Downtown Labor March To Protest Economic Injustice

BY MARISA LAGOS

Labor activists will take to the streets this Saturday to protest as they educate locals of economic inequalities within Santa Barbara in the People's March for Economic Justice.

The day will begin with the Many Faces of the Environment Conference in Isla Vista Theater, with a breakfast at 8 a.m. and workshops at 9. At 11:30, attendees will be transported to Ortega Park where they will join supporters of economic justice. The march will begin at noon and will proceed up State Street to the Santa Barbara County Courthouse, off Figueroa Street, where speakers will address the crowd.

Keynote speakers Julia Butterfly Hill and LeVonne Stone will conclude the environmental conference after the march at 6 p.m. in I.V. Theater, with a free dinner.

The People's March for Economic Justice, originally proposed by the UCSB Campus Labor Action Coalition (CLAC), was organized in response to issues in the community such as the living wage ordinance, CLAC member and graduate student Samara Paysse said. The living wage ordinance is a proposal that would raise the minimum

Campus Coalition Sues Santa Barbara

BY KRISTIN DAVIS

The Campus Labor Action Coalition (CLAC) ran into problems trying to organize Saturday's March for Economic Justice and filed a lawsuit against the city of Santa Barbara to clear up permit procedures it found confusing and complicated.

Approximately three months ago, CLAC began to file applications in order to obtain three necessary permits to hold the march in downtown Santa Barbara. Two policemen verbally told members of the group they would need three permits, have to fees, read through city permits and ordinances and found that the fees were not Santa Barbara laws, and that the "fees were unconstitutional for First Amendment activities," CLAC committee member Christine Lawson said.

CLAC needed organization and support from the community and other organizations for the event to be successful, but could not begin this process until the problem of obtaining a permit was solved. Supporting organizations were afraid to formally support the march before CLAC acquired permits and paid the fees, because of the

Visiting UCSB Alum Professor, Students Develop Universal Bill of Human Rights

In 1946, former first lady Eleanor Roosevelt advocated a global bill of human rights that would ensure not just the rights to liberty and religious freedom, but also the rights to healthcare and education.

Over half a century later, political science professor Kirk Boyd, a UCSB alumnus visiting the campus this quarter as a lecturer, and a group of students are continuing Roosevelt's vision by developing a website, which lays out a basic framework for an International Bill of Rights. The project started three years ago but was recently sponsored by the Global Studies Dept.

Boyd said he hopes the project will spread beyond Santa Barbara to other UC campuses and eventually influence the United Nations.

"We're not suggesting that this is an outcome," Boyd said. "All we're doing is saying this is a starting point."

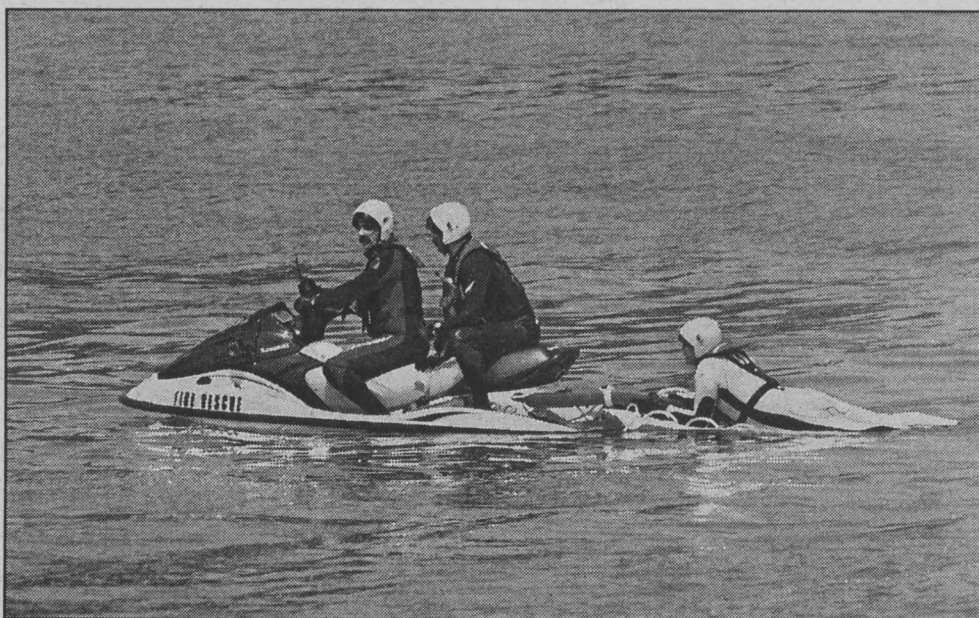

Boyd's list includes 31 fundamental rights, including rights to freedom of speech and religion, marriage, privacy, shelter, environment and intellectual property. The full list is available at the project web page at <www.ibor.org>.

