I.V. Beat 1983 Goals, Plans Discussed: Incorporation Tops IVCC List

Nexus Staff Writer

The newly-elected members of the Isla Vista Community Council discussed some of the new and their first meeting of the year on Jan. 3.

One of the most important issues which was acted upon by the new council was that of the incorporation of Isla Vista. The council passed a motion by a 5-1 vote, which:

-resolves that the IVCC/IVMAC (Isla Vista Municipal Advisory Council) supports a separate and independent city of Isla Vista.

-resolves that the IVCC/IVMAC will offer the use of its office services, (not to exceed $100), to any citizen group solely dedicated to the purpose of an independent

-resolves that the IVCC/IVMAC will move forward to aid in the implementation of the goal of incorporating a city of I.V.

Marc Borgman, chair of the IVCC, said, "Discussion time is over. We were tired of discussing an issue which has been talked about for the past 12 years.

He said that during the November election, "the people chose those candidates which expressed the opinion of inongoing goals and plans for 1983 at dependent incorporation, as opposed to those with an opposite

Additionally, Borgman said another factor which influenced the council's vote was "the IVCC plebiscite which showed a 2-1 vote in support of separate cityhood: both are definite indicators of support." Borgman is hopeful that these indicators will lead to the reality of an independent cityhood of Isla Vista.

Old issues discussed at the meeting included the formation of a Public Safety Commission which plans to address such diverse issues as problems that face street people, problems of violence against women, the parking problem in I.V., and oil development.

Other issues of continuing importance included the formation of a Tenants' Union and the beginnings of an Indo-Chinese Project.

Borgman said these two projects have particular significance. "The Through this resolution we are idea behind the Tenants' Union is going to move ahead to implement to help people become informed the goal of separate in- about the apartments in I.V.. In

Deukmejian Defends His No Tax Policies

By BARRY SHELBY

Sacramento Correspondent

Governor George Deukmejian continued to defend his fiscal policy of no new taxes at his first face-to-face meeting with the press yesterday, and said he may take his case to the people for support.

Although Democrats have been critical of the Republican governor's plan to repay part of this year's $1.6 billion deficit by using funds from next year's budget, Deukmejian held firm in his campaign commitment not to raise any new revenues.

The people of California have been telling us for nearly five years that taxes are too high and I think it is time we listen to what they have been saying," Deukmejian said.

It is my sincere belief that we can live within our means and balance the budget without placing an added burden on the taxpayers," he said. Since the state had to turn to private lending firms in order to raise the funds needed in order to meet its last payroll, the financial community has kept a close watch on how the state plans to fund the current billion-dollar deficit.

Democrats have argued that by delaying repayment of the current year's deficit until the beginning of the next fiscal year, July 1, California's excellent credit rating will be downgraded and the state will be forced to pay higher interest rates on money it borrows in the Deukmejian said yesterday that the Democrats' critique of his plan to pay off the debt has only made the problem worse.

When (lenders) hear some of the comments that have been made by some of our Democratic collegues that have rejected our plan without giving it more consideration...I don't think you have to be too clever to recognize that there is a possibility that they may change our credit rating," Deukmejian said.

Deukmejian claimed that a downgraded credit rating would only cost the state $1.3 million a year in additional interest costs on one billion dollars of new bond sales. He said such an increase in the interest rate compares favorably with any tax increases.

Deukmejian denied he was setting a dangerous precedent by carrying over the deficit into the next fiscal year, something the state has never

"We are making the firm guarantee that come July 1, that deficit is being paid off," he said.

So far the governor has appointed no Blacks, one woman and few minorities in general to his executive staff. When asked what role minorities were to play in his administration, Deukmejian promised that they were going to be "well represented."

"As you know, we have yet to make any major appointments. I truly believe that if you are going to have a sense of community and excellence in California, then people from various ethnic groups must be involved and must be represented. I intend to follow through on that," said the new governor.

strategies for fighting Governor George Deukmejian's proposed budget cuts and student fee increases and debated an appointment to the A.S. In-Wednesday.

Deukmejian's recently proposed cuts to the U.C. fight the possible effects of those cuts. Although, charged "tuition," the addition of a $100 "surcharge" this spring is reportedly a very real possibility which will be decided within the week.

"Frankly, the whole idea is sickening," stressed A.S. President Jay Weiss. "Students just cannot take this lying down. We're going to fight this every step of the way, but students have got to get motivated and informed to beat this thing.

An appointment to the A.S. Investment Advisory Committee by Weiss became a controversial issue at the meeting and temporarily severed Leg Council. Weiss had appointed John Tosdal to the position of Ethics Chair of the Investment Committee, but some council members felt strongly that a public search should have taken place.

Although Weiss, as president, does have the right to appoint students to these positions without a search (and approximately 40-50 positions have been filled this way so far this year) a two-thirds approval of Leg Council is necessary to approve appointments. Conflict Wednesday night was based on the process itself, but it also concerned the specific appointment. The council did not vote to approve the appointment, and the position is now vacant.

In other new business, A.S. Internal Vice President Pete Zerilli presented a position paper which states that Leg Council strongly opposes the Solomon Amendment currently being considered by Congress. The amendment would make it illegal for men who have not registered for the draft to receive financial aid for education.

"This would be an absurd, discriminatory law," Zerilli stated. "It does no good, and it should have

Leg Council passed Zerilli's position paper, copies Associated Students Legislative Council planned its of which will be sent to local newspapers, local government officials and university administrators.

