This decision will temporarily end a long-year controversy between Exxon and the board over the merits of pipelining versus tankering oil out of the channel. Minority enrollment at UCSB reached a record high last fall when 2,248 students, which accounted for over 17 percent of the total population, with the biggest increase occurring among blacks and graduate women.

Based on a 94 percent response made by UCSB students on their optional Student Information Sheet, the number of minorities currently enrolled is up 8.3 percent from last year.

A greater number of minority students are enrolling in UCSB than ever before and this trend is expected to continue.

The median of the midterm was 50 according to Baldwin. "I jolly well. I have stated my grading policy from day one," said! "There has been much concern because the faculty Whitehouse, an M.E. 105 student, said. "I think it was perfectly fair. The top man was 100 by definition." "I don't know if he (Baldwin) realizes it in class, but he makes you look so ridiculous, you don't really want to talk to him. You don't want to get your head bitten off," Carolyn Whitehouse, an M.E. 105 student, said. "We're aware there is a problem and we're working very hard to do everything we can for both students and faculty involved," Assistant Dean of Engineering Roger Wood said. "There has been much concern because the faculty member has been ill." "I was hospitalized for three lectures because of emotional problems caused by M.E. 105.1 managed to cope by 56 students out of approximately 90 students enrolled in the course, which is required for engineering majors. "They are dead wrong about the grading policy," Baldwin said. "Everybody who attended lecture knows that jolly well. I have stated my grading policy from day one." The median of the midterm was 50 according to Baldwin. "I think it was perfectly fair. The top man was 100 by definition," he said. Baldwin said he was made aware of the petition but has not previously taught M.E. 105. "Students were distraught over the midterm which consisted of one question with 18 contingent parts. The cover sheet of the exam states, "The maximum partial credit for any wrong answer is 10 percent even if the error was a consequence of a previous error."" Whitehouse received a grade of 15 on the midterm which she attributes to luck. "One guy just happened to work with tailers (the subject of the midterms) so he did OK on it. The highest grade was a 90 or 50." Whitehouse said. Baldwin said he was made aware of the petition but has spoken to no one about the problem except the originator of the petition, McQuown. He feels the petition was drawn up because "A, it is a required course; B, the authors are basically physicists; C, they are disqualified because they think the course is irrelevant; and D, they are disqualified because they personally dislike me." McQuown and Brown had previously tried to resolve their problem with Baldwin, but were unable to reach an adequate solution. "We wanted to see if there was support from other students," Brown said. "Most people are dismayed with what's happening." "I went to Baldwin to get help after the midterm and he suggested that I drop the course," McQuown said. Baldwin said after McQuown confronted him with his complaints, he referred him to another engineering professor because he "had to go to a lecture, and he (the other professor) was more qualified than I to help him with his problem." "He (Baldwin) made it very clear that he did not want to speak with students," McQuown said. "That was the first thing he said to the class." Brown added, "he didn't even introduce himself." Baldwin said students could take other options aside from the petition. "They could burn my house down, they could get an audience with the chancellor, they could physically attack me." The course has improved immeasurably from its low point and it is going to improve steadily, Baldwin said. Next quarter the course will be taken over by the Electrical Engineering Department. Baldwin noted. "It's about time E.E. look over because the student population is almost completely E.E. majors," he said. Despite the problems with the course, Baldwin will be teaching M.E. 105 again. "I'll be teaching it when the thing has cooled off and they put the best man back on it," he said.

While renovating a building located on a quiet side street I came across the following article. Concerning the scope of U.S. involvement in "entanglements" the article which was written July 4th, 1986, is especially meaningful.

The event entitled "Today, and Always. Be Proud That You’re an American," states that "this one hundred and sixtieth anniversary of the nation’s birthday, every American should give his country their undivided support, that he lives in America, that he is an American, and that our country is separated by two vast oceans from a war and war-marred world."

If the "men of 1776" had not been men of firm convictions, we today would still be in the grip of one people’s making decisions for the others of the father’s of our country we should still be in a foreign land, our own continent, and if we ever again permit ourselves to be entrapped in foreign quarrels and upheavals we shall be, because we are but ourselves. We made that mistake once, with the results that we all know. However, let us hold on to the wisdom of the founders of these United States. So do not forget, as we celebrate our independence, involved in the next’s turmoil, and not knowing that we are setting a precedent for other people’s making decisions for the others. It was good news that the Dow Chemical Corporation is taking its dioxin-laden D-21 and silver off the market. Dioxin killed at least 40 people in France and there is a relative of a worker whose blood tested positive for Dioxin in a slow poison burning off the market. It can cause cancer, especially soft issue sarcoma, and also liver and other cancers. And it can cause other illnesses like multiple allergies. Dioxin will still be broadcast in herbicides from other herbicide manufacturers and in various other products including plywood, paper, and plasticizer ("pesticide") and diisobenzofuran ("pestan"). The Environmental Protection Agency has conducted court cases for years to try and force the companies to reduce the use of 2,4-D and other herbicides, but the chemicals is used for contributions for our lifetime can make strike half the population. Anyone who might be interested in reading a new book by Lewis Mumford may want to read his book. I have read the poem, or my article on chemical foliage published in Prevention. On the evening of Tuesday, November 29, there were several people who were standing in line to vote in the polls that overlooks Storke Plaza from the Music Bldg. I saw an older woman and a man and a woman who took a wrong turn. It was the same day in the Music Bldg that a group of women were shown a wrong way to the Plaza in which there were 500 people and the woman yelled "Help, Police,Viva La Revolucion." If you are one of those who witnessed that occurrence, please contact the Police. Ombudsmen, Geoffrey Yglesias, the Daily Nexus, or the Santa Barbara Public Defender 063-7140, immediately. It's critically important that you relate what you saw. I am the man involved in that altercation and I'm being charged with BATTERY. (The first hearing is scheduled for December 2nd.)

