov. 29 as a day of remembrance of the tragedy of the Palestinian people. It also has become a traditional time to blame the entire plight of the Palestinians on the creation of the State of Israel. On Nov. 29, 1947 the United Nations voted to divide Palestine into a Jewish and an Arab state, a proposal accepted by the Jews and rejected by the Arabs. It is high time that we focused upon the true tragedy of the Palestinian people: 45 years of opportunities for establishing their own homeland lost through Arab intransigence and rejectionism.

There were chances for a Palestinian state long before the partition vote of 1947. Ten years earlier, the Arabs rejected a British report calling for the division of Palestine into two states, one Jewish and one Arab. Continued Arab revolts against the British resulted in the deaths of many Jews and Arab moderates. Most importantly, a chance for a Palestinian state was lost, and a tragic precedent was set.

In 1947 the United Nations General Assembly voted 33-13 to divide Palestine into two states, one Jewish and one Arab. This was to satisfy the national aspirations of both peoples, but again the Arabs refused to compromise. Instead, five Arab armies launched an invasion to claim all of Palestine for themselves. Their efforts to do so failed; in fact, much of the proposed Palestinian homeland was seized by Egypt and Jordan, and another chance for a Palestinian homeland was lost through Arab stubbornness.

This pattern continued through three more wars over 30 years: fight a war to claim all of Palestine, suffer military defeat and loss of territory, and then maintain that Israeli "imperialism" has "annexed" land given to the Palestinians under earlier settlements — in short, "No fault" warfare!

No one has suffered more under this policy of Arab leadership than the Palestinian refugees themselves. They have been exploited mercilessly by both the PLO and Arab governments. This has happened in many ways and for many reasons.

For example, there has been little if any effort by the Arabs to resettle Palestinian refugees within their own vast countries. Instead, they are left in squalid refugee camps in Jordan, Lebanon and Syria. Some of these countries actually deny citizenship to those refugees wanting to resettle. In spite of vast Arab oil wealth, financial support for the refugees has been thrown largely upon the international community. The United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA), whose largest contributor is the United States, has been responsible for the majority of the refugee support.

There have been two major reasons for this Arab exploitation of the Palestinians. First, they provide a useful propaganda tool. By focusing debate on the plight of these poor, homeless people, Arab governments and the PLO have been able to shift attention away from other, more serious causes of Middle East instability, such as inter-Arab conflicts exemplified by the Iran/Iraq war. Indeed, the PLO's Khalid Fahoum recently said so in an October Washington Post story.

Second, it is unclear whether the Arabs actually want a third state in Palestine, or are merely paying lip service to the concept of Palestinian nationalism to prop up their propaganda campaign. There could have been a Palestinian homeland on the West Bank and Gaza established when both were in Arab hands from 1948 until 1967. Instead, these lands were annexed by Jordan and Egypt. Moreover, approximately 80 percent of the original Palestine lies in the Jordan of today, ample room for a Palestinian homeland.

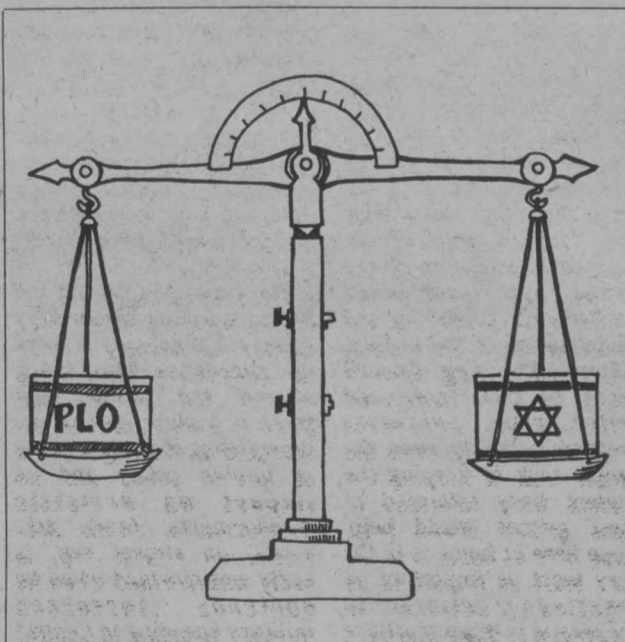

There may be good reason for the reluctance of Arab governments to set up such a state. Arab leaders fear that a Palestinian state dominated by the PLO would be a base for revolutions in their own countries. Nervous looks have been cast at PLO involvement in the Iranian revolution, the to threaten with assassination any Palestinian participating in the peace process. The PLO has in fact assassinated Palestinian leaders who have spoken out for peace, such as the Imam of Gaza, whom they murdered in 1979. So much for democracy and freedom of speech.

Of course, such rejection of compromise proposals that held out the prospect of peace is a long-standing policy of not only the PLO, but also of the Haj Aminist group that preceded it as the leading faction in the Palestinian nationalist movement. After eliminating more moderate groups, such as the Nashashibis, in bloody internecine warfare, the Haj Aminists established the policy of total rejection in spurning the partition proposals of 1937 and 1947. The PLO has consistently reaffirmed this policy of "no negotiations, no compromise and no recognition" vis-a-vis Israel. As recently as September of this year, Yassir Arafat specifically excluded U.N. resolutions 242 and 336 from those which the PLO accepted. These resolutions recognize the State of Israel and call for the return of "territories," but not "all territories," that is, a compromise solution. In an Oct. 1 interview in the Arabic newspaper Al-Hawadith, Hani Al-Hasan, a member of the Fatah Central Committee and political advisor to Arafat, stated: "The principal area for armed action now is the territories occupied by the Zionist enemy, that is the whole of Palestine...I would say that anyone who compromises on this issue will no longer be a Fatah member. The second principle in our policy is that we as Fatah members will not recognize Israel...What is important about the Fez conference is that it has brought all the Arabs together in a single political framework in order to confront the Israeli existence."

It is this intransigence and exploitation of the Palestinian people, as David Pryce-Jones has pointed out in the New Republic, that have led to the tragic plight of the Palestinians. It is somewhat ironic that these terms are applied on a regular basis to Israel, which throughout this time period compromised and sacrificed much in the quest for peace. In returning the Sinai to Egypt, for example, Israel gave up the Abu Rudeis oil fields, which Israel itself had developed, and with them more than 60 percent of its energy supply. We Americans have a great compassion for the homeless and the oppressed no matter where they may be, and so, quite rightly, we are concerned with the situation of the Palestinians. But it is high time that we recognized that the greatest victimizers of the Palestinian people, the most misguided betrayers of the Palestinian dream, are not the Israelis, but the PLO and other extremist, rejectionist Palestinian "leaders." It is time now to let fact, not propaganda, inform our compassion for the Palestinian people and our misunderstanding of the tragedy they have endured.

revolutionary war training received by PLO operators in the Soviet Union, and the role of PLO forces in the "civil wars" in Jordan and Lebanon.

The PLO has exploited the Palestinian situation as well. Another chance for statehood was lost through the rejection of the Egyptian-Israeli Peace Treaty of 1979, which would have led to West Bank autonomy and eventual self-determination for the Palestinians. The PLO went so far as

Discrimination: Not Very Funny

By JOYCE KAPLAN

I have always had a great sense of humor. I've considered it one of my greatest assets, and have utilized it whenever possible. But one night several weeks ago for the first time since I can remember, nothing seemed funny.

It happened, of all places, at the Tournee of Animation, an intriguing show of award-winning cartoons.

I guess I first got a bit irritated at the biography on the woman cartoonist. In this film she is explaining her work, which is very detailed and complex; she is obviously a very talented artist. "I work all day in a dark room without windows," she says, "and I love it." The audience got quite a laugh out of that one. A woman working in a dark room all day naturally gets associated with a prostitute.

I myself did not see what was so humorous. Here is a professional woman, intelligently discussing her work, and she gets degraded by the audience (chiefly composed of young adults) to the role of a prostitute. What if a man had said what she did? The answer is really self-evident: no one would have seen reason to laugh.