Joe Morris, a representative from the Isla Vista Park District, answered questions from Leg Council vestment Advisory Committee, at their meeting concerning the consequences of creating "twin cities" of Isla Vista and Goleta. Because "Isla Vista is a self-contained geographical, social, cultural and system have caused Leg Council to plan how they will economic unit," the bill states that "separate cities of Isla Vista and Goleta would provide the most eflegally, students of the U.C. system cannot be fective and efficient control of planning and land Separation of the two cities would also be most cost efficient."

Zimmerman also called the A.S. and Isla Vista Community Council plebiscites, which were taken in November 1982, a mandate from the students for the separation of the two cities. By a margin of approximately 2:1 in both polls, voters preferred the creation of an independent city of Isla Vista.

A lengthy discussion about the details of the implementation of twin cityhood occurred, and, subsequently, Leg Council passed the bill. A town meeting sponsored by the Isla Vista Community Council will be held on Jan. 31 at the Methodist Church in Isla Vista in order to receive input from and give information to Isla Vista residents concerning the boundaries, economic specifics, tax structures and timetable for twin cityhood.

The right for students to participate in the hiring and tenuring of faculty members was the subject of a third position paper. Zerilli presented a bill which states that Leg Council calls for the placement of student members on the Academic Senate's Committee on Academic Personnel. It was pointed out that U.C. Committee Considers Graduate Publication

Asst. Campus Editor

The Registration Fee Advisory Committee discussed the possible funding of a biannual graduate research publication, and the recurring proposal to purchase university housing in Isla Vista at their monthly public meeting Wednesday, but no definite decisions were made on either issue.

Marie Antonini, external president of the Graduate Students Association, presented a proposal involving the institution of a graduate student biannual journal which would provide a place for graduate students to publish their work. GSA requested that the committee fund the project, which has an estimated cost of $2,000.

All fields of study would be included in the journal so that all students could publish their material, Antonini explained.

Currently there are two undergraduate publications funded by registration fees: Spectrum and Discovery. The committee has designated $8,000 to support these publications, one member of the committee explained.

During the discussion of the graduate publication, the question of who would actually read such a publication arose. Graduate student Larry Martinez explained it is very important for graduate students to be able to say they have been published, so it does not really matter who reads it. The proposal will be discussed in detail at the next meeting.

Martinez explained that the Property Purchase Management Group is still waiting on a U.C. systemwide decision on the possibility of purchasing land in Isla Vista for student housing. The funding of this

Deadlock Broken

In Kiryat Shmona, Israel, pressure from President Reagan broke a three-week deadlock Thursday as Israel and Lebanon agreed to negotiate simultaneously on the withdrawal of Israeli and other foreign troops from Lebanon and on future relations between Israel and Lebanon. Despite agreement on a compromise agenda giving priority to neither issue, the two governments made clear that in the negotiations each would put its primary concern first. Lebanese officials in Beirut said when the Israeli, Lebanese and American negotiators get down to business at their next meeting Monday, their delegation would propose a comprehensive plan for withdrawal of all Israeli troops from Lebanon. Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon said he was sure the negotiators "will arrive at security arragements and normalization as the first stage to peace between Israel and Lebanon." Through four semi-weekly meetings in this northern Israeli town and the south Beirut suburb of Khalde, the Israelis insisted that the negotiators first agree on normalization of relations between the two nations, while the Lebanese demanded priority for withdrawal of the estimated 60,000 Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian troops. At the fifth meeting Monday in Khalde, both Lebanon and Israel accepted special U.S. envoy Morris Draper's proposal for concurrent negotiations on all the issues, but each demanded changes. Agreement finally came at the sixth meeting after Philip C. Habib, Reagan's chief Middle East envoy, arrived from Wasington with word that the president was growing impatient and wanted an end to the deadlock. The Lebanese concessions included agreeing to negotiate a formal end to the state of war between Israel and

Shultz Denies Disarray

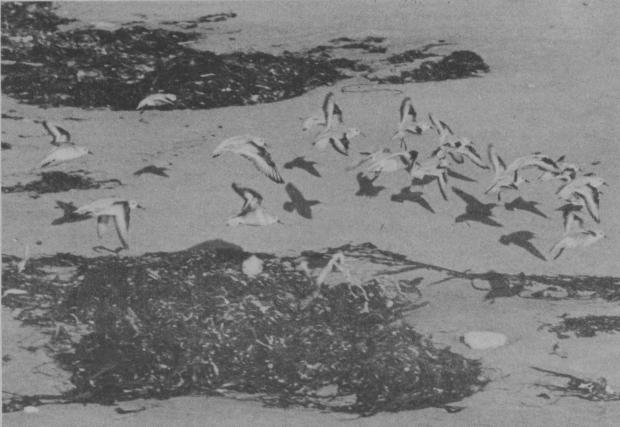

In Washington, Secretary of State George Shultz denied on Thursday any administration disarray over how to negotiate with the Soviets and moved to strengthen his grip on the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency after President Reagan fired Director Eugene V. Rostow. "We have the situation firmly under control," Shultz said as he announced Kenneth W. Dam, his deputy, would "provide day-to-day guidance" to the embattled nuclear arms control agency. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., didn't buy that. "The latest changes in the arms control leadership of our nation reflect the continuing disarray in the arms control policies of this administration," he said. "The prevention of nuclear war is the fundamental challenge of our time, and no president should permit the mission and the personnel of ACDA to become political footballs in the hands of Senate extremists opposed to responsible arms control." Kennedy said. Rostow resigned Wednesday under fire from Reagan and a group of conservative Republican senators, headed by Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

In Washington, the Reagan administration is considering a broad-based tax on energy consumption as an option for raising $40 billion or more in fiscal 1986 if it is needed to reduce the government's swollen deficits, administration sources said Thursday. The sources said energy taxes are high on Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan's list of possible revenue sources that would "trigger in" after Oct. 1, 1985, if required to keep the government's red ink below $10 billion. Regan disclosed Wednesday that he had proposed several contingency tax options to the president, including an income tax surcharge, but he refused to identify any of the other proposals, saying the president had not yet made any final decisions.