December 1988 has been designated by the United Nations as Human Rights Year. This is a day set aside to commit to the ideal that men and women throughout the world should be guaranteed the basic rights to take action. It is also a day for all of us to commit to activities to think about the human condition all over the world, not only in the countries that the media and politicians choose to highlight. Amnesty International is a voluntary worldwide human rights organization which conscience through direct approaches to authorities of the countries concerned, or indirectly through local public and private mass media and public and professional interest in the cause. These other groups must participate in specific campaigns, such as a campaign against political killings by the Nicaraguan government or a campaign for the abolition of torture.

Amnesty International has been investigating and publicizing the executions in many countries, including Peru. An example of the work of Amnesty is a letter the organization wrote to the President of Peru, Fernando the U.S. recognized that the proposals were a hopeless one and elected to leave secure in the knowledge that his bank accounts in Switzerland were still intact.

My main quarrel with Mr. Cothran, concerns our reasons for invading Grenada and the moral blinding which could allow such an event to take place. It is, in effect, a clear case of double standards and imprecision. The United States is ever quick to send in troops to protect democracy, or the arrest of a dictator. By the same token, they defend the island of freedom, liberty and justice. Such a double line of fine and doubtless acceptable even to reac-citons. But where does democracy lie when the U.S. militarily and thus despair the citizens of that country of their liberty and freedom? Where is our democracy when we decide to replace the leadership of Grenada by a U.S. military occupation? Doubtless, if the island is asked by a U.S. Marine, we simply doubt that the ordinary civilian with his basic extreme dissatisfaction with the loss of his civil rights. In respect to the U.S. occupation, however, we have the unprecedented success of a clearly popular uprising of a people tired and disgusted by the oppression caused by the U.S. backed Shah of Iran. The Shah himself, clearly who had greater interests in the continuous

Human in the wide

Seeking Peace In the War Of The Sexes

By STEPHEN MILLER

You are probably used to reading the weekly "Womans-ize" column in this space. I have taken it upon myself to exercise poetic license and rename this article "Humanize" because of the current state. I have voluntarily joined the "Womansize" brigade to discuss the "sex war" from a man's perspective. I have been more interested to discuss the universal equality in the experience of both sexes. As a man, I suppose, you may see the prospect of temporarily "castrating" myself (ouch!), and thus ob-erving the nature of female/male relationships from a male perspective. I have chosen, however, to pursue the male perspective. I have chosen, however, to pursue the assumption that sex is a biological, social, and psychological underpinnings of the human saga.

First, it is a biological and social fact that other human beings are not capable of conceiving of a man of mixed race or gender from day one. And it is because of this unavoidable reality that we cannot simply assume that the changing of a man must be either physically or within our individual consciousnesses.

To give our living meaning the "vast scheme of things" we define ourselves according to the summation of our lives.

It follows, then, that nearly all of what we are as individuals, our"self", is the combination of everything which inherently relies on a sense of "cultural continuity. It is a "cultural myth" or "collective fiction" which we have been trained to conform, so that we as we are growing up against the whole of society, we are jeopardizing our sense of personal identity. So change occurs slowly, but as painfully it does so because we all, at one time or another, desire to change. In this particular effect change, we often get caught in the trap of a very temporary "fix" or "solution" to a problem that is not one extreme or another.

In Mr. Cothran's discussions that society clings to is between male and female, both biologically (for obvious reasons) and socially. Indeed, society has been built around a certain yet prescribed set of duties, which when scrutinized in a modern context appear absurd and arbitrary.

Opportunistic advertisers, for example, are one of the more palpable (albeit impersonal and superficial) cultural attempts to manipulate our "embarrassment about who we are" or "who we ought to be." As far as our sexuality is concerned, advertisers capitalize on the most primal of our insecurities and fears, to do so, they transcend ar-cetypal images into modernized, sanitized, and plasticized stereotypes.

However, I was disappointed to see a speaker for the S.B. Rape Crisis Center, quoted by one who is ten rapes a day reported and the last to accuse it as an example. In respect to the number — 800 rapes in Santa Barbara last year. I have been hearing the "90 per-

Time Flies

The school year is flying by. Isn't that what everybody says? Flying by with the impact of a plane crashing homes in the Edlow beach area.