The next thing that irked me was a cartoon portraying the start of human life. The gods (all men, of course) are speaking with Adam and the snake when Eve, with an apron on, tries to get in on the conversation. "Go back to your apple turnover!" the snake growls at her, causing her to scamper away (amidst the laughter of the audience).

It turns out that this cartoon is portraying the powers and dangers of fire. Socially beneficial, right? Did it benefit women to have this wife figure standing there in her apron, letting her husband scream at her — or, again in her apron, to be ironing while her husband, in his business suit, watches TV? As the audience laughed at the dopey woman's antics, the tears rolled down my cheeks.

The images flashed through my mind: being called "little girl" even now, in my '20s; talking to men with my boyfriend by my side and, even though I participate in the conversation, my boyfriend is the one who gets eye contact, and all responses to my questions are directed to him; feeling the terror when I'd been jogging longer than I thought and was suddenly alone in the darkness; my mother giving me advice on talking to men ("Just ask them about cars, dear. Men love to talk, it's the woman's job to just listen"); the recent Blondie comic strip where Blondie tells her husband, "Honey, it's your job to earn money... it's my job to spend it."

Stereotypes and discrimination are so real, even these days when you can see a woman working away right there with the men in the ads and the media. Although it's not highly publicized, women are still getting only about 60 cents to every dollar that men make in similar jobs. It's tough being in the age of transition, where we're not quite equal in the world's eyes and yet where we supposedly have the chance to fight and gain the equality. But how do you fight a whole attitude — one that many people still hold onto, whether for lack of interest, need for status quo, or simply ignorance?

It helps to laugh. But for me, discrimination is just not very funny.

The Editorials Department of the Daily Nexus is searching for an Assistant Editorials Editor to work approximately 15-20 hours per week starting next quarter. The job is a salaried position and includes exposure to many aspects of the Nexus publication: lay-out, reading and choosing letters to the editor, headline writing, copyreading, and most importantly, writing editorials.

Since the Assistant Editorials Editor will be expected to write one column editorial every day, four days a week, applicants must have the ability to write well under the pressure of deadlines. Although previous journalism experience is not necessary, applicants must either submit a writing sample or be prepared to write on an assigned topic as part of the application procedure.

If you are interested, contact Dan Miller by telephone (961-2693 or 685-2915) or come by the office located underneath Storke Tower. (Leave a message in his box if he is not there.) Applicants are encouraged to apply as early as possible.

Rape

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I would like to compliment Mickey Crabtree on her 11/18 article, "A Rude Awakening Into Reality." There are a few ideas however, that I would like to express. When saying, "However, by suppressing the fact that she has been raped, the victim reinforces two common myths about sexual assaults," blame is placed on the survivor for not reporting the assault. Ms. Crabtree states again that "Victims must step forward in order to protect themselves and other women from such criminals." Rape survivors however, are not responsible to protect the rest of the world and they should not have to feel guilty for not stepping forward. Survivors should be encouraged to obtain counseling, medical assistance, and more information concerning their options as rape survivors so that they can make their own decisions based on what is best for them.

Regarding precautions against rape, Ms. Crabtree wrote "Avoid dark and secluded areas. Walk or ride your bike on well lit, well traveled paths." I would like to emphasize the fact that FBI statistics show that 50 percent of all rapes occur in one's own home and 85 percent are acquaintance rapes (the survivor and the rapist are friends or acquaintances). Special precautions should therefore be taken at home also.

A small but important point is when referring to sexual assault, the word "survivor" should be used instead of "victim" since it is much more positive.

Please note that the Santa Barbara Rape Crisis Center is located in Santa Barbara, not Goleta. The SBRCC has a 24-hour crisis hotline: 569-2255. The office is located at 423 W. Victoria St. and the office phone number is 963-6832. Services include crisis counseling and emotional support for survivors, complete information about what medical care survivors need and where to get it, accompanying victims through the medical exam and/or legal system, information and support for the survivors' families and friends to help them understand how the survivor feels and how they can help, and referrals to professionals and services outside the center that would further serve survivors. Please use these services.

Review

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I take strong exception to Arts Editor Jonathan Alburger's review of "The Hasty Heart" which ran on Thursday, Nov. 18. I saw the play, and some of his criticisms were valid but his comments on the performance of the lead character, Lachlen McLachlen, showed ignorance and irresponsibility. He did not criticize anything valid; in fact, he claimed the role was played "... with conviction," and that Kortick was "... vocally perfect" but then went on to make cruel, snide comments about the actor's height and "muscle." To quote, "the man is marginally anorexic and barely five feet tall" and not believable as a "rugged outdoorsman." Setting aside the fact that I found Mr. Kortick's performance to be completely believable and very powerful, I should point out that he also happened to be physically perfect for the role. If Mr. Alburger had taken the time to read the script, (instead of comparing this production to the L.A. one) he would have found this description of Lachlen McLachlen: "He is very slight of build, about 21, and seems smaller than a soldier should be." Some "rugged outdoorsman." Also, Lachlen has been dying of uremic poisoning for about three weeks as the play opens, after being confined to a military hospital for emergency surgery for removal of a kidney. Not exactly the kind of physical condition that makes you want to get out and pump iron, is it?

In my opinion, the fact that this kind of uninformed, thoughtless criticism is being foisted on Nexus readers by the Arts Editor is appalling and speaks very poorly for the paper as a whole. Alburger obviously cared more about making irrelevant, wise-ass comments attacking an actor than honestly reviewing the show. Get someone knowledgeable and responsible to review theater; I love theater, and want and appreciate legitimate criticism. But please spare me (and others) the insensitive remarks of a man who does not know what he is talking about, and worse, does not seem to care to know.

Cris Cassell

Editor's note: Jonathan Alburger is not the Nexus Arts Editor. That position is held by Barbara Postman; Mr. Alburger occupies the post of Managing Editor.

Minority

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I am a student representative to the Student Affirmative Action Five Year Planning Committee. The committee is currently working on a five year plan that would increase the enrollment of minority students at this university over a period of the next five years. This SAA five year plan exists throughout the other U.C. campuses.

The past five year plan did not do too much for minority students and I am looking forward to seeing that this plan does not become a total disaster. The committee itself is composed of staff, faculty, and administrators who appear to be concerned. I hope in this plan we will all agree that it be specific and detail the goals which we are seeking: improved recruitment and definite retention. There are other people who are working effectively on this plan which is something we've been needing for a long time. The deadline for this plan is April 1, 1983.

Movie

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I can't believe I almost missed Not A Love Story. Billed as an x-rated movie playing at the Magic Lantern in I.V., I initially dismissed it as your average porn.

Not A Love Story is anything but average. In fact, it's an excellent documentary dealing with the way women are exploited by all aspects of pornography. It also touches on the degradation of men in pornography, a $5 billion industry to date.

The movie speaks for itself and I highly recommend it to those of you opposed to pornography, those who attend x-rated movies, as well as those who are indifferent.

Student Is Arrested In Connection With UCSB Conga Drum Robbery

By GREGORY McMORROW
Nexus Staff Writer

A 20-year-old male UCSB student was arrested at his Isla Vista residence Tuesday in connection with the burglary of two conga drums, taken Nov. 23 from the Lotte Lehmann Concert Hall located in UCSB's Music Building, University Police said.

Alan Edelman was taken into custody for suspicion of burglary and possession of stolen property by police Tuesday morning.

UCSB police officer Mark Gallagher approached Edelman the night of Nov. 23 as Edelman was leaving the Music Building with the drums in his possession, Lieutenant John MacPherson said.

Edelman provided identification and was not detained because he said the drums were his. The theft became apparent after Gallagher made inquiries inside the Music Building.

The drums were valued at $200. Edelman is being held at the Santa Barbara County Jail on $2,500 bond.

A 21-year-old Isla Vista man, who police described as a transient, was arrested Monday in connection with the Nov. 26 burglary of two guitars from a residence in the 6700 block of Trigo Road in Isla Vista.

Michael Wayne Shaw was taken into custody by officers of the I.V. Foot Patrol for suspicion of burglary, grand theft and receiving stolen property, Deputy Sheriff Jim Drinkwater said.