In Memphis, Tenn., police stormed a house and killed seven religious zealots Thursday in a futile attempt to save a fellow officer who had been taken hostage and tortured before he was slain, authorities said.

Some 550,000 Americans applied for unemployment benefits in the last week of 1982, a spurt of 35,000 over the previous week and a reversal of the short decline that had heartened some economists. The Labor Department reported Thursday that for the first time in five weeks, there also was a rise in the insured unemployment rate - the proportion of the 111 millionmember U.S. labor force drawing jobless relief checks. It climbed from 4.9 percent to 5.0 in the week ending Jan. 1. Some private economists had cited a trend of declining applications for unemployment benefits in recent weeks as signalling a peaking of joblessness, which stood at 10.8 percent in December, the highest since

Bacteria Gene Isolated

In Stanford, genetic researchers at Stanford University have isolated a gene from bacteria that causes gonorrhea in a development that could lead to a vaccine for this venereal disease. If further tests prove effective and a vaccine ultimately is develped, scientists will have taken an important step toward understanding the causes of bacterial meningitis, an infection of the delicate membranes that surround the brain and spinal cord. The gene, which Stanford reseachers have isolated from the genococcus bacterium, contains the blueprint for an enzyme which destroys human antibodies responsible for fighting gonorrhea.

In Sacramento, Gov. George Deukmejian would rather see California's credit rating downgraded than raise taxes to pay off the state's $1.5 billion deficit, the Republican governor said Thursday. In his first news conference since taking office last week, Deukemjian said he still opposes a tax increase, even if that hurts credit rating of state bonds. But Deukmejian added that he wouldn't say "never" to tax increases.

Alarmed by state cutbacks in medical assistance, some two dozen Nevada County physicians have offered free care for the needy. The physicians, headed by Dr. Richard Cobden, have proposed a free clinic on Saturdays at the county Health Department office in Nevada City. "This is a free clinic open to anyone," Cobden said. "We won't question anyone as to their financial status. We ask if they can make contributions, to do so." The state on Jan. 1 slashed assistance to medically indigent adults, turning the program over to counties in urban areas. In 34 rural counties, the state cut financing to 70 percent from 100 percent of the patients costs.

Near Hayward, in a settlement reached behind closed doors, Sutter County agreed Thursday to pay $70,000 in legal fees left over from the Juan Corona mass murder retrial. Attorneys Terence Hallinan and Michael Memdelson, who defended Corona against charges that he killed 25 itinerant farm laborers more than a decade ago, agreed to accept $26,690 by Jan. 21 and the balance by September.

In San Luis Obispo, parole was denied Thursday for Tex Watson, a follower of cult leader Charles Manson who was convicted in the bloody 1969 murders of actress Sharon Tate and six others. It was the fifth time officials have refused to release Watson, who is serving a life-term for his role in the killings.

More support-service cutbacks? Yet another U.C. fee increase? What is happening to California's once-praisworthy educational system?

grow increasingly concerned about an alarming trend that is emerging from a series of state and federal sanctions that once appeared unrelated to me: The sacrificing of quality education in order to pad and "upgrade" the military.

U.C. and Cal State fee increases, coupled with drastic financial aid cuts, are forcing more and more students out of colleges and universities and into an evertightening job market. Meanwhile, a concerted publicity drive by the U.S. government to "sell" the military is succeeding in luring would-be students into the armed forces. Why are servicemen receiving wage increases while educational assistance plummets and fees soar? Why do we see far more glossy billboards, magazine ads, and television commercials than ever before, pushing us to Be All That We Can Be, Go Navy, and join the ranks of the Few, the Proud, the Marines?

To top it off, Reagan now brags that "the ingelligence level of our boys in the military is now higher than ever before." True, the percentage of high school graduates in the armed forces is climbing — because they can't continue in school, and they can't find any other jobs. And in the L.A. Times, our secretary of defense says that the reason that the number of blacks in the military is so disproportionately high is because "they're patriotic!"

If this pattern of attitude and legislation persists, the U.S. won't ever need a military draft. Consider these things as you pay your $150 fee increase this coming

It is usually a pleasure to read your paper every morning; I used to write for it, and I know how much perspiration goes into each issue. However, I'm writing about something over which you may not have control: advertisements.

Just this morning I was greeted with the sight of two idiotic ads for certain products of probably dubious value. One was for a booklet that purports to tell me how to improve my "record" with women. For a simple SASE, details on this heretofore completely unsolved subject will be

The second was worse: A "herpes litmus test" that could be ejected into an "indepth" conversation at a party, and would indicate through some seemingly innocent conversational slip whether that person was indeed safe. Editor, Daily Nexus:

I am writing in response to Karen Weyland's Womanwise article of Friday, Jan. 7.