As planes fly by they fluctuate from alarming power to apathetic impotence. In the same manner, our attitudes toward school change; at times all-consuming, dominant to the extent that everything else is blocked out. Then taken granted.

Now, when our lives are overwhelmed by the onslaught of assignments, we have found that the small and insignifcant details in our collegiate rounds take on additional importance. We get perturbed when a classmate takes too long to return a call. We notice what would usually be ignored while we are in school.

Since time is running out, the object of my obsession is to enjoy what I can. It is a matter of concern when I see without hearing two bleeping beeping sounds on the hour, or every half-hour. "Time Flies." While digital watches are accurate, we appear to, not mention that she is seemingly outnumbered by the "prettiest" or "most manly," but also the best in all that we ever try to achieve. I believe there is something wrong with the system. When speaking on behalf of ideas which all evoke fear and irrationality in parts of our unified, it is especially important to state the evidence clearly and accurately. Is the "wetunperupted" figure? Or is it just some people's imagination? (A whole lot of rapes go unreported.)

Grenada: Documents Question U.S. Credibility

By SUZANNE AVELLANO

The U.S. military observers who were placed in Grenada by President Reagan's "successful" invasion last month have added to the confusion that has been bothering a number of critical American journalists and concerned citizens ever since.

Two recent observations have been that the Grenadian military base of Mr. Reagan's imagination has turned out to be a tourist airport after all; and that Grenada under Bishop received only seven million dollars a year in aid from their friends in the Soviet Union, a mere fraction of the amount that we allow President Reagan to spend annually to his friends in El Salvador.

The very chilly diplomatic relationship between the Castro government and the thugs who deposed Cuba's close ally, Bishop, was exposed recently, as was a plot to murder the leader of the education and had not interfered with the operation. When the Americans opened fire on the Cubans, they fought back in self-defense. It was only then, two and one-half hours after the attacks on the Grenada had begun, that the United States sent the following message to Cuba:

"The United States of America and Cuba are maintaining through Interests Section. The United States has one in Washington, and we are aware of their concern about the time, and we students feel sure, they were drab entryway to our campus showroom of insects. No, I think the BEST..."
U.C. Riverside Graduate To Serve As New Student Lobby Director

By DAVE CEFALI

U.C. Riverside, was president of the UCR Graduate Students Association for two years and last year served in the External Affairs office. He has been a member of the lobby for four years. “With the goal of applying, I’m very pleased at being chosen,” Balestrieri said.

The U.C. Student Lobby is an organization, located in Sacramento, that lobbies for student interests in the state legislature. It is composed of a director, two associate directors, and several student representatives. The student lobby director is chosen by the SBPC every year.

The proposal, which was submitted for faculty discussion by the U.C. General Education Committee after its investigation of changing the required categories for the student body of providing up to five courses in fine arts and humanities; three from English reading and composition courses; three are: completion of two upper level courses in a single academic field, add a separate General Education requirement of four courses in various sciences category, and change the fine arts and humanities provisions to four courses from the arts and literature.

Faculty members talked about the quality of the proposal, vague because it fails to list the revision of the traditional categories really is. The new categories are not intuitively obvious, Costantino said. The new categories are totally inferior,” Costantino said.

The legislation’s definition of what constitutes a course was questioned by faculty members saying it gave both an abstract outline, and also listed specific departments. It was the committee’s intention to search their minds for appropriate departments, and perhaps they needed more people to work on the task, Hollister said.

There is a failure in the communication between the lobby and the General Education Committee, W. Richard Comstock, Chair of the Religious Studies Department said.

The committee and faculty alike seem to have not recognized how radical the revision of the traditional categories really is. The new categories are not intuitively obvious, Costantino said. The new categories are totally inferior,” Costantino said.

There is a failure in the communication between the lobby and the General Education Committee, W. Richard Comstock, Chair of the Religious Studies Department said.

The committee and faculty alike seem to have not recognized how radical the revision of the traditional categories really is. The new categories are not intuitively obvious, Costantino said. The new categories are totally inferior,” Costantino said.

The legislation’s definition of what constitutes a course was questioned by faculty members saying it gave both an abstract outline, and also listed specific departments. It was the committee’s intention to search their minds for appropriate departments, and perhaps they needed more people to work on the task, Hollister said.

A TOAST TO THE NEXITES!

Hey Nexites, can you induldge me?! We have 32 whole days of freedom! Everybody should be surpried to indulge in their favorite desert sport. I'll do a little two-stepin' for all of ya. I'll also think a touch about the trying times on New Year's Eve. You came to our place, and I was a winner, but then you're all at my house. Hey Nexites, don't be a bully. It's great having a roommate who knows what it means to be "next year's bitch"! And don't worry about all those bottles of champagne and thinking we could change the world! How's that for Dodson or Datsun?), you're always with us. But my favorite is a winner with a good screen. Hey Mike, what are you going to do and why are you weaving sorrows? It's, that rug doll and nuclear-fallout cooking are the reasons the Nexus is indebted to your little song and dance never hurt. Oh, Bob, you must always add those clinchers - "Oh pleaseon, don't erron the chair in my office? Heidi and Ray May and I have to make sure you do the same. The rest depends on the availability of funding because we can't do it with university funds." Huttenback added.

