THE DAILY NEXUS GUIDE TO DINING, DRINKING AND DANCING

November Fifth, Nineteen Ninety-Three

D o w n t o w n B u r g e r s

By Reynard Van Nguyen

It really is unfortunate that the very word "fat" has gotten such a bad rap around here. We all know that "nonfat milk" is actually fishwater, but people drink it anyway. When a friend even hints that a person is fat, all too often it's treated as if he or she is being told that they've allowed the reactor to reach meltdown and it's time to line up the bone-marrow donors.

This is wrong, of course, fat can be good. Today, my immense labors will be rewarded with a fat paycheck — it's great! Smashing Pumpkins has a fat sound — like Tony the Tiger says, "They're great!" And so it is that Fatburger, too, is great — there's nothing to fear.

When the wonderful people who created the franchise began, they did not envision a literal fatburger, that's gross. Rather, they had a vision, a dream resplendent in culinary delight of a hamburger that could truly be said to be fat. Fat in the sense that it is solid, not packed with filler. Fat in the sense that there was no way you can leave without being satisfied completely. Fat in the sense that no expense has been spared away to make a buck.

I had a similar vision, once. I approached Fatburger, when I went there the first time ... well and each time, with the knowledge that when they named the establishment they had people like me in mind. No, Pierre, I shan't be having the salad bar, nor the braised spinach and asparagus, I'll be having the fatburger.

I was in a foul mood one day, so Odessa suggested we go get food — she knows how that cheers me up and she gets tired of my existential despair rather quickly. So immediately I suggested Fatburger. That, at least, is something I could trust, it would give me something I could really sink my teeth into, which is not the case with the substance of humanity sometimes.

So we went down to the State Street establishment to partake in what I knew to be a blissful experience. Now, you can fax in your orders to Fatburger, but I prefer to stand back and feast my eyes on the menu before I feast my innards on the mighty meat. Nevertheless, I like to fill out the little fax sheet before I order to make it official. Eating at Fatburger is an event I like to commemorate with paperwork. Everything important should be commemorated with paperwork.

I ordered a double king burger (a half-pound before cooking), onion rings and french fries (I can never decide) and a chocolate shake. Fatburger has Mr. Pibb, which is the secret titan of the soft drink world, but I felt more comfortable with a shake. I can just hear Mr. DeBono, my 12th grade AP English teacher (I got a five) give his order: "Double cheese, choc shake and a side of Joan of Arcs." He was pretty weird, but I managed to learn from him (I got a five).

Odessa ordered a basic cheeseburger, fries, and a shake — chocolate. They took her name and called it out when the food was ready. When the food was ready, I was more than ready to eat, but I wasn't ready for the volume! There was so much goodness to be had that I almost couldn't finish Odessa's fries! But I'm getting ahead of myself. Needless to say, the existential despair disappeared.

It was burger time.

We took our meal outside to Fatburger's street-side dining, so we could soak up the afternoon atmosphere. Well, OK, so I could show off my burger, too. Hey, it was worth displaying, it was humongous and beautiful, a two-hander piled high with lettuce, tomatoes, onions, mayonnaise (essential) and mustard. The accommodating folk behind the counter respected my pledge to not eat pickles, they are very understanding that way.

The burger, well, it was the best I've had since I made the stove blow up that one time! Like I said, it took two hands to eat (although three would have been handy) and I was not left with soggy bun, nothing in the middle, when I got to the end.

Odessa, however, is not part of the crusade. She got pickles, but declined the mustard, and got her burger as she wanted it. Grilled buns all around. Thick-cut fries, perfect for dipping into those cute little ketchup cups that are so popular these days. I finished mine quickly. Mmmmmmm.

The onion rings were perfect, easily more than five golden rings, and it's not even Yuletide! Some people need ranch dressing for their onion rings, I guess they just don't understand the delicate balance that must be observed when considering condiments. Goodness.

Fatburger is located at 718 State St. Hours 10 am to 3 am everyday. Price range $1-$5.

Isla Vista's T a c o

By Thaddeus Cummings

It had been a long night. My friends came up from the asphalt jungle that is Los Angeles to revel in the asphalt circus that is Isla Vista on Halloween.

After traipsing up and down D.P. for a couple hours on Friday I found them looking at me inquisitively, with blank faces because they have no idea what I.V. has to offer.

"I'm hungry," Corrine says, to which Seth eagerly nods in agreement. "But it's almost two in the morning, what can we do." "Never fear, T.A.'s is here," I say comfortingly. "Huh?"

"Tio Alberto's, Mexican food. We're talking good stuff here," I said, and off we went.

That's the true beauty of T.A.'s — it's there for you at 1:30 a.m. after those endless nights of doing whatever it is college kids do after the sun goes down. I don't know, myself. I don't partake.

We step into line and everybody I've been hanging with all evening is there, so we fall right back into our debate over whether Faulkner's stream of consciousness interpretation of the South's antebellum struggle for identity matches the literary achievement of Nabokov's trilingual tour de force in Lolita. Yeah.

During the lulls in our conversation the silence is filled by this great music that perfectly sets the mood for the food we're about to eat. "That's rancheras music," Seth says.

"How do you know?" I asked.

"That's what I heard someone else in line call it," he said.

T.A.'s menu is so complete that I still don't know what I want when I get to the register. I think everyone has this problem. That's why we all take the easy way out and order burritos, albeit the most authentic burritos in town.