I appreciated the article because it was coherent and candid, and I agree with Karen that a female's "womanhood" is not Editor, Daily Nexus: dependent on having a man in her life. I also agree that through the media our society inundates us with the view that "men are essential to their (women's) being." Karen seems to imply that socialization is the only reason women feel they "need" men, then rolls on with the rest of her article. Is there perhaps another reason? Genesis 2:18 says, "The Lord God said, 'It is not good for the man to be alone. I will make a helper suitable for him." God did not want the first man to be alone, and by interpolation of the second chapter of Genesis it seems that Adam wasn't too thrilled about the prospect either. Originally, God's plan was that neither man nor woman should be alone.

About being a complete woman without a man - no argument, but is there something past the "wholeness" of womanhood or manhood? Are perhaps man and woman different sides of the same coin? A man would not be a "man" if he wasn't in apposition to woman, for much of man is defined by his differences from woman. Again, Genesis 1:27 says, "So God created man in his own image, in the image of God he created him; male and female he created them." Notice "man" is generic, consisting of both male and female. A case could be made that the closest "image of God" on Earth is not a holy and upright man or woman, but a man and woman, living in harmony with themselves and God.

> I don't want to bang the drum too loudly, though, for the apostle Paul in the New Testament condones celibacy and single life - in fact, he says it may be preferrable. However, Paul's world was a world that had been corrupted by thousands of years of sinning (like our own), and perhaps Paul's revelation was an adjustment by God of the original plan of which he gave us the choice to disobey. I suggest one try (albeit near impossible) to disregard all outer influences for just a moment and look in his/her heart, and I believe the answer will be that man does in fact need woman and woman, man.

Those of us who have been, maybe to put a note on the ride board, or ask a question at the information desk, probably passed by a small, nondescript sign imprinted with the words, "Student Lobby," and kept right on walking. Most of us probably did not think twice about this sign, and for those of us who did images came to our minds of a large bureaucratic organization full of politically "over-reactive" people formally debating issues, or maybe, for some of us, a waiting room for students, like a hotel lobby.

Well, I was once a mere passerby, until one day, something compelled me to see what this sign really meant. I found out that the small sign designates an organization truly out of the imagination of most students. The UCSB Student Lobby is an organization that researches, analyzes, and implements policies that affect and concern students. Alcohol

vertisement entitled "Free

Editor, Daily Nexus: In reference to your ad-

Offer!" (1-7-83), recruiting prospective staff writers, I would like to point out a common, yet extremely detrimental error in the wording. Your concept of "inevitable consequences social alienation, alcoholism, and frustrationinduced kitty kicking," all of which are supposedly due to overwork, is indeed a clever and humorous gimmick, but the belief that alcoholism can be caused by environmental or social factors is a misguided and harmful fallacy. Alcoholism is a disease, like diabetes; it cannot be "caught," caused by overwork discontent, nor can it be cured. It is also a progressive disease, meaning that it gets worse as time goes on, whether or not the alcoholic is drinking. Therefore, if an alcoholic stopped drinking at age 25, but started again at age 45, it would be as if the person had never stopped at all. In fact, it would be worse, since the physiological intolerance to alcohol would have progressed during those interim years of sobriety. The progressive nature of this disease further confirms the fact that it is not en- this error does not occur vironmentally induced. I realize that the reference was made in an attempt to be humorous, but the implications put forth are very misleading. It is this type of casual reference to alcoholism, here used to convey the image of an exhausted and isolated writer, that perpetuates the misconception that alcoholism only affects those who are lonely, unhappy, or "messed up." Along with this fallacy is the belief that alcoholism is a shameful disease, that it is caused by lack of willpower or common sense. Alcoholism respects no boundaries - it can affect anyone of any race, creed, sex, or social standing; it does not reflect a lack of character or intelligence, nor does it imply a personal worthlessness. Again, alcoholism is a disease - a physiological intolerance to alcohol that, left untreated, can lead to physical, mental, emotional, and spiritual devastation. But an alcoholic need not be without hope; there are many caring, effective and confidential agencies here in Santa Barbara that offer treatment. Through these agencies, the alcoholic can regain his/her self-esteem and confidence as well as achieve a state of sobriety that is both fulfilling and Alcoholism remains a taboo subject; an alcoholic is "black mark" on the family name, a problem to be ignored, denied, or hidden. Because of this punitive point of view, many alcoholics needlessly suffer, avoiding treatment, because they are fearful that their disease, if discovered by others, would lead to personal and financial ruin. Society should reject this flaming, condescending attitude, and encourage alcoholics to get help, so that those recovering can in turn help others.

The first step toward this goal is to wipe out the ignorance and misconceptions that surround this disease. I believe that once society is informed and aware, the fear, disgust and holier-than-thou attitude many now have towards the alcoholic will be replaced by compassion, support, and caring.

I am confident that the Nexus, being a concerned and responsive journalistic endeavor, will see to it that again. I also hope that I have helped dispel some of the myths that keep this disease in the dark, fearful corner of society's mind. For further information, please contact the National Council on Alcoholism at 964-4781.

Rushing

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I have noticed that most of us, including myself, are doing a lot of rushing around. School is demanding, and many of us have to work to earn money in between classes. There are lines holding us up everywhere, and we're all pressed for time.

With all these burdens, it's hard to offer more than a friendly but fleeting smile to our friends and acquaintances. But people still need talk. Being up to our eyeballs in business doesn't make us any less dependent on each other; in fact, all this pressure probably makes supportive friends even more of an essential.

Let's not be in such a hurry that we can't even share our lunch hour with a friend. It's a terrible feeling to be lonely in a crowd.