The major setback in establishing the research institute is acquiring funds, which is a minimum of $20,000 necessary to carry the project, Huttenback said.

"The head of the organization originally bought up the idea when we were in Italy in conjunction with the musicians. But the University Education Abroad Program in Padua," Huttenback said.

"We have no great obligations. We have signed letters of intent and we will contribute one full-time employee and they will do the same. The rest depends on the availability of funding because we can't do it with university funds," Huttenback added.

Although the major responsibility in obtaining financial backing rests on the Italians, there are other means of acquiring funds, Botkin said, including possible grants from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the National Science Foundation for International Cooperation and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. There are even through proposals. If a group of scientists get together and apply for a project, they can obtain research grants. But the sum of a couple of research projects doesn't come up to the establishment of a research institute, Botkin added.

The University of Venice has allocated $40,000 for the first year of the institute, and Botkin said he is planning another conference scheduled for next October in Venice.

Of course, there is hope that the American side can give money for the center. The operation cannot start until we have the money for the center. And so they would be happy to let us take over.

"We're willing to formulate the ideas, but the Italians have to provide the basic monetary needs. If they can't get funds, it's more difficult as to whether there is a great amount of hope or interest," Botkin added. "The conference will let us help determine if there will be an opening of some facility."

The University of California cannot handle this project on its own, Huttenback said, but he added that he is "basically optimistic."
CalPIRG Report Card
Grades’ State Officials

By DANA SNYDER Nexus Reporter

State government officials flunked their 1983 state legislature session according to a grading card displayed in Storke Plaza by UCSB CalPIRG representatives last week.

CalPIRG students and volunteers said their study showed California state legislators voted for the consumer less than half the time and only on bills with little importance.

CalPIRG workers display a copy of their 1983 State Government Report Card.

"Yes, the state legislature did not pass one bill on behalf of the public interest," Marcus Weinberg, CalPIRG staff representative said, "but even if they had passed, they (the bills) were too weak to have had an effect on the public."

"The grading card was made to let the public know what's going on in Sacramento and to let people know what their state legislators are doing," she added.

CalPIRG's study claimed that legislators failed the three most important requirements for a good government: responsibility, representation, and reliability. The Senate's overall score, according to CalPIRG was 44.5 percent and the Assembly finished with 35.3 percent just under the passing mark of 35 percent.

Individual assembly members scored better than senators: there were 12 As, 13 Bs and 19 Cs and Ds among them on the grading scale CalPIRG used, Weinberg said.

"These poor marks show that Tri-Counties area elected officials are very concerned about. ' ' The voters are going to be constituents," Weinberg said.

The grading card was made to let the public know what's going on in Sacramento and to let people know what their state legislators are doing," she added.

Lagomarsino’s Vote on ERA Receives Criticism

By YVONNE PETERSEN

Nexus Reporter

Santa Barbara Republican Congressman Robert Lagomarsino has met with criticism as a result of being among the United States House of Representatives members who voted down a reintroduced Equal Rights Amendment Nov. 15.

"He (Lagomarsino) favored the ERA in the fall without qualifications, but now in a recent radio interview, his opinion of the issue was no — unless the prohibition for abortion was added," Mary Lou Thompson, member of the National Organization for Women and the Women's National Political Caucus, said.

"Abortion has nothing to do with the ERA, but rather is a question of the right to privacy," Thompson said.

"The congressman did not vote no on the ERA, but rather on the amendment to limit debate on such matters," Lagomarsino's District Assistant Ed Bewell said. "He (Lagomarsino) didn't feel it was right to limit the debate on such an important issue."

"Despite the way the vote looks, Lagomarsino supports the ERA and did so in his campaign and also on the floor of the House during the amendment," Bedwell said.

"The debate amendment was a political ploy used to make both Republicans and Democrats who voted no on the issue look like they were against the ERA," he added.

Administrative Assistant of the UCSB Women's Center Kathryn Ortiz responded by saying since "the same measure was presented in 1972, how long do we need to debate?" ERA did not pass because "there are not enough women in the power structure and the ERA is seen by some as nothing which will take away some of their power," she said.

"I don't understand this because the word woman or man is not used in the amendment, thus this amendment could help these men's wives, mothers, sisters, daughters as well as themselves," she added.

"Lagomarsino is also against women in combat, but I feel women will be exposed to this whether or not the ERA passes (women) have already been flying planes and been nurses on the front lines for many years," Ortiz said.

In regard to the debate rule, Thompson said the issue has been talked about long enough and "people already know what is or will not do."

"The recent failure of the ERA is useless to women because now we know who said no by voting the process of voting them out of office and voting in those who represent our true feelings," Ortiz said.

A recent Harris Poll said 62 percent of the people polled of both sexes favored the passage of the ERA, thus "this was clearly political voting as politicians and not representing the interests of the people," Ortiz added.