The police, acting on an anonymous tip, located one of the guitars in an apartment in the 700 block of Camino Pescadero. As police were leaving the apartment, Shaw was seen entering the complex. Shaw was arrested and taken to the Foot Patrol office where he admitted taking the guitars, Deputy Sheriff Emmet Darbyshire said.

The guitars were a 1967 Gibson Les Paul and a Martin acoustic. Police said the guitars are worth $450 each.

Shaw is being held at the Santa Barbara County Jail with bail set at $5,000.

An unidentified lone gunman held up McDonald's restaurant at 146 S. Fairview in Goleta Monday night, and got away with an indeterminate amount of cash, Drinkwater said.

The man, described as being of Mexican or Oriental descent, 20-25 years old, 5'5", and approximately 120 pounds, entered the McDonald's brandishing a blue steel .38 calibre revolver and ordered the employees to give him the money from the cash registers.

Drinkwater said, "At this point there seems to be no connection to the Nov. 7 holdup of Wendy's restaurant on Hollister.

Santa Barbara County Deputy Sheriff Jeff Meyer arrested a 32-year-old man, who police described as being transient, in connection with the burglary of an automobile which was parked at the Mobil gasoline station at Glenn Annie and Storke Road, police said.

Raymond Ray Richardson was taken into custody at 2 a.m. Tuesday when Meyer observed him "rummaging around in a parked car," Drinkwater said.

Upon approaching Richardson, Meyer noticed that the driver's side window had been shattered. After he had determined that the car was not Richardson's, Meyer made the arrest.

Richardson is being held in Santa Barbara County Jail in lieu of $5,000 bail.

Goleta Cited As Probable Nuclear Attack Target

By BRIAN COCHRAN
Nexus Staff Writer

Increasing tension between the U.S. and the USSR has led the federal government to start planning for what had been called the "unthinkable" civilian survival in a nuclear war. The present civil defense plan is called Crisis Relocation Planning.

Goleta Valley has been called a "prime target" for nuclear attack, by County Supervisor Bill Wallace and Emergency Services Officer George Silva. Wallace stated that this is due to military research being conducted in this area and Silva mentioned both Raytheon Co. and Goleta Airport as possible specific targets.

Goleta is also in a poor position in this regard because it is located between a major population center (Los Angeles) and a military installation (Vandenberg).

Sergeant Lorri Wray of the Vandenberg Public Affairs Office explained that the goal of the base's nuclear disaster plan is to protect base personnel and also to provide aid to

Nuclear Attacks

The Crisis Relocation Planning (CRP) is under the authority of the Federal Emergency Planning Agency and attempts to develop a plan whereby large numbers of people (up to 145 million) would be removed from areas designated as "prime targets" to presumably safer locations known as "host areas." Prime targets are generally considered to be larger cities and military installations.

By FEMA's own admission, the effectiveness of the plan depends on how much advance notice the general public is given. FEMA claims that the plan will work effectively provided that "the week or more needed to execute evacuation plans and develop fallout protection for evacuees was available; a timely decision was made to activate the plans; people generally cooperated in the evacuation movement; and other actions associated with the CRP worked effectively."

FEMA estimated that L.A. and San Francisco would take three to four days longer to evacuate than the three-day period allowed for most cities. Silva stated that the success of the plan "depends on solving the major problem of regional control." Since there are four to five major county governments and scores of city governments in Southern California, the opportunity for confusion is great.

Wallace stated that while the federal government has proposed the CRP, "There is no definite plan; it is nothing more than dots on a map." He also stated that he believed "planning for a nuclear war is a joke and the money is better spent elsewhere."

This sentiment was echoed by Dr. Leigh Whitney M.D., a member of Physicians for Social Responsibility, a nationwide organization of physicians and dentists. He doesn't believe that there is any value in the plan, pointing out that radiation effects are very long-lasting and that most survivors would have nothing to come out of evacuation to.

"The living would envy the dead," Whitney said. The PFSR voted to endorse the nuclear freeze initiative in the November election.

Silva agreed, however, with FEMA that this plan is better than no civil defense at all. FEMA went even further in claiming that without this plan we could have a national survival rate of less than 20 percent, but with this plan, administered effectively, the survival rate could be as high as 80 percent.

Alternative Energy: Wind Draws Experts To Peking

By ALISON GIESE
Nexus Staff Writer

Environmental Studies Professor Melvyn Manalis recently participated in the panel discussions of the First U.S.-China Conference on Energy, Resources and Environment in Peking. Manalis was a participant because of his outstanding contribution to the energy fields, specifically in the fields of wind and solar energy conversion.

The object of the conference, which ran from Nov. 7-12, was to provide an international forum for scientists and engineers from academic, research and industrial organizations to exchange views and information about converting potential energy of natural resources into energy for daily needs.

"I learned of the conference in early October and got in touch with the chair, S.W. Yuan. They needed someone to talk on wind and I was able to go because of grants I have here on campus," Manalis said.

Manalis was the only person from Santa Barbara to attend the conference, but several professors from U.C. San Diego and U.C. Berkeley, as well as other Americans in the energy field, participated in the five-day event.

Melvyn Manalis

NEXUS/Dave Karow

According to Manalis, the conference was held because the Chinese are interested in energy. They plan on economic growth by the year 2000, and an increase in their gross national product is a function of energy. They would like to take proper account of energy sources and the way to use energy.

"The Chinese are interested in learning about all aspects of energy production and uses. China has big wind resources in southeast China and north China," Manalis explained.

During the conference, Manalis presented a paper entitled "Cost-Effective Stand-Alone Systems for Wind Energy Analysis," a summary of work that he is now doing at UCSB.

In the paper he stated that he has been analyzing wind energy "using a strategic plan for the assessment of wind potential at 30 sites throughout the State of California, and the modification and utilization of stand-alone systems for wind energy analysis... When properly designed and installed this system becomes a highly cost-effective method for gathering and analyzing wind data. This system can be made even more cost-effective by utilizing it to analyze and ultimately calibrate biogeophysical indicators."

"The conference gave me insight into the wind field and overall knowledge of the energy field," Manalis said. "There were two reports on wind from the Chinese on the development of small, 25-kilowatt windmills using methodology similar to that of the United States. The Chinese are extremely up to date because of reading literature."

Unofficially, there is talk that another conference of this type will be held in two years. Nineteen countries were represented at this year's conference and Manalis was able to make important contacts.

"Interaction with the Chinese and Americans enabled seeds to be set for additional collaboration for alternate energy sources in China," he said. "I have also been invited to speak in Puerto Rico in April by the head of the Energy Institute there."

Manalis said the whole experience of being in China was fascinating. Along with attending the conference, during his 19-day trip he traveled to many parts of the country.

"It was nip and tuck whether I would go, I had to get someone to take my teaching position, but I found being in the environment of China a new and exciting experience: new food, new people, art. It was extremely interesting," Manalis said.

He is committed to working with Third World countries such as China so that they can become self-sufficient in alternate energy.

"I have a sincere commitment to the Third World so that they can pull themselves up instead of dumping technology on them," Manalis explained. "It starts with auditing energy resources such as wind. How much is there? How much is the country capable of using? What is the cost effectiveness? The Chinese are concerned with increasing their energy supply with environmental constraints."

Manalis has been working in energy since

UCSB Professor Claims Iran Persecutes Baha'is

By BRENDA WALKER
Nexus Staff Writer

The Baha'i of Iran, an independent religion, have been the target of a new wave of genocide perpetrated by the current Khomeini regime, according to UCSB religious studies professor Robert Gordon-McCutchan.

The persecution, started by the Persian government, began in 1844 when the Baha'i religion was founded and has continued for over 150 years.

According to Gordon-McCutchan, the current regime has denounced the Baha'is as heretics, forced them out of jobs and oppressed them.

In a newsletter, the Baha'i of Santa Barbara explained that "confiscation of property, bank accounts, with no recompense, burning and looting of homes, officially sanctioned executions of innocent victims, are taking place everywhere (in Iran), in the streets, in the market place and in the homes. The Baha'is are harassed, beaten, abused and killed. Sometimes husband and wife together, or an entire family, or a group of close friends are chosen at random at the whim of the killers because they are Baha'is."