Paternity Leave

Forgive me, but I think I'm suffering from postpartum depression. How could Garry Trudeau have left us, how could he have just dropped Joanie and Rick's baby into the world and taken a powder? I think we ought to sue the man for desertion.

I'm sure there are a host of other reasons why I'll miss Doonesbury. But frankly, I would have loved to see how our cultural observer presented these parents in the world of mid-life babydom.

The way I figure it, subtracting a few years for literary license, Joanie is pushing 40. She has already been run through some capsulized version of our social history.

She was a mad housewife (as in Diary of), a consciousness-raised wife, a runaway mother, a divorcee, day-care worker, a law student. She got a job in the Congress and had what trendy magazines call a "spouse equivalent" who became a spouse. Then she did what her peer group seems to be doing: She got pregnant.

Needless to say, I expected it. In the past year, I have read any number of treatises extolling the virtues of post-30, post-35 pregnancies and motherhood. Most of these women, unlike Joanie, are pregnant for the first time and pregnant by planning — serious planning.

The women who get into the media in their maternity clothes or maternal pose seem to be television reporters and actresses, lawyers and executives. Having moved up the career ladder, what they want next is a baby. What they have next is, we are told, bliss.

I find the wave of mid-life babies fine, dandy and appropriate. I am enough a creature of the times to suspect that we are more able to deal with children in our lives when we've come to grips with the issues of our own childhood: Who am I? What can I do? I think maturity is good for maternity.

But as a veteran mother who once hired a babysitter so that I could take a bath, the reports I have read out of Older Motherdom are just a touch too glowing. It's motherhood without the diapers, if you receive my meaning.

From what I observe, mid-life parents are not really allowed to complain. It's become socially unacceptable for a 37-year-old financial analyst to moan about the impossibility of getting her baby into a snowsuit. It's become socially unacceptable for a two-career couple in their forties to long out loud for a weekend alone.

Peace Opening

In 1953, Eisenhower seized the opening created by the death of Stalin to make to the American editors his famous "deeds not words" speech. Within two years he had a summit meeting with Khrushchev and the treaty that ended Soviet occupation of Austria.

In 1963, Kennedy seized the opening left at the end of the Cuban missile crisis to make, at American University, a famous speech on "the most important topic on earth, world peace." Within the year he had the Test Ban Treaty that led the way to all subsequent arms control.

In 1983, Reagan faces a similar opening following the death of Leonid Brezhnev and the accession of Yuri Andropov. The President, far more than his predecessors, needs to crack through the crust of his own bureaucracy by a general speech asserting the priority of peace.

Andropov plainly wants a deal. He came to the leadership largely through the backing of the Soviet military. They have extracted promises of more vigorous defense efforts if arms control accords are not reached with the U.S. But, if the new leader has to find more resources for defense, the strained Soviet economy will be that much the worse.

In addition, Andropov needs to consolidate his leadership by winning over those who backed against him, Brezhnev's handpicked candidate, Konstantin Chernenko. Chernenko was a total partisan of the Brezhnev stress on detente with the West. By embracing detente, Andropov — besides easing the defense drag on resources — enhances his standing within the top leadership.

A full-dress peace offensive has, not surprisingly, already

Much of the silence is self-imposed. Older people with successful jobs and successful marriages have greater expectations of themselves as successful parents. It's the perfect-parent syndrome. The two-career couple with a history of competence may have trouble confessing to a child with colic. A manager with 10 years of business experience may have trouble admitting that she's overwhelmed by the simple problem of getting a baby and two bags of groceries in the house together.

But some of it is also imposed by the world.

When I was pregnant in my late twenties, during the late sixties, chaos was an accepted condition of life as a new mother. So was personal support — the adult playgroup. In the early 1970s — right about the time Joanie left home — mothers who were continually ecstatic were considered candidates for consciousness-raising classes.

Now, we are dealing with a larger number of couples who have had careers and choices. They have consciously waited, they have carefully chosen — from amniocentesis to LaMaze. It seems that because they want these children, they are expected to give unending imitations of joy. They made their crib; they can lie in it.

On the whole, the new parent at 40 probably has a great deal more in common with the new parent at 25 than we normally credit. Even successful people who deal with large problems efficiently have to learn new skills to deal with little people. Goals, five-year plans, five-hour plans, all pale in the face of a six-month-old with his own agenda.

Parents of newborns, willy-nilly, live in The Now, and The Now is a 3 a.m. feeding. Whether they are 40 or 25, they experience the same stress, and need the same support.

I wonder how Joanie and Rick would have borne all this. How would Rick, that vague soul, have tackled fatherhood? How would Joanie have done it this time? We could use some mid-life reality.

By the time Trudeau comes back, his creative offspring will be 20 months old, and sleeping through the night. So will Rick and Joanie. But until then, maybe even a comic-strip father deserves some paternity leave.

been surfaced by Andropov. It includes rapprochement with China, and an opening in Eastern Europe for a return to the fold by such mavericks as Romania and Yugoslavia. But the main dish on the menu is arms control.

Two sets of negotiations with the U.S. in Geneva have been discussed by Andropov in detail. He has advocated big reductions in the number of intermediate-range nuclear weapons based in Europe; and in strategic, or intercontinental, nuclear arms. He has indicated a readiness to meet with President Reagan at the summit.

While the Andropov proposals fall short of what this country needs, they clearly move in the right direction. They certainly find an appeal among this country's allies, particularly in West Germany. It is notable that the Socialist leader, Hans-Jochen Vogel, who saw President Reagan here Friday, will visit Moscow this week. He will see Andropov, and also Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who comes to Bonn on January 17.