"As long as there is occupational segregation including insurance and pension discrimination, there is a need for the ERA," Ortiz said.

New Associate Dean Plans To Stress Faculty Diversity

By MONICA TRASANDES

Nexus Reporter

Black Studies Department Chair Edmund J. Keller has been appointed associate dean of the Graduate Division of UCSB, primarily to promote future minority representation in the UCSB faculty by increasing graduate minority recruitment.

Keller's new responsibilities will begin Jan. 1 and will include work in all aspects of the graduate division, but he will be concentrating on overseeing grants mainly for minority graduate and some undergraduate students, he said.

He explained certain types of financial aid are specifically awarded to graduate students in such fields as business, chemistry and computer science where minorities appear to be underrepresented.

"I will also be responsible for writing grants proposals which will be intended to secure funds from various sources, both federal and private to in order to promote graduate education on the UCSB campus, particularly the graduate education of minorities," Keller said.

Keller feels there is a sufficient representation of minorities on the UCSB faculty and the best way to assure more minority faculty is to provide a stronger graduate program.

"The secret to a healthy pool of minority faculty is having a large pool of qualified minority graduate students and related to that is the need to have a strong undergraduate program. All of these things are related."

In 1982 the percentage of black students in the undergraduate as well as the graduate division was only two per cent of the total enrollment, and currently there are only 19 black graduate students, Keller said.

Keller taught political science at Indiana University for nine years and was director of a regional minority fellowship program there. "It was a big program with an endowment of over a couple of million dollars and we had a great deal of success attracting and producing top notch academics," Keller said.

The program, housed at Indiana University, included 16 other large universities. "Professor Keller is a very eminent political scientist who we were very happy to recruit for the Department of Political Science and the Department of Black Studies," Chancellor Robert Hutchenback said.

"He also has an additional administrative ability: he's had administration experience at the Indiana university from which he came and we've been thinking for some time of helping an associate dean in the graduate office to help with a number of things, but particularly to help with the recruitment of minority students into graduate school at UCSB," Hutchenback added.

"It's difficult to hire minority faculty and until..."

High School Academic Achievers Attend UCSB

By SILYIO PANTA  Nexus Reporter

UCSB's Young Scholars Program in the College of Creative Studies is designed to give highly capable and motivated junior high and high school students the opportunity to take college courses.

The program's emphasis is directed at providing for the needs of exceptional students in all areas of academic study, according to Sharon Ekroot, coordinator of the Young Scholars Program.

Like the Accelerated Study Access Program in the College of Letters and Science, this program gives highly capable and motivated junior high and high school students the opportunity to take college-level courses. "I enjoy it very much. I'm taking it because my high school doesn't offer these same classes in physics," he said.

The program will definitely continue in the future, Ekroot said. Though it will be funded by the same sponsors, the students participating in it will be paying fees for the courses they take.

"We hope to make it a permanent program at the university," Ekroot added.

One of the program's benefits is that students can associate with college students and members of the faculty who share their same interests, Ekroot explained. This reassures the participants of the program that they aren't different from others because of their exceptional skills, she added.

The courses provided through the College allow the students to "develop their skills and go faster without redundancy and approach their goals more directly," Ekroot said. Another advantage for the students is that they develop a sense of pride in knowing that they can not only achieve that they aren't different from others because of their exceptional skills, she added.

Ekroot added.

"I provide the opportunity for students who've taken their required classes in high school to take classes in another subject through the program," Steve Casalio, an adjunct lecture in the College, said. "This addition, this program tailors the curriculum to student interests and needs.

Ekroot explained that entrance requirements for the program are largely flexible, depending on whatever discipline a student chooses to study. Prospective students from the seventh to 12th grades are selected on the basis of their incentive and academic ability and are interviewed individually to see if they're able to handle the coursework. Ekroot said. These students who show high interest and motivation are usually encouraged to join the program, she added that the program gives these exceptional students the chance to develop their abilities.

Peter Commons, a 15-year-old student from Laguna High School in Santa Barbara, is currently taking a course in physics through the program. "I enjoy it very much. I'm taking it because my high school doesn't offer these same classes in physics," he said.

Local Organization Sends Medical Goods Abroad

By JOANNE CHERNICK
Nexus Reporter

Two airflights containing medical goods will be sent to El Salvador for the Christmas holidays by Direct Relief International, Theron Jarchow, a medical supply division coordinator for DRI of Santa Barbara said.

DRI is a non-profit organization that aids health facilities throughout the developing world, Jarchow explained.

These medical shipments include medicine donated by pharmaceutical manufacturers and doctors, volunteer doctors, dentists and paramedical personnel, DRI Director of Programs Kathryn Cody said. They will be distributed throughout the damaged rural areas and hospitals in El Salvador.

Besides the El Salvador airlift project, the organization is currently involved in a relief program for drought victims in Ethiopia.

DRI will also be conducting a field assessment tour of the Philippines in January to gather support in the Philippine community and to make sure the supplies get there, Cody said.