"The moslems believe that we pose a religious threat," Karen Broumand, a Baha'i living in Santa Barbara, said. "They claim that the Baha'is have a political inclination and are trying to undermine the government. This is ridiculous and unfounded since our laws say that we must stay out of politics. We may vote but it must be non-partisan because Baha'is want the world to unite and a party affiliation would create a division into groups and that is contrary to our goal of uniting humanity."

Gordon-McCutchan said that the Baha'is are committed to the ultimate unification of humanity. He said that their prophet, Bah'u'llah, preached "one God and one world," and said, "The world is one country and mankind is its citizens."

The Baha'i religion was founded by Bab, who rejected the literal interpretation of the Koran and made a prophecy that there would be a coming of the Mahdi who would bring a new law and start a new era for mankind, Gordon-McCutchan explained. Bab was accused of heresy by the Persian government and was executed in 1850. One of his leading disciples, Bah'u'llah, claimed that he was the Mahdi and wrote the books that are now the religious doctrines of the Baha'is.

Morris Sabhani, the vice chair of the Baha'is of Santa Barbara/Goleta said, "We believe in one God and that all religions are from one source, and that each new religion that arose in the past, like Christianity and Buddhism, have come about as an improvement on the old religion, to accommodate the needs and changes of the

Religious Studies Found Only On UCSB Campus

By ANN WILLIAMS
Nexus Staff Writer

UCSB has the only Religious Studies Department in the entire U.C. system. The department began as a program in 1962, and has evolved to its present point of international prominence.

"Religious studies as an intellectual discipline has come into its own in the last 25 years, Department Chair Dr. Richard Comstock said. "UCSB utilized great foresight and religious studies became a department in 1964. Since that time we've added a number of very able scholars, some young and recently published, and others with an international reputation."

According to Comstock, UCSB is also distinguished because "We are fortunate enough to have a very able group of scholars representing both the eastern and western religions." Among the internationally-recognized professors are Dr. Robert S. Michaelson, Dr. Raimundo Panikkar, and Dr. Ninian Smart.

Dr. Phillip E. Hammond thinks that the department is well-known because the faculty is well-known. "The faculty have gained their rapport from the quality and quantity of published work, from the unusual character of some of that work, and from the length of time they've been publishing," he said.

He added, "All of the other things professors do, much of which is required — lecture, counsel students, advise each other — these things also go on here but do nothing to enhance the international reputation."

The eminence of the staff naturally attracts many graduate students each year — many more than can be accepted. The master of arts program is nonspecialized and designed for those who wish to develop a basic background in religious studies. From it, one may easily go on to the doctorate degree as well as pursuing another field of study. The department is based on the idea that a major in religious studies "exposes the student to the diversity within cultural situations. The major is an excellent background for careers in government service, medicine, law, teaching, social work, and business."

Until recently, the doctorate degree was mainly used for teaching at the university level. However, in the last couple of years, the job market has been so tight that it is difficult to place a student. Reacting to this situation, Comstock said that the department "warns a prospective student that the job market is bad. There are, however, many students who want to study religion for its intrinsic value."

Newly-Formed Education Program Cited As Bike Committee Goal

By CARSON BECKER
Nexus Staff Writer

The newly-formed chancellor's advisory committee on bicycle safety, which addresses the ongoing problems of bicycle traffic on campus, will hold its second meeting next Thursday.

The committee was formed by Dr. John Baumann, who chairs the committee. Baumann was appointed by Chancellor Huttenback when the seriousness of the bike hazards on campus were brought to his attention. Baumann was asked to put together a committee to address the problems. The committee is comprised of faculty, staff, students and advisors who will combine their ideas and knowledge to come up with some solutions to the transportation problems.

The committee is a "reconstitution" of the bike safety organization that was in effect two years ago, according to Bill Steinmetz of Environmental Health and Safety. The organization was eliminated along with many other groups due to budget cuts. To get the committee reinstated there needed to be an agreeable justification of its existence. "Only the Environmental Health and Safety felt that the (bike safety) committee was necessary. I think it was a bad decision to have it canceled. But now we're getting back on the track," Steinmetz said.

After the previous bike safety committee was canceled, the job of preventative safety measures was given to the transportation and parking patrol. "That wasn't very effective. They already had enough patrolling to do," Steinmetz said.

According to Jeff Chung, Environmental Health and Safety technologist, during this past seven weeks there have been 120 recorded bike accidents. These accidents have required immediate medical attention and care. Last year's statistics show that during the whole year there were about 290 accidents of the same type. In just seven weeks the campus has had almost half the number of accidents that occurred in the entire 1981-82 school year. When this was brought to Huttenback's attention he agreed that something should be done immediately to stop further disaster.

Baumann explained that at the first meeting, a "variety of methods and viable recommendations for bicycle safety," were discussed. They put the varying subjects into categories which were listed as short-range and long-range projects. The immediate action taken will be to make an extensive review of the bike paths and regulations. The entire mapping of the system, including the instructional markings and provisions, will be evaluated. The Community Service Organization has put out a new bicycle rule book that points out the present dangers and regulations. It is an improved revision of the previous one.

Long-range goals are to establish an effective bicycle safety program for students, including the history of the bicycle and a review of effective safety precautions. The committee is planning to take a scrutinizing look at the bicycle system as a whole, and hopes to discover the areas that most need changing.

Chung explained that one possible reason for the increased number of bike accidents is the increase in enrollment. This year there are over 16,000 students enrolled. Since this is only Fall quarter, many students are not yet familiar with the bike paths and necessary precautions that can and should be taken. "We're taking a multi-faceted approach to the problem," Chung said. "We want to discover new programs that can be implemented in each department to help prevent the problems. Things are proving to be very productive. I'm optimistic about the effectiveness of the committee."

Tony Dahlerbruch, A.S. off-campus rep and one of the student members of the committee, described the first meeting as a "setting up of objectives." He said their first step is to look at all the data and statistics and then come up with an updated comprehensive evaluation of the current bike hazards. From there, they hope to approach the system as a whole and "redo" what needs to be done. "This is a good committee with a lot of competent people," Dahlerbruch said.

Steinmetz thinks that the new committee on bike safety will be more effective than the previous one. "There has been an inundation of suggestions. There is such apparent enthusiasm. I think the fact that the chancellor appointed this committee gives it a sense of credibility." He added that funds for the committee are low, and that this is a concern. "The question for the future is what can be done without a budget? But the committee's cohesiveness will take care of the immediate things, to be sure the pot holes will be taken care of," he said.

Campus Police Chief Randy Lingle, who is a member of the committee, said "I find this a very refreshing group. At the meeting, everyone spoke openly and eagerly. A definite common identification on needs and goals was exhibited." Lingle said that the meeting next week will provide a better reference base for the committee, since at last week's meeting everyone was given a research assignment for this next meeting. "Bike safety is a big problem. Everyone here is ready to participate in all the topics and issues submitted."

Baumann sees the "potential and positiveness" of the group as an influential establishment. "Everyone on the committee is truly interested in bike safety. We hope to establish, enact and enforce many preventions to stop the bike problems here on campus," Baumann concluded.

SBPC May Add Student Regent

policy comes out as it does," Schmitt said.

"However, this does not guarantee that the student regent will advocate the student view," Schmitt said. "There is no way to guarantee that. The whole point of regents is that they have no ties or constituents, so they can think of their own free will."

Sabo said she supports the SBPC's effort to improve the line of communication both for her and for future student regents. She called it "a move in the right direction," but said, "I'm not sure if it's enough. In reality it still has some problems in terms of accountability. However, it makes the student regent more accountable than has been (true) in the past or is now."

In addition to increasing the communication with the student regent, the SBPC is calling for changes in the procedure for the selection of student regents. "Having ultimate control, in the selection of the student regent" is the aim of two resolutions, which will be presented for approval to the regents at their meeting in January, Schmitt said. These two resolutions would change the selection procedure for the student regents.