President Reagan instinctively understands the widespread hunger for peace in this country and abroad. One of his truly spontaneous acts was the letter, hinting at a meeting. which he addressed to Brezhnev after the assassination attempt in 1981. Another was the proposal he made for a meeting with Brezhnev at the United Nations Disarmament Conference last June. In his press conference Wednesday, he returned soft answers to all questions about Russia, arms control and the possibility of a summit meeting.

But, the right wing of the Republican Party, which is the President's political base, viscerally opposes any accord with Moscow. That line is slavishly echoed in the Pentagon. The State Department, under George Shultz, has barely raised its head on behalf of arms control. Shultz has not appointed a single expert in Soviet or security affairs to a top post.

Traditionally, the White House has been a bastion of good sense on arms control. Eisenhower, besides his own vast prestige, had abundant help from the late Emmet Hughes. Kennedy had the support of a first-rate National Security Council staff under McGeorge Bundy. But neither the Eisenhower prestige in foreign policy nor a top-drawer NSC staff is available to Reagan. It is typical that after his most recent press conference, an anonymous briefer explained away all of Reagan's positive comments about a summit as public relations eyewash.

So, if he wants an agreement, Reagan is going to have to go for it in an unambiguous way. That involves, as it did with Eisenhower and Kennedy, a major speech.

The critical thing is to make the speech soon. For time is running. Barring some back-channel breakthrough, probably the most the President can get at this point is a rough accord with Andropov — something like the Ford-Brezhnev session at Vladivostok in 1974. But that is something, and Reagan could surely have it if, in the State of the Union Message, instead of boring us with the budget, he exalted the nation in a vision of peace.

Driving Your Bicycle

By STEVE MINIE

Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of safety articles to be presented this year by the Community Service Organization with the purpose of supplying general safety information.

Many of us have trouble understanding all this hubbub of bike safety. What could be more harmless, efficient, even organic than cruising on this two-wheeled extension of our person? Walking, biking, it's all the same: people powered.

This is an understandable viewpoint, given how easy it is to ride a bike safely. However, the campus has 12,000 bikes and even more pedestrians to keep safe. From this broader perspective, rules must be drawn and followed to ensure safety. It is safer to think of our bike as a full fledged vehicle than a two-wheeler. Thus, they (yes, the same ubiquitous they that make all rules) have separated the world of personal travel into two categories: vehicles and pedestrians. Applicable to the driver of a vehicle are the rules in the California Vehicle Code and The Code of Santa Barbara County.

If this sounds a bit suspicious, let's get to the heart of this word game. The object of the game, in order to play by the rules, is to think of our bicycles as vehicles at all times.

This will be fun. Our bike can be any vehicle imaginable, that new car drooled over, but never seriously, with only eleven dollars in savings.

The first thing that we notice is that these bikepaths are wide enough to be four-line highways. This highway functions so well. That guy up ahead in the Porsche sailed smoothly past the lady on the tractor. It's a good thing she stayed to the right with the slower vehicle. Left turn coming. We'd better move over to the left and signal so the other cars can avoid an unsightly collision with our tail. What's this? That's one of those cushy new Lincolns with a passenger sitting on the hood. That must be so painful with the hood ornament and all, but can you imagine the pain of eating pavement if he stops too fast, or careens out of control on a bump? Good luck to them. Let's see, the shortest distance is across this walkway, but wait. Besides all the signs painted on the pavement, which we cannot ignore in a vehicle, we'd look awfully silly in this car dodging pedestrians. This is reality, not some B-movie where we might chalk points; we could actually kill someone and that would ruin our whole day. We might just as well park over here in this provided parking area. It just does not make sense to park our vehicles in entrances and pedestrian accesses. We certainly would be miffed if we could not get into the store because some joker pulled his Eldorado onto the sidewalk. Now it is dark. Thank goodness we have lights on this vehicle. Even though they do not illuminate much, they help the others see us; then we can avoid bodily harm and the infamous apology, "I'm sorry, I just did not see you." Driving without lights can be dangerous. Ask Garp.

The above, of course, is a bit of a fantasy, but it makes stunningly good sense. A moving bike has much more momentum, and infinitely more accident potential than the average moving human being. As a result, a bicycle is a vehicle and must be thought of as such. In order to appreciate this distinction we should ride our bikes following the same courtesies and rules of the road we would while driving a car. It's easy. Try it. You too will be convinced that this simple idea can make the campus a safer place. Steve Minie is a Senior in Aquatic Biology and is a first year CSO.

Man Falls 45 Feet Off Cliff

By GREGORY McMORROW Nexus Staff Writer

A 25-year-old man from Arizona sustained back injuries and suffered from hypothermia Wednesday night when he fell 45 feet onto the rocks below a cliff near Camino Pescadero and Del Playa in Isla Vista, UCSB Paramedics

Joe Gillinger, who said he came to Isla Vista to find his brother, had been standing near the cliff at approximately 10 p.m. Wednesday, when he lost his footing and fell onto the rocks below

"He fell into the water, and since it was high tide, he was half in and half out of the water at times," Bruce Lee, UCSB rescue operations supervisor, said.

The paramedics initially diagnosed Gillinger's injuries as a possible fractured spinal cord, hypothermia and exposure. A spokesperson at the Goleta Valley Hospital stated that Gillinger's condition had stablized and indications were that his spinal cord had not been fractured.