The foundation chooses the areas to aid by screening applications from charitable organizations. To receive help, the organization must ensure they can distribute the goods, DRI said. Jarchow said verification is done through a questionnaire and information verifying the patient and doctor load, she added.

In addition, DRI has volunteers in countries to verify the validity of the request, Cody said.

The DRI is a 35-year-old organization, which spends $7 million each year on medical shipments and transportation to 50 countries, Cody said, adding DRI donate goods and help to needy hospitals, refugees and disaster areas around the world.

Questions Arise Over Approval...

The word "herein" in the constitutional clause demands that the by-laws be included as part of the legal code governing UCSB, Deeley said. "If you look at the student by-laws it says a student body director must be approved by a two-thirds majority vote of the Legislative Council which 6-2 clearly is not," he explained. "They voted him in, even after he wasn't approved by a majority."

The wording of the constitutional clause has caused a legal question requiring the attention of A.S. Judicial Council. Last spring the case was initiated by Leg Council Representatives Scott Moser and Cathy Jensen. Their complaint concerned the process of appointing Van Giesen and it revolved around the by-law clause which states two-thirds majority vote is needed to approve an executive officer, A.S. Judicial Council Chair Cathy Kleiman said.

The Constitution and By-Laws Committee asked Judicial Council to consider the case once again.

"The Judicial Council ruled that when you have a discrepancy between the by-laws and the constitution, the higher document, which in this case is the constitution, takes precedence," Deeley said. "Our problem with this is that when you do that you're voiding the entire by-laws."

In a meeting Wednesday night, however, Judicial Council refused to reconsider the case and recommended once again that Legislative Council strike the contradictory clause from the by-laws. The recommendation was authored by Judicial Council member Sue Carlan.

"The decision by Judicial Council nullifies the power of the by-laws, Moser said. "As I see it, there is no conflict between the constitution and the by-laws. The by-laws expand on and clarify the constitution," he explained. "If the by-laws don't clarify the constitution as decided by Judicial Council then what's their purpose?"

Judicial Council has ignored the main focus of the case, Moser said. "I don't see them as being an effective Judicial Council," he added.

Upon reaching a decision last June, Judicial Council sent its recommendation to Leg Council for approval. "I thought Judicial Council was supposed to deal with this. We said it was a violation of the legal code and they're supposed to be interpreting the constitution and the legal code," Deeley said. "I feel that if they had done their job correctly they would define the 'herein' in pertinent to the entire legal code."

Legally, the Judicial Council cannot hear the case for a second time, Kleiman said. "I recognize that this 'still a problem, but they've already exhausted this branch of government."

"We made our recommendation and referred it to Legislative Council and why they have not acted upon it is something that I cannot comment on," Kleiman added.

"I'm very excited. This is happening now. It's impairing my efficiency," Van Giesen said. The appointment ratified last spring needs clarification in order to ensure that consistency is maintained in the future, he added.

"It's interesting to me that when the appointment was going through it was the individual that was being questioned and it didn't occur to question the constitution," Van Giesen said. "I don't understand how such a reversal could occur." The issue will be addressed by Leg Council during the first meeting of Winter quarter, Brandt said. "We just have to put our heads together and this will be struck from the by-laws and then vote on and approve it by a two-thirds majority vote," he explained.

"We got the recommendations of Judicial Council during finals week of Spring quarter. Over the transition of summertime it got shelved into the back," Brandt said.

McPeak offered an alternative to using Gaviota as the location of the oil projects. “The alternative site of Pt. Conception is far more acceptable,” he said, adding “the discharge of produce water and increased boat traffic would impact the valuable kelp resource.”

John Helmer, representing the city of Santa Barbara, spoke to the panel regarding concerns over the adverse “spillover effect on the hospitality industry” because of reduced access to the marine recreation. People go to museums, to restaurants, to the movies after they’ve gone to the beach, Helmer explained. Because of reduced marine access, fewer people will go to the beach, which will mean fewer people will engage in these nighttime activities, he added.

The public still has time to voice its opinion on the matter. The deadline for submitting written opinions is Dec. 19.

Weinberg said although the state legislature will not be happy with the results of the grading card, a legislator’s vote is a matter of public record. “Some won’t be happy with it, but the facts are there,” she said. “They cast the vote, we didn’t.”

Weinberg said the release of their state legislative grading card will make people more aware of the results of the 1983 state legislative session.

Weinberg said “We’re not saying they’re cheating on their constituents, it’s just that the public is not being well represented. Because of the activities of powerful monied special interest groups, the legislative process as a whole has not been able to represent the people effectively with bills that will make a difference, and that will make a difference, and will be modified, he said.

Individual area representatives scored higher than the legislators did collectively. O’Connell scored 75 percent, and Hart scored 75 percent.

Weinberg said that “I think it’s (the report card) a sad commentary on the legislature as a whole. When students flunk out they get kicked out of school. When legislators flunk, they stay in their position and don’t represent what their constituents wish, or don’t represent the public’s interest,” Lori Granick, Intern on the Legislative Profile Project with CalPIRG said. Granick added the report should be done every year. “I think it’s essential. It gives accountability to the public on the legislators.”