Under one of these resolutions, the SBPC would submit one candidate's name to the regents. If they rejected this choice, one additional candidate could be chosen. Currently, three candidate's names are submitted to the regents. They choose the student regent from these.

"Regents always have the ultimate decision, but this would give students far more control (in the selection process)," Schmitt said.

In the other resolution, two students, probably one undergraduate and one graduate, who are not members of SBPC, would be allowed to sit in on the selection committee, Schmitt said. Even though these students wouldn't be members of the committee and couldn't vote, they would be allowed to submit selection criteria so that "continuity in criteria" would be ensured, Schmitt said, although selection criteria is not always well-defined on the student regent selection committees.

If the ex-officio membership clause is passed at SBPC's January meeting, it will then be routed back to the SBPC campus representatives for approval, Spaulding explained. If it is approved then it will be written into the SBPC charter.

Schmitt believes the campus representatives "should vote in favor. I cannot see any reason why they wouldn't if they understand the reasons behind them."

According to Schmitt, the SBPC has not yet contacted Alumni Regent Shirley Conner about also becoming an ex-officio member but has left open the wording so that "alumni regent" can be added to "student regent" in the clause.

President Selection Committee...

mittee in a presentation to the regents at their last meeting. "The conclusion must be that the chairman had so many well-qualified potential committee members that he felt it recommendable to dispense with membership for the student and alumni regents," Johnson said at the meeting.

"At this point, Chairman Regent Glenn Campbell broke in and said, 'Yes, that's right,'" Johnson said. "Regent Dean Watkins (chair of the presidential selection committee), also said, 'We've bent over backwards to accommodate the students.' Then some of the other regents agreed and patted each other on the back," he said.

Johnson pointed out that the SBPC amendment "isn't such a radical change." He said it's similar to the policy on another regental committee, the Regent's Committee on Educational Policy. On this committee, the regents' representative to the California Post-secondary Education Commission, who has been nominated from a pool of regents, is automatically an ex-officio member with a vote. The state superintendent of public instruction is a regent who has a vote by virtue of his also automatic ex-officio membership.

Johnson said, "It's unrealistic for the regents to meet before their January meeting." He explained that for the amendment to pass in time, the regents' special committee would have to decide on the Thursday of the Thursday-Friday January meeting to present the by-law amendment to the regents Friday.

On Friday, two-thirds of the regents will have to vote to waive the one-month notice that is normally required for by-law changes. After that, a two-thirds vote would be required to pass the amendment, Johnson explained.

To have a two-thirds vote, 19 regents must be present at the meeting. This is in itself difficult, Johnson said, because various groups have been trying for the last four or five months to get the by-law changes made and have been unable to because the two-thirds voting margin hasn't been present at the meetings. Sabo agreed, emphasizing that those were non-controversial by-law changes.

According to Johnson, the exact wording of the amendment has not yet been decided, but will read something like, "The student regent shall be an ex-officio member of any committee or subcommittee charged with recommending a candidate for the position of president of the university, to the board." Johnson said "alumni regent" may be included in the amendment if Alumni Regent Shirley Connor is amiable to the idea.

Because of the lack of time, Sabo commented, "I don't see that making a by-law change is going to affect me and this presidential selection, although policy-wise it is a big deal and does need to be passed...I wish this had been done last year." Johnson doesn't think the amendment will pass in time either. "I think it's unlikely. They would really have to hustle. We can certainly try...Maybe we can persuade them by having people write letters. I think the passage of the amendment will depend on the amount of concern shown."

"SBPC is exploring the possibility of getting a concurrent resolution from the state Legislature," Johnson added. This means that the Legislature would make its support for the amendment publicly known.

"If we get something like that, it'll give (our push) a little weight, because the regents are more likely to listen to the Legislature than the students, since the state Legislature decides how much money the university gets," he said.

Advocacy of the amendment by the Legislature could not be heard until sometime in January, Johnson said, because the first meeting of the legislature is not until then.

Religious Studies

 If the job market is bad, then what accounts for the growth in UCSB's Religious Studies Department? Comstock attributes this growth to two reasons. "First, there is the obvious point that education has become more expensive. Students who 10 years ago would have attended a private college now come here. The U.C. system offers the same education at less cost," he said.

As a result of the shift from private to public institutions, Comstock noted, "We're impressed not only with the quantity of students but with the quality as well."

The economic situation also contributes to Comstock's second hypothesis. "Because economic times are so bad, many persons without a career wish to prolong their schooling. The fact that it's difficult in general to find a job leaves many students available to continue their education." He added, "There is also an intrinsic interest in the subject matter."

Hammond thinks that although it may be difficult to find a job, a religious studies education is important because "religion (the sacred) is an enduring feature of life. It has been expressed historically in a number of different and interesting ways. That is much of what religious studies studies." He added, "It is also the case that the sacred is always present in some form and is always changing. As a department we try to keep track of these changes."

Comstock summed up his opinion of the import of the Religious Studies Department. "Human behavior reflects a concern with religion as much as politics, economics or art. It is not the only important aspect of human experience, yet it is clearly a pervasive goal in our life to understand man. The purpose of a liberal arts education is to understand man and the world; this cannot be achieved without the knowledge of religion."

"We aren't the center of liberal studies, but without us the mystery and wonder of being human cannot be properly understood," Comstock added.

The person most responsible for the formation of the department is D. Mackenzie Brown, a political science professor. According to Comstock, Brown's specialty was India, and he was concerned with the import of religion in politics there.

The '60s was a time of growth in California, and MacKenzie's proposal for a Religious Studies Department was thus granted.

Comstock, who received his Ph.D from Union Theological Seminary, was hired as the first full-time teacher in 1963.

Khomeini And Baha'is

 time. God said that man should not interpret his laws, that he would send a teacher. He has sent Moses, Jesus, Buddha and others, the most recent one being Bah'u'llah who came to lead mankind to the oneness of God."

Baha'is believe in the equality of men and women, that science and religion are inseparable, that there must be a universal language that would accommodate the world's needs, and that work is worship. They believe that each individual should investigate the truth for himself and not hold on to belief for the sake of tradition.

"We are not involved with the conflict in Iran. The Baha'is are innocent people that work hard and are persecuted for their faith," Sabhani said. "We are not forceful people. We want to establish peace and harmony with mankind."

Broumand said, "The '50s have brought with them a new persecution and we see these as times of gradual change. Our involvement in Iran right now is to only try to draw governmental attention to the existing problems of the Baha'i so that they will make an investigation that will lead them to make a statement against the persecutions. There is nothing we can do but hope and pray that there will be a change in the government and that our brothers and sisters will no longer have to live in constant persecution."

SUNRAE: Goleta Center...

 the I.V. Recycling Center. According to Maschke, the new center is "subsidizing" the I.V. center. In the future, the profits from the Goleta center may enable SUNRAE to enhance various other interests of the organization. In addition, SUNRAE hopes that the new center will boost local response to recycling concepts as a whole.

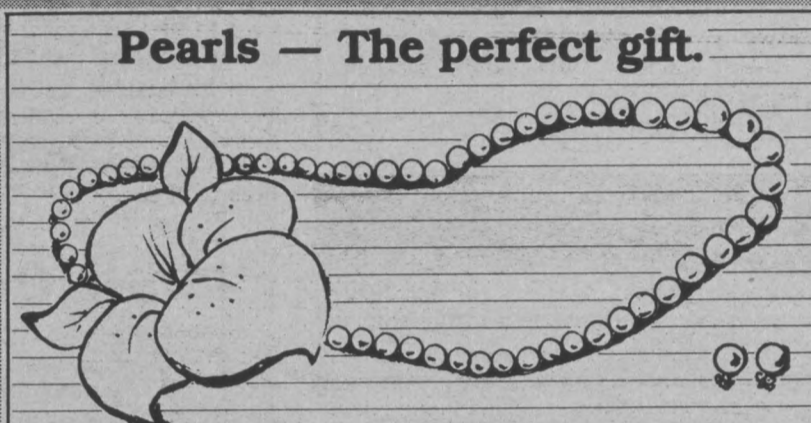

Recently, SUNRAE has had to shift its interests from a main emphasis on conversion to solar energy to greater emphasis in the recycling area of its operation. Once profits are back on the upswing, SUNRAE will once again be able to more fully act on its original objective.