Hypothermia occurs when the temperature of the body's vital organs is drastically lowered from extended exposure

Lee said that there is a possibility Gillinger could suffer paralysis but he was optimistic that this would not occur because Gillinger was able to move his extremities.

Lee characterized Gillinger's injuries, before paramedics arrived, as having the "potential of being a life-threatening problem but he did not enter a lifethreatening stage at any point."

This was the first case this quarter of someone falling from the cliffs which border Del Playa, but Lee said the paramedics frequently give assistance to people who have fallen from the cliffs.

'We average about three (falls) per quarter during the fall and spring, and about one during the winter," Lee said.

Lee attributes the rise in spring and fall to the increase in parties and in the drinking of alcoholic beverages.

Although Lee admits that too many people have fallen off the cliffs, most falls have occured from private land, which makes the owners responsible for preventative measures.

A spokesperson for County Resource Management said private owners of the cliffs along Del Playa are not required by county ordinance to construct fences or other measures to prevent falls from the cliffs.

"There's controversy surrounding whether or not the county should require something like that (preventative measures)," County Resource Manager Steve Byrd said. 'The private owners would say that if a person falls it is because that person was negligent. Others feel that the owner would be negligent. Because that's not all resolved, they point fingers at each other and there's nothing being

Bill Wallace, Santa Barbara County Supervisor for the Third District, is not optimistic about the county's ability to prevent further falls by passing legislation which would require preventative measures.

"It's difficult to regulate private property. The private owner is liable," Wallace said.

Wallace noted that although the cliffs may present a certain danger to those who walk along them, people are faced with equally menacing dangers when they travel in automobiles.

"I suppose that people have to take a certain responsibiltiy for their lives at one point, and I think a certain number of them (falls) are alcohol related," Wallace ad-

Wallace added that the problem merits investigation if only because "when there's a threat to life or limb, you want to do something, within reason."

Preston Call Gauchos 'Best Team Ever'; Season Opens Tomorrow

By LINDA BERBEROGLU Nexus Sports Writer

The 1983 season appears to hold considerable promise for the UCSB Men's Intercollegiate Volleyball Team as they prepare to take their act on the road to U.C. Riverside for the annual All-Cal Tournament scheduled for Saturday. With six seniors, as well as a talented group of returning players and new recruits, depth and experience are crucial qualities that Head Coach Ken Preston can boast of; the team is ranked number two in the pre-season polls behind NCAA champion UCLA.

"What we have this year are nine or ten players deep that I can play any time and be confident with," Preston said. "I'm going to be playing a lot of the guys...I'd say this is my best team ever here.'

One veteran returning to the Gaucho line-up is senior outside hitter Joel Jones, whom Preston is confident will help lead the Gauchos through a successful season.

"Joel's a real dedicated athlete... he's one of the leaders a silent leader. Right now he's playing very well — the best volleyball he's ever played. His confidence is up...he's hitting real well and doing a real good job,"

Mark Roberts has returned to the middle blocking position after a year of red-shirting.

"Mark's getting better and better — he's getting his jump up, he's hitting higher and harder...he's a motivator on the floor." Preston said. "He's the intensive player out there who's always getting the guys psyched up. Senior Joerg Lorscheider will also be middle blocking for the Gauchos. He was voted Most Valuable Player by his teammates last year and Preston has high expectations for Lorscheider this time around. "He's a good player — one of our best," Preston said.

Setting for the Gauchos this year will be senior and Team Captain Mike Gorman, senior Jim McLaughlin, Casey Gorman and a freshman recruit, Jared Huffman.

"I'm confident with all four of my setters," Preston said. "I could put any of them in at any time — as a matter of fact, Jerry Huffman could possibly start as a setter or outside hitter; he's a real good player.'

After a year's absence from the Gaucho squad, junior Richmond Hall is back and playing very well. "He's serving, hitting and passing exceptionally well. He's come back a lot more mature and responsible about what he's doing," Preston said. The season will also witness the return of middle blocker

FLIVVER

While "Flivver" is the nickname given to the model-T Ford during the 1920s, it is also the name of a charming restaurant located at 5112 Hollister Avenue in the Magnolia Shopping Center. Not suprisingly, the ambience is reminiscent of the outrageous roaring 20's. Enthusiastic waitresses will serve you lunch and dinner seven days a week. Flivver is open from 11:00 am to 10:00 pm. On Friday they close at 11:00 pm

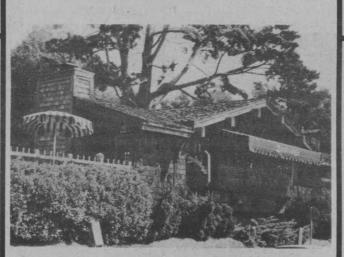

Flivver's menu contains an extensive list of entrees. Try a three egg Omelette, or how about a Frittata (a rich combination of bacon, onions, mushrooms, zucchini, spinach, parmesan cheese and eggs-fast baked).

Just as Henry Ford sipped on a few while designing his model T, you too can enjoy mixed drinks in the Flivver spirit. Perhaps you'd like to try our Gas Hopper, or Rumble Seat Sling,or maybe a High Mileage or a Ginny Gin Fizz.

Lunch at the Flivver is an Epicurean delight. Try potato skins or nachos as an appetizer. Then choose from a variety of burgers, sandwiches or salads.

The Quiche of the day is outstanding and changes every day. Crepes Christophe, a breast of chicken, fresh mushrooms and sauce bechamel gently simmered will make your mouth water.