Next year CalPIRG will begin its campaign to reform the political process. They will advocate public financing of election and limited campaign expenditures and contributions.”

CalPIRG is a non-profit, non-partisan research and advocacy organization, established and directed by California college and university students, supported by more than 86,000 California citizens.

Gauchos Ready For NCAA Play

A long and successful 1983 season for the nationally ranked UCSB women's volleyball team continues this week as Coach Kathy Gregory's squad prepares to host a first round match of the NCAA playoffs.

The Gauchos will play Northwestern University in the first round. The game will be played Sunday afternoon at 2 p.m. in Rob Gym.

There had been some discussion about playing the match in the Events Center, because it is larger than Rob Gym. This idea was rejected by Gregory and the team. They wanted to play in the same building that they have played all of their home matches in this season, so the match will be played in Rob Gym.

In the regular season the Gauchos posted a mark of 36-17, while playing against most of the top twenty ranked teams in the country. As a result of their solid play against tough opponents the Gauchos spent the season ranked in the top twenty, and now they will play in the NCAA tournament.

"I'm excited about playing in the NCAA championship tournament," said Coach Gregory. Gregory is even more enthusiastic about the fact that her team was chosen to host their first round contest.

Northwestern is an opponent that the Gauchos have not seen this season. The Wildcats from Evanston Illinois are the champions of the Big Ten conference, with a season record of 24-11 and ranking of 20th in the latest polls.

The Wildcat attack is spearheaded by Senior Liz Dougans who has 366 kills and a .267 efficiency rating and Laurie Miller who has 259 kills and a .282 percentage. Junior setter Jackie Nunez runs the offense for Northwestern.

Gregory believes that Northwestern will have the advantage in the offensive struggle because of their size advantage over the Gauchos. According to Gregory the Wildcats start three six-footers and a couple of hitters in the 5'9" to 5'10" range.

Despite the advantage in size that Northwestern seems to have, Gregory in confident that the Gauchos' quickness will give them a defensive advantage. In addition, Northwestern has not had much experience playing against teams with UCSB's speed and style of play.

If the Gauchos are victorious Sunday, then their next stop is Stockton. In Stockton the winner of this first round match will meet the winner of the Cal Poly SLO-San Jose State match in a second round match of the Western Regional Tournament hosted by USP.

The UCSB women’s basketball team continues its season-long gauntlet as the Lady Gauchos will compete in the Arizona Invitational in Tucson. The host Arizona Wildcats’ tournament rounds opponent tomorrow evening. The other opening round matchup features Wayland Baptist and Texas El Paso. The championship is slated for Saturday evening at J.A.’s Memorial Center.

The Gauchos took a 1-3 record into last night’s PACA monster with the Nevada-Las Vegas Lady Rebels. Coach Darla Wilson has been pleased with the team’s overall performances through the first four games of the new campaign. “Our game plan is to keep on concentrating on good execution and see where that takes us, both offensively and defensively,” said Coach Wilson. “Sea Copeland has been working hard on the boards (15 rpg) and has shown good leadership abilities. As our playmaker, senior guard Paula Bowen has played hard and very aggressively.”

Junior forward Dana Parfitt is currently leading UCSB in scoring at a 13.3 ppg mark. She set career highs of 28 points and 11 rebounds in the Gauchos’ 63-59 loss to Loyola Marymount last week. The Gauchos defeated the Rebels. Coach Darla Wilson.”

Arizona is a very tough team and the Wildcats recruit from all over the nation, remarked Wilson. “They are fundamentally very sound. We need to make them work defensively by running our offense well and taking good shots.”

Wayland Baptist is in its second year of competing on the NAIA level after recording a 2-10 record last year and making it to the quarter-finals of the NAIA national tournament. The Flying Queens advanced to this year’s Division One national tournament in 1982. In fact, between the 1973-83 seasons, WBU won six of the nine national tournaments, six times in nine years during a 3-4-1 stretch. They’ll be the team’s only returning contributor from last year’s squad. Carmen Wynn, a 5-11 forward, is the only freshman on the Queens’ roster. She averaged 16.2 ppg last season and is a threat to compete in the University of California Classic December 9th. UCSB will begin the two-day event against Weber State. The Gauchos will make up the remaining two spots in the four-team bracket.

UCSB will begin their home schedule on Dec. 15 against Cal Poly SLO in Robertson Gym. The Gauchos defeated the Mustangs 76-62 two weeks ago at the Cal Poly Classic. All high school students will be admitted free to the game.

UCSB hits the road again to compete at the U.C. Irvine Invitational, Dec. 18-20.

It may be looking too far ahead for anyone to worry about who the Gauchos will play at UOP, but the Gauchos look like they are ready to roll. The team seems to be over a series of injuries and illnesses that plagued them this season, just in time for the NCAs. This means that the Gauchos will have the services of middle blocker Cindy Cochrane once again. Cochrane missed the games at the end of the regular season, and her experience and skill will be a big plus for UCSB.