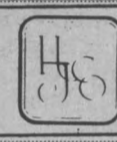

In order to obtain its goals, SUNRAE has been actively involved in solar energy legislation in Sacramento and promotes it through educational information sources.

As the SUNRAE name (Solar Use Now for Resources and Employment) suggests, the organization backs the swift change in solar energy usage in all aspects of present energy use.

A.S. Leg Council

of social responsibility.

Two subcommittees will focus on marketable equity securities and interest-bearing investments.

At the weekly meetings of the committee, non-members will be welcome and able to participate in the decision-making process. The committee, based on its assessment of the current economic situations, will make formal recommendations to A.S. Executive Director Joan Nordberg on how A.S. monies should be invested.

"This is a superb opportunity," stressed Weiss.

"I see it as a fantastic experience for students to become a part of some very real decisions about how huge sums of their money is invested. I really believe in this bill."

Leg Council also reviewed a proposed Student Outreach Board survey which will be conducted during reg packet filing next quarter. The survey is an effort by SOB to accurately assess students' opinions and priorities and publicize their findings.

Suggestions were given to Jim Lockard, Leg Council representative to Student

Outreach Board, for rewording and reorganization of priorities and emphasis. Questions on the survey are concerned with such issues as bike safety, minority student enrollment, university budget cuts, the jurisdiction of Leg Council, and the Soloman Amendment which ties draft registration to financial aid.

An expenditure by an A.S.-funded group previous to the November state elections caused Leg Council concern. Money was spent by the Friends of the River on informational pamphlets which also urged a "No on 13" vote. Friends of the River said they did not know A.S. moneies cannot be spent promoting political views, only for solely informational publications.

Discussion concerning what constitutes a political view and which A.S. groups are able to spend money promoting their political concerns followed. Leg Council voted to reimburse Frinds of the River for its expenditure, but decided that the regulations concerning such expenditures will be clarified and publicized to A.S. groups.

Leg Council also passed a bill establishing an Ad Hoc Search Committee for the newly created position of A.S. notetaking assistant.

American Indian Association...

take advantage of any Affirmative Action programs they think exist. It is for this reason that Moyle feels that the 35 Indian members on AIA are representative of the Indian student body at UCSB.

Future events planned by the Indian group include a bake sale featuring what Moyle describes as "delicious breads and pastries," all authentic American Indian foods. Upcoming events include Indian dancers, and a controversial Indian speaker, who as of yet has not been confirmed. The group also plans to represent itself on campus on International Women's Day.

To Lorena Davey, who has only been a member for a couple of months, the group's most important aspect is, "the friendship and companionship I get out of it." Another important part of being a member is the effort the members put into it. "We put lots of energy into it... everyone works hard together," Davey said.

To Linda Hughes, a member of two years, the most important aspect is the "fulfillment I get from practicing my cultural awareness. It gives me cultural pride to interact with other Indian students." Hughes also works with EOP in what she explains as a program, "concerned with the recruitment of Indian students, (which is) part of the EOP five-year Affirmative Action program."

Though the main emphasis of the American Indian Association is on re-educating the student body through such means as speakers, movies and rallies, the group clearly offers quite a lot more to both its members and the general community.

U.S.-China Conference

1973 when he received two California Energy Grants to investigate the feasibility of solar energy. Today his main emphasis is in quantifying wind resources applying electric production, water pumping and distillation.

Wind energy is a growing energy alternate here in California. According to Manalis, in 1981 seven megawatts of energy were generated. This year he projects that 60-70 megawatts will be generated and in 1983 there will be more growth.

"If you understand the nature of wind you can produce energy for hundreds of years because it is not depletable like oil. Other states such as Minnesota are looking at the potential of wind energy but none are as aggressive or ahead as the State of California," Manalis said.

Along with doing research Manalis teaches a class on solar energy in the spring, a senior thesis class and a general energy class.

Ready for Lobbying...

Council members. Marie Antonini, external president of the UCSB Graduate Students Association, explained that the purpose of the conference is "certainly educational," but panels will try to devise alternatives to cutting graduate programs.

Antonini said most of the delegates from the U.C. campuses are officers in their GSAs and "will return to their campuses with a clearer picture of how graduate education is perceived by educators, legislators, administrators and other grad students." In addition, the U.C. Student Lobby is "heavily involved." According to Antonini, U.C. Santa Cruz held the first graduate student conference last March when grad students realized that "we are a very targeted group" when it comes to budget cuts.

"We realized that we needed to convince the legislature that graduate education was vulnerable and that it was important," Antonini said.

She added that graduate students are "targeted" by the state legislature and the regents for differential fees and "program slashes."

At the graduate students' Asilomar Retreat in Pacific Grove in July of this year, it was decided to have a follow-up conference before the Legislature convenes in January in order to mobilize graduate students for a lobbying effort.

The funding for the conference has come from both UCSB and the systemwide administration. Antonini praised Simonett for his role in securing the funding at UCSB for the conference, and said he was "very instrumental in getting the funding."

Dead Week...

(Continued from pg.3) added, "There is currently a regulation work group writing a statement on dead week."

During dead week, there are only a few events planned by Arts and Lectures and no mandatory student meetings scheduled, according to David Nestor, director of the Activities Planning Center. The number of athletic events is also minimal. "The Program Board should be cautious about scheduling any events this week because attendance would likely be very low," Nestor said. "Students seem to be studying more than they have in years past. Fewer events and meetings will hopefully give students more time to really 'book it.'"

Inferfraternity Council President Rick Leiberman explained that each individual fraternity chapter has its own rules on dead week and in general they all have set quiet hours and have no activities planned. "There is a general consensus between fraternities on the purpose of dead week," Leiberman said.

ATTENTION NEXITES!

There are really no words adequate to thank you for the hard work you have all done this quarter, but I'd like to try anyway.

I know, "You're getting a raise" would be a good start, but...well, dreams are wonderful things, aren't they?

To the writers: You receive the fewest tangible rewards for the work you do, especially from harried editors who see only the problems that must be rectified. Rest assured that, without you, the paper would not exist. It's that simple. I admire the qualities that keep you going when the only reinforcement is the sense of accomplishment you feel within yourselves when you know you've done good work.

To the production staff: I know you've heard it before, but thanks for the patience to see us through the breaking-in period. Barb, Jhana, Jane and the rest of you knife-wielding paste-up folks — your dedication is remarkable. Besides that, you make those late nights bearable with your collective sense of humor.

Even if it is a little bizarre.

Finally, to my editors: We spend more time together than we do with anyone else, but no homicides have yet been reported in the office. Anyone who can figure out why we do what we do will be able to control the world, but I think it would be a hopeless endeavor. Jonathan — all work and no beer makes me very nasty. Isn't responsibility O debilitating handicap? Let's renew our formerly intimate acquaintance with the Pub. Dan: welcome aboard. You have the makings of a true Nexite. Start thinking of ed topics for January. Jackie and Vanessa — without you two flying around the place like windup furies, the office would be a quieter place. It would also be dull, and nothing would get done. Eve and Greg — despite my initial trepidations, the partnership seems to be working fine. Continue to keep things in focus for us (sorry about that). Robin and Andi: I'll miss you, but you're both making wise moves. Keep in touch. Gary — you're the only editor with a 1,000 batting average in headline writing and meeting deadlines. Find a typewriter that travels, and haul it over to the ECen for b-ball. Barb P. — the next position you take over will have to be mine, so think twice about upward mobility. It ain't all it's cracked up to be. Jean, the love of my life, I extend you special thanks for putting up with the late hours and the exhaustion. See me in private for additional expressions of similar sentiments.

To all of you I give my thanks, my wishes for a relaxing holiday break, and my assurances that it will only get better from here on out.

Of course, I have been known to err occasionally.

—John K.