For dinner try the Teriyaki Beef Kabob, London Broil or Chicken Teriyaki. So don't miss the Flivver, it's a taste treat you won't beat!

Peabody's is a lesson in basics: Good food, served fresh and hot, and simply prepared. Quick and efficient service, a full bar and a menu that allows for an individual's various tastes, always keeps the

The absence of frills doesn't seem to affect the crowds that gather for a good time during the lunch and dinner hours. There must be something refreshing about a restaurant in Montecito that doesn't have pepper grinders longer than ski poles and a menu that reads with more difficulty than the Book of Revelations.

The basics at Peabody's don't need French names to spice up their dishes. The burgers, sandwiches, omelettes and Mexican specialties need nothing more than deliciousness to bring a growing number of regular customers back for more. Santa Barbarans enjoy the basics of

You can always create your own delightful dishes at Peabody's by adding accessories: a variety of meats, cheeses and vegetables can be matched with any of the "basic" menu items. When this is combined with a salad bar filled with all your favorite munchies, margaritas by the mug or by the liter, a large sunny patio, and entertainment five nights a week, you have a lunch, dinner and evening getaway all located in one comfortable bar and grill.

For an afternoon meeting, a simple supper, or a night out on the town, one has to go a long way to beat Peabody's. It has an atmosphere that is unstuffed, open and attentive to people's needs. Both young and old come to Peabody's to meet and take advantage of the delicious food and drink offered at great prices.

Stop into Peabody's and recharge yourself. Try one of their daily specials, some potato skins or homemade soup. They are open 7 days a week, from 11 a.m. until midnight Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to midnight Saturday and Sunday.

Look for the brown and yellow umbrellas at 1198 Coast Village Road in Montecito. Local talent is showcased at Peabody's Tuesday through Saturday nights beginning around 8:30 p.m. for your drinking and dining pleasure.

Focus 1983

Board of Supervisors To Address City Conditions

By STARA WALLIS Nexus Staff Writer

The Santa Barbara County Board of Supervisors, which consists of four incumbents and one new member, plans to focus on issues in 1983 which are not dissimilar from the issues stressed in 1982.

In 1983, the board plans to address problems concerning water shortages, offshore oil drilling, economic survival, the rezoning of counties and the conditions of streets and roads.

David Yager, who has served as a supervisor for seven years, sees the water shortage issue as one which the board will 'grapple with, but probably not solve." De Wayne Holmdahl, now in his second year on the board, thinks that some type of state water is needed for the water problems to be solved. Toru Miyoshi, the new member of the board, disagrees with Holmdahl. He thinks that the water shortages are the county's responsibility.

All five supervisors agree that the coastal oil exploration represents a threat to the environment. Holmdahl has strong concerns for the air quality, especially in the Yager thinks that to protect the air quality, the board needs to pressure the state of California to put conditions on drilling, such as requirements that the tankers recover fumes. He said the board would attempt to exert this pressure 'legally, by suing the state, and politically, by leaning on legislators."

Miyoshi is also concerned and stated, "We must protect the coastline for tourism." He also pointed out the fact that energy is necessary. He hopes to find a happy medium so that both needs can be met.

Supervisor Robert Kallman, who is in his third term, is trying to make the best out of the bad oil situation. "The county needs to exercise as much control as possible," Kallman said. We need to try to find a way of receiving monetary compensation for channel drilling.'

Bill Wallace, who has been a supervisor since 1976, sees economic survival as a major issue that the board must discuss this year. "Ever since Proposition 13 passed, the budget has been a question mark. Each year, we think the hammer will fall in the an overwhelming conflict.

next year. This year is the worst ever." Yager also thinks that a major issue confronting the board in 1983 will be to solve the fiscal problems in the county.

Both Kallman and Wallace suggested that another important item for the board to solve is how to rezone the county. The board plans to reopen the general plan in order to make the zoning consistent with it. Urban lines must be drawn with respect to agriculture and housing.

The repairing of streets and roads is yet another issue that the board must face in the new year. There is not enough money available to take care of all the necessary repairs. Yager said the board will attempt to get gas tax revenues by imposing a twocents-a-gallon tax which the counties would receive and use for these repairs.

None of the supervisors think there will be a problem integrating the new supervisor, Miyoshi, into the board. All seem to think that the board will work well together again this year.

Yager said no petty jealousy and competition exist among the supervisors, so Miyoshi should have no problem becoming 'a member of the family.

"Miyoshi does represent a shift to the left, and he will make a big difference philosophically," Yager said.

Yager sees himself as the deciding vote on controversial issues because he is in the middle of the "conservative-liberal scale."

Wallace also thinks that Miyoshi has made the board more moderate. "The board was more pro-development before; now they're in the middle.

Kallman had nothing but praise for Miyoshi. He said he had developed a close personal relationship with the new supervisor when they worked together on the Coastal Commission. Kallman disagrees with the opinion that Miyoshi represents a moderate shift, and feels that he will have a positive effect on the board.

According to Holmdahl, "Miyoshi will set his own direction." Holmdahl does not think he will have any problems with Miyoshi. He said their major differences are in their opinions of how the water issue should be solved, but that even that difference was not

The idea behind the Crafts Center is to allow anyone to come in and work with clay. Both the tools and the clay are provided at very reasonable costs. Additionally, those who have never worked with clay before may obtain assistance from Chavez who has a degree in Fine Arts.

Chavez hopes the Crafts Center will be a success, and further hopes to be able to teach young children from the surrounding schools. An additional goal is to get an electric kickwheel so senior citizens may also participate at the center.