In addition to having all of her starters healthy, Gregory has the luxury of an experienced and capable group of athletes on the bench.

With all of this going for them the Gauchos seem to be ready to play, and ready to win. For Gregory this is the realization of a season-long ambition.

The Gauchos played one of the toughest schedules in the country, including eight of the top ten teams in the nation. Gregory made the schedule as tough as possible.

"I think they (her team) needed to play the toughest possible schedule," she said. The reason that the Gauchos need to play tough teams were the youth and lack of experience of the team overall, and the team oriented style of the Gauchos takes time to come together.

"By playing such a tough schedule we jeopardized our chances to make NCAs, but in the end it helped us to give us a better seeding," Gregory said.

With a tough schedule and injuries behind them, the Gauchos are looking forward to the NCAA tournament and a meeting with the Wildcats of Northwestern.

Tickets for this match will be available at the Rob Gym ticket office beginning at 7 p.m. Since this is an NCAA event there will be a charge for tickets: $1 for students with reg cards, and $3 general admission and staff. UCSB volleyball fans are advised to come early to get the best available seats.

stand alone as the sole reasons for the victory. Rebounding also played a significant role. The Gauchos outrebounded their opponents 35-26. Without those rebounds the Runnin' Gauchos would not have been able to run their fast breaks, which resulted in so many easy shots.

Rebounding, or the lack of, nearly spelled defeat for UCSB Monday night. Loyola snagged 32 boards compared to the Gauchos measly six in the first half. As a result, the Lions had a six-point lead going into the locker room at halftime.

With eight minutes to play UCSB trailed 48-44. From that point on Pimm believes that the Gauchos showed great poise in coming from behind to claim the win.

"We maintained our patience on offense," said Pimm of the last eight minutes, "and limited them to one shot on the defensive end." That means the Gauchos got high- percentage shots while erasing the boards on defense so as not to allow Loyola any easy follow shots.

In other words, when all the chips were down and the game was on the line UCSB got tough. "When it had to be done," Pimm said, "they did it. We earned the win in the last eight minutes," he added.

Henry was again productive for the Gauchos, scoring 22 points, but Fisher was the leading scorer and rebounder for UCSB in making five boards of the Gauchos' 26.

While Fisher is playing exceptional ball, Pimm insists much of the sophomore's success is a result of the team concept of play. "His teammates are really getting him the ball in good positions and setting him up with good screens," said Pimm.

The Runnin' Gauchos have their work cut out for them this weekend as they play three games in four days. San Francisco State invades the Events Center on Friday for a 7:30 tipoff. UCSB will play host to Langston College from Oklahoma on Saturday and Chico State on Monday with both games beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Shari Rodgers and Anne Hansen shown here will be two of the players counted on to lead the Gauchos against Northwestern on Sunday.

ATHLETES OF THE WEEK

Conner Henry

Both of the Athletes of the Week this time come from UCSB basketball teams.

This week's honored male athlete is Conner Henry, a 6'3" sophomore guard/forward on the UCSB men's basketball team. Henry was an important part of two victories by the Gauchos over Bemidji State and Loyola Marymount. In the game against Bemidji, Henry contributed 15 points and six assists to the Gauchos' cause. Against Loyola Henry helped lead the Gauchos to a win with his 22 points. Thus far this season Henry is second on the team in scoring, averaging over 17 points a game.

The female athlete being honored this week is Dana Panfili, a 5'10" junior forward on the UCSB women's basketball team.

After the first four games this season Panfili is leading the Gauchos in scoring with an average of 13.3 points per game. In addition, Panfili is second on the team in rebounds with seven per game, and second in assists with seven.

In the Gauchos' lone win this season, against Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, Panfili led the team with 20 points.

UCSB Director of Student Life Leslie Lawson, whose role in the decision was one of a "factfinder," said he thought the university tried to strike a balance between being fair and being flexible.

"There are people who thought we should have been more lenient and those who thought we should have been more tough, so I guess we hit the medium (ground) pretty well," he said.

Bob Nunes, vice president of the UCSB chapter of Phi Delta Theta, said he thought the university's demands were "pretty sufficient." He questioned the limit on use of campus facilities, however, but agreed with the community service idea.

The fraternity has elected new officers, and Nunes said he thought the new leadership was cooperative under the new president. "It seems like a whole different atmosphere now," he said.

"The key point now is that we are really committed to getting their act together," he said. "I'm very pleased about the process. It's moving along very nicely."

Inter-Fraternity Council President Jon Hoot said he felt the decision was just because it allowed the group to remain on campus.

"The IFC did not, however, recommend suspension or probation, he explained. "The main decision was to let the national chapter in here to help reorganize the (local) chapter."

When asked why the process of making the final decision took over two months, Birch explained, "It is difficult trying to administer justice without a jury or a jury."

He added that the appropriate people at the chapter's national level had to be contacted before the decision was announced publicly.

Lawson added that "it was not a simple issue," and since there was no pre-arranged or defined process to follow, much time was needed to make a decision.