Erratic Hoopsters Hope To End Season Long Slump

By DENNIS RODERICKS
Nexus Sports Writer

Still struggling to put a consistent 40-minute effort together, the UCSB women's basketball team travels to the Bay Area today to face San Jose State in the opening round of the Anheuser Busch Classic in San Jose. Stanford University and Texas Tech will battle in the first round matchup. The championship game of the two-day event is set for Friday evening.

Faced with the difficult task of beginning the 1982-83 season by playing 12 consecutive games away from home, the Gauchos will be looking to use the San Jose tourney to improve their shooting and rebounding. Erratic play has contributed to six defeats in seven contests so far in the first two weeks of the season. Last week, UCSB began a four game trip to the Southland by facing highly regarded Cal State Fullerton of the WCAA.

UCSB came into the encounter with its usual height disadvantage as the Titans featured a front line of three six-footers. The Gauchos came out cold as CSF raced to a 22-4 lead after six and one-half minutes. Led by sophomore Jody Marks, who contributed a game high of 23 points, hitting seven of 12 shots, pulled within close in second half before the Titans sealed it away, winning 92-66.

"If we played with the intensity we showed in the second half the entire game, we would have given Fullerton a battle all the way," Coach Bobbi Bonace said. "Despite the loss, there were several positive aspects. The performance of Jody Marks was just outstanding. She took charge and was very aggressive. Fullerton is a very strong team and we were just overmatched physically. It was the first time this year we did not beat ourselves. I hope I don't see another team that shoots like they did (56.3 percent). We had some good off-the-bench performances," Bonace remarked.

UCSB got off to a slow start in the opening round of the All-Cal tourney at U.C. San Diego against the host Tritons but recorded its initial victory of the new campaign 78-62. UCSB took control of the backboards early to take charge of the tempo. Sophomore forward Liz Lech enjoyed the best shooting night of her career, canning 13 of 17 shots, enroute to 26 points. Thyra Ladyman and Lech led UCSB with 10 rebounds apiece. Floor leader Lori Sanchez directed the attack with nine assists. "We exhibited good rebounding position and didn't let UCSD back into the game with bad mistakes," Bonace said.

But what seems to be UCSB's main problems in the early going, starting with a lack of confidence and intensity, was on display right at the outset against U.C. Riverside the next night in the finals. To say the Gauchos were cold as ice would be an understatement. UCR jumped off to what was an insurmountable 24-0 lead in the first 12 minutes in a 56-45 victory. "It wasn't really anything Riverside was doing," Bonace said. "We were throwing up shots that just didn't drop. And then we started to get nervous. We didn't give up and die after the disastrous start. We hung in there. When you hold opponents to just 56 points, you should win," she said. Shooting just 29 percent (22 of 76), however, and the long scoring drought was too much for the Gauchos to overcome. Ladyman had 8 points and 11 rebounds for UCSB.

Soccer Tryouts

Tryouts for UCSB Women's Varsity soccer will be held January 3-5 from 3-5 p.m. at Rob Gym Field. All interested women are encouraged to attend this three-day session.

Coach Andy Kuenzli will lead the defending state champions as they try to continue their domination of women's soccer. The Gauchos won the state title in 1977, 1978 and 1982. They were runners-up in 1979 and 1981. They were the "unofficial" national champions in 1978 and 1979.

After Two Wins, UCSB Moves Up In Class; Powerful Pepperdine

By RON DICKER
Nexus Sports Writer

After two convincing wins over Division II opponents, the Gauchos will get a cold Division I slap in the face today when they travel to Malibu to take on Pepperdine, a team that is ranked in four separate Top 20 preseason polls.

Without the presence of perennial WCAC winner USF, which dropped its program because of various scandals tied to the university, Pepperdine is odds-on favorite to win their third WCAC crown under head coach Jim Harrick.

In his four years at Pepperdine, the former UCLA assistant has compiled a record of 58-30. Two of those wins have come this season. The Waves defeated Southern California College (not to be confused with USC), 103-77, and Tuesday night handled Cal State Los Angeles easily, 89-70.

Returning from a team that made the second round in the NCAA tournament last year are All-WCAC players Orlando Phillips, Dane Suttle and Bill Sadler.

The 6-7 Phillips ranked third in the nation in field goal percentage last year at 65 percent. Suttle, a 6-3 senior guard was Pepperdine's second leading scorer at 16.8 ppg., and is closing in on Bird Averitt's school scoring record. Sadler, a 6-6 forward, averaged 12.4 points and six rebounds.

While the Waves were beating up on an NAIA school, and a Division II school, the Gauchos were rolling over UC Davis, 76-56, and last Tuesday, over host Cal Poly SLO, 60-43.

In the Davis game, UCSB took advantage of frigid Aggie shooting (37.5 percent), building a 30-20 halftime lead into a 20 point rout.

York Gross led the Gauchos with 21 points and 11 rebounds. Frank Horwath, the other starting forward, had 12 points, as did Michael Russell, who was 6 of 10 from the field.

In just 14 minutes of action, Conner Henry, a 6-5 freshman guard, had five of the Gauchos' 19 assists.

Preston Neumayr was the Aggies' top scorer with 12 points, but the usually accurate senior hit on only 5 of 13 shots.

In the SLO contest, 6-5 swingman Wayne Davis played "the best game of his UCSB career," according to head coach Ed DeLacy.

"Wayne's defense was extraordinary," DeLacy continued. "In our stretch run he stopped the corner shots that had been hurting us all night, he dove for a ball, got a jump ball, which he shouldn't have, and was 5 for 5 from the field."

Two other Gauchos, Scott Fisher and Dedrick Brooks, were perfect from the field. Brooks was 4 for 4. Fisher was 3 for 3, and is now 7 for 7 in the young season.

The Gauchos will have to continue their hot shooting (57 percent against SLO) in order to have a realistic chance at upsetting the Waves tonight.

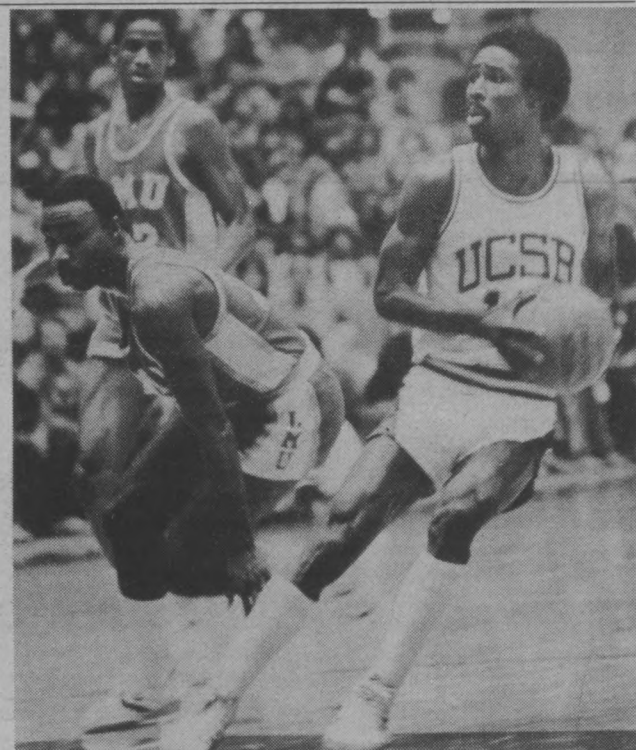

Against Davis and SLO, two teams whom the Gauchos have more talent than, UCSB was able to freewheel a bit. In Malibu, the Gauchos will be on the short end of the stick talent and size-wise.

"Of course we'll have to be more deliberate in our approach," DeLacy said. "The less shots we take, the less rebounding they're going to do, and the less they'll have the ball. We'll have to maintain physical contact."

UCSB used zone and man-to-man defenses about 50-50 against their previous two opponents and will do so against Pepperdine, DeLacy said.

UCSB will play two games during finals week. On Saturday, Cal Poly Pomona visits the ECen, and on Wednesday Doane College of Nebraska will take on the Gauchos.

The team's holiday slate begins on the following Wednesday, December 15, when the Gauchos play Southwest Louisiana.