My weak-tongued friends go with the Pollo Verde, that's Spanish for green chicken (it's marinated in a green chile sauce). I opt for the spicier Pollo Colorado, I guess that's chicken imported from Colorado. It's mari-

When your ready to enjoy a make-while-you-watch burrito or taco or nachos or even something else, Tio Alberto's is the place to go.

The servers behind the counter have this burrito making stuff down to an art. Or is it a science? No, it's definitely an art.

Hands, arms and spoons fly through my field of vision tossing up various ingredients that seem sure to splay everywhere until the server's adept plate handling lets the stuff fall neatly onto the tortilla.

After a quick roll and foil wrap we tip generously to make up for the rest of the college kids out there who can't afford to, and we're on our way. Just like that.

We could lounge on the patio under the stars with the crisp Santa Barbara night air, but I explain to my partners in bingeing that the walk home makes you appreciate your food more. Wafting aromas tantalize us for five blocks.

We're not inside the place for ten seconds before we tear into our precious packages. I didn't even have time to pull out plates for everyone! But that's okay, my roommate does the vacuuming.

A T.A.'s burrito is a journey. From the marinated chicken, to the beef, pork or even beef tongue, you can really explore your sense of taste.

The spicy sauces they add in are rich with peppers and onions. Rice, cheese and beans round things out to give you a great-tasting meal that satisfies all those nutritional needs the experts say you need to satisfy.

There aren't many places you can go these days where you can get a large, healthy meal served up fresh in under five minutes. Tio Alberto's has got it going on, whatever it is as far as slang goes. Eat there.

Verily, unto thine
ears I say:
The end of Hope marks

30 Minutes Or Less

By Thaddeus Cummings

I'm sitting in the office trying to turn out two major stories that will really blow the socks off this campus, at least I'm pretending that's what I'm writing, when all of the sudden I'm hit with a gnawing hole in my stomach.

I can't leave the office for dinner because my editor is breathing down my neck to finish so we can get out of here before the sun comes up. What to do?

Then I remember, "Nobody knows like Domino's."

Quick as a flash I'm pounding on the phone's key pad (the harder you push the buttons, the sooner you get through). Now the hard part, what to order?

"They've got that new thin crust za, you know," I think to myself (all my friends call it za, you know). Plus, I've got this Nexus coupon for two two-topping pizzas at about 11 bucks. Taste test time!

Proud meat-eating man that I am, I order a thin crust sausage and mushroom and a regular crust pepperoni and pineapple and say, "Hey everybody, dinner's on me," knowing full well the vegetarians will be cheesed at me.

At 9:30 p.m. the phone hangs up and the stop-watch starts ticking.

My story's flowing pretty well right now, but this hole in my belly just won't let me concentrate. "I must concentrate, concentrate, concentrate. I must concentrate, concentrate, concentrate," I echo in my head to no avail.

Suddenly, my stomach's red, white and blue savior appears in the doorway. "Domino's!" the driver yells. After paying, with a healthy tip of course, I check the clock. Twenty minutes flat.

I know they say they'll have my pizza here in under a half an hour, but this is 20 minutes! Amazing.

Everyone crowds around. "Where's the cheese?" one of the veggies asks.

"Yeah, like I'd order a plain cheese pizza," I reply, my mouth was already too stuffed to get into a debate.

"Twenty minutes!" I think to myself.

I check out the thin crust. It looks kind of like a matzos or something. I gingerly pull a slice away and sink my teeth into the flowing cheese, sauce, sausage and mushrooms. "Twenty minutes!"

It's not crunchy like a matzos, but if you were smothered in oodles of thick, spicy tomato sauce and smoothly melted cheese, I don't think you'd be too crunchy either. "Twenty minutes!"

J.E. ANDERSON/Daily Nexus

Getting pizza from Domino's means getting pizza that's quick and hot.

What an experience. The thin crust leaves your taste buds free to explore all the other flavors that soaked up into thicker crusts. The spice in the sausage bites back as I chew and the mushrooms dance in my mouth. I think it was the cancan, but I cannot cannot tell. But then who cares. It's Domino's. It's great.

Domino's is located at 955 Emb. Del Mar in Isla Vista. Hours Sun-Thurs 11am-1am, Fri-Sat 11am-2am.

THE WILD CAT

Locals' favorite bar. The Wild Cat offers pool, jukebox, strong drinks and live music every Wednesday.
Wed 10: 12 Stories
Thu 11: DJs Matt and Robbie
Wed 17: Polychrome
Wed 24: Liquid Sunshine

WOODY'S

229 W. Montecito, 963-9326
At this Woody's location the patrons can enjoy their mason jars full of beer while soaking in the western atmosphere. I can personally attest to the quality of Woody's ribs. If you don't go to Woody's for the music, then go just for the ribs.

ZELO

630 State St., 966-5792
Closed for seismic retrofitting (improvement). Will be re-opening for Ultra Stellar New Year's Eve Party.

END NOTES

Well, we lived through the Halloween thing again. — now it's time to get serious and party down. Here's a few things that will be cool and are happening soon.

The Gutter snipes (from I.V.) play their Bad Religion influenced brand of punkness at Art's Bar on the 11th.

More on the punk rock tip — Old Schoolsters CHANNEL 3 spit out a much awaited performance at Buster's on Saturday the 13th.

Also a benefit for the kiddies at I.V. School featuring Liquid Sunshine and Los Guys. Show some support for the next generation! Alex's in Goleta on the 18th.

Finally, if you like REM, (I don't), go see 3 Walls Down at the Brewhouse on the 17th. They're produced by REM, and one of those guy's brother is in the band. LATE.