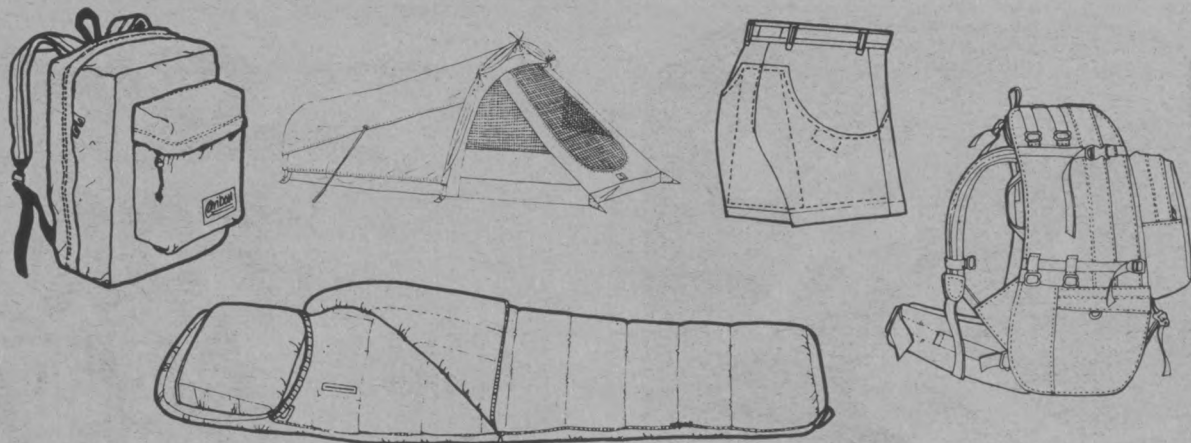

Michael Russel provided the Gauchos with the outside shot.

Kickers' Best Year Leaves Them Short Of Playoffs

By GARY MIGDOL
Nexus Sports Editor
The good...the bad...and the ugly.

Perhaps that is the best way to describe the saga of the UCSB soccer team, a team that had a 17-game unbeaten streak, lost only twice in 22 games, and seemed to be the victim of a political decision which forced them out of the NCAA playoffs.

Indeed to the innocent bystander, the Gauchos appeared to have been robbed of what was rightfully theirs, a spot in the playoffs. There was never a doubt about the talent and quality of play on this team. In the end, what was in question was the popularity and political power of UCSB. And the Gauchos lost on both accounts.

That is the "bad" in what was otherwise a season of high caliber soccer for UCSB. The Gauchos have had two weeks to reflect on their season and it gives them little consolation to know that next year's team may be better. The Gauchos wanted it this year.

UCSB was 16-3 in 1978, but this year's edition broke or tied 12 team and individual records, including the best record in the school's history at 16-2-4. The Gauchos were 1-1-1 after the first three games, and 17 games later they were 15-1-4 and ranked 13th in the nation. The Gauchos appeared to be on their way.

Under second-year Coach Andy Kuenzli, the Gauchos began to play as a unit and were rapidly gaining a reputation as one of the best teams in the west. They rose to number two in the Far West rankings and finished the season at number three.

The Gauchos began to gain support from students and the community. Crowds of over 1,000 filled Harder Stadium and UCSB had a home field advantage that seemed to intimidate opponents. They lost only one game in the cozy confines of Harder Stadium, but what a big game it was. And what a way to lose it.

This is where the "ugly" comes in. The Gauchos would rather forget how blatantly they were victimized in their showdown with San Diego State. Before one of the largest crowds of the season, in the most important game in UCSB soccer history, the Gauchos' Dave Zaboloski was given a red card five minutes into the game.

It was ruled that the Gaucho sweeper blatantly and intentionally ran into and knocked down an Aztec player as they both went for the ball. Referee Carl Gans, a Goleta resident, ruled that the Gauchos would have to play a very tough team a man short.

The Gauchos played as best they could under the circumstances, led 2-1 at halftime, but eventually lost the game 4-2. Kuenzli was beside himself. How a referee could give a red card so early in such a crucial game without a warning seemed beyond reason. It gives the Gauchos and their fans little consolation that Gans called called the Gauchos' Scott Grasinger to apologize.

It was the first time in Santa Barbara that soccer had caught the public eye. It was also a pleasant surprise to see students come in large numbers to see the Gauchos play. It is truly a shame that UCSB did not host an NCAA playoff game. If you were to ask a member of the team, they would tell you that they would not have lost at home.

The Gauchos thoroughly enjoyed a home field and home crowd advantage and they showed their appreciation in the season finale against Cal State Fullerton when the players turned to their fans and applauded them.

The Gauchos lose only four players next season, including team captain Steve Daluz and all-time leading scorer Eric Price. But rest assured UCSB will back with a talent-laden 1983 squad led by goalie Steve Tipping and forward Scott Grasinger.

In a season marred by two critical decisions, the Gauchos can nevertheless keep in mind the highlights of a memorable year.

The high point for UCSB was beating arch-rivals UCLA 3-1 in a hard fought battle between two class teams. The Gauchos dominated them the past 16 years and to win as convincingly as they did tending (Please turn to p.33, col.1)

The Gauchos turned on their fans all season, especially in their 3-1 win over UCLA.

Kickers End Season...

 very sweet. They also beat top-ranked teams like Fullerton, San Jose State, United States International University, Nevada-Las Vegas, and Santa Clara.

But in the end, UCSB was overlooked by the NCAA playoff committee. The University of Washington (17-1-1) was selected instead of the higher ranked Gauchos. The Gauchos appealed the controversial decision, but to no avail — they will have to sit out this year's tournament.

Despite UCSB being ranked ahead of Washington and Fresno State, also chosen for the playoffs, in both the regional and national polls, the Gauchos lost out in a politically motivated vote. Such is life, but for the Gauchos it was a hard fact to swallow.

Not enough has been said of the Gauchos' second year coach Andy Kuenzli, who has turned the soccer program around in his short tenure. Kuenzli, who played and coached in Switzerland prior to coming to UCSB, has made the Gauchos one of the top soccer teams in the west. If his first two years are any indication, UCSB soccer has only begun to make a dent on the national scene.

It was a season that can be characterized as very successful, but very frustrating. The Gauchos can take note on what is required to make the NCAA playoffs and hope that in 1983 the bad and ugly make way for more good.

 contributed 24 points and a game high of 14 rebounds, hitting 9 of 12 shots. But she committed two early fouls in the second period to foul out, leaving the Gauchos weaker on the frontline against the much taller Gulls.

Despite the adversity, the Gauchos, displaying a new lineup, ran out to a 10 point advantage in the opening half, primarily due to the performance of freshman Kristin Nicholson. She

 "I'm really excited about next year." Tanner said. "I think the guys that really want to win it all next year are going to work with Pete on communication skills, and the problems we had this year are going to dissipate over the summer."

There are a lot of other reasons for people to get excited about next season. Though the Gauchos are losing second-team All-American Peter Neushul, and honorable mention Scott Porter, all-time assist leader at UCSB, they will welcome the return of David George and Tim McCormick, who both red-shirted this past season.

George, a first-team All-American in '81, and McCormick, an intelligent and strong defensive player, should give the Gauchos everything they need to win a national title. Larry Mouchawar, UCSB's third all-time leading scorer, returns for his senior campaign.

Goalie Mark Clevenger, who played his best tourney of the year this past weekend, will be back with more experience and the same enthusiasm.

Another reason for optimism is that U.C. Irvine and Stanford, the top two teams in the nation this year, are losing five of their seven starters. Irvine loses Jon Bergeson and Peter Campbell, the only two collegian players on the national squad.

It may not be a bad idea for someone in the athletic department to start making a large space in the trophy cabinet.

Bashful:

Every time I see you, your head is buried in a book. Why don't you go to the bookstore and get Cliffs Notes? They'll make those tough lit assignments easier to understand, and they'll give you a great review. Throw down those chains and come out with me.

Interested

Ernestine:

The Grapes of Wrath can be sour indeed! Why don't you go to the bookstore and get Cliffs Notes? They'll help you understand what you read and they give a great review. Then you'll have more free time for me! I've got a cold bottle of Ripple... care to share?

Julio