Many countries, including South Africa, Portugal, northern European countries and former Soviet countries, have already accepted many of the rights, specifically the articles pertaining to the right to shelter and the right to a healthy environment.

"These are rights that have been accepted in many countries throughout the world and new constitutions are including these rights," Boyd said, "but the United States has yet to include these rights, especially the right to education."

Boyd said he and others have seen a shared set of ideas about universal

FBI Documents Could Delay Execution

DENVER (AP) — In an astonishing disclosure just six days before Timothy McVeigh's scheduled execution, the Justice Dept. handed his lawyers thousands of FBI documents Thursday that it said were mistakenly withheld from his trial in the Oklahoma City bombing.

An attorney for McVeigh said the materials may prompt a request for a stay.

"We're considering all our options," McVeigh lawyer Nathan Chambers said after the documents were delivered to his office in Denver.

Chambers said he had spoken to McVeigh about the development, but declined to reveal what he said. "Mr. McVeigh is going to think about it and decide how he wants to proceed," he said.

McVeigh, 33, is to receive a lethal injection at a federal prison in Terre Haute, Ind., on Wednesday.

In a recently published book, he claimed sole responsibility for the April 19, 1995, bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, which killed 168 people and injured hundreds of others. He has not shown any interest in appealing his conviction or death sentence.

However, legal experts said the Justice Dept. mis-cue could delay what would be the first federal execution since 1963, though it is unlikely to overturn McVeigh's conviction.

"The issue really is whether McVeigh is going to decide whether to challenge this," said Andrew

Cohen, a legal analyst who has followed the case. "The FBI through its negligence or whatever has given McVeigh the opportunity to control his immediate future."

McVeigh's trial judge, U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch of Denver, could not immediately be reached for comment. Court clerk James Manspeaker said the the jury had been allowed to see the documents.

McVeigh juror Doug Carr, 45, was unimpressed by the potential new evidence.

"The prosecution proved everything to me," he said. "If there was something left out that's in those files, I don't think it was that significant."

McVeigh's former trial lawyer, Stephen Jones, said he would not be surprised if the execution was stayed until the documents are reviewed.

"There could be a benign interpretation and it could all be irrelevant," Jones said. "On the other hand, it could be a malignant failure to turn over."

The Justice Dept. said 3,135 documents from 46 FBI offices were sent to McVeigh's lawyers. The numbers varied, from 446 documents from the Los Angeles office, 226 from Miami and 218 from Salt Lake City to seven documents from Anchorage, Alaska, and four from Knoxville, Tenn.

defense would have to go to the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals — also in Denver — to file a motion to consider new evidence.

If permission was granted, the case then probably would revert to Matsch, Manspeaker said.

The legal standard for granting such a motion requires the court to determine that the trial verdict could have been different if

House Votes to Protest U.N. by Withholding Dues

U.N. dues until America is restored to the panel.

The Bush administration opposed that action, but GOP leaders championed the fight to punish the international organization. The most visible backers of the White House position were Democrats.

"I implore my colleagues," said Majority Leader Dick Armey. "If you believe in the cause of liberty, freedom, safety, security, respect and decency, vote yes for this amendment. Send the world a message: America cares and America dares to stand up for any lost soul beleaguered and tortured in any part of this world at any time."

The vote was 252-165 for the measure that would allow one payment of $582 million in back dues but would withhold an additional $244 million until the

The provision was attached to the State Dept. spending authorization bill for 2002-2003. A House vote on that bill is expected next week, and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is still writing its version.

"[The ousting] is a deliberate attempt to punish the United States for its insistence that we tell the truth about human rights abuses wherever they occur, including in those countries represented on the commission, such as China and Cuba," Hyde said, calling on Congress to send a return message.

White House spokesperson Ari Fleischer said Wednesday that President Bush "feels strongly that this issue should not be linked to the payment of our arrears to the U.N. and other international organizations." But Hyde said after the vote that the administration never contacted him or Lantos.

Several Democrats sided with Bush.

"How can we expect the United Nations to improve its performance, or to respect us if we go back on our word and refuse to pay our bills?" asked Rep. Cynthia McKinney of Georgia.

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Gray Davis signed a law Thursday letting the state borrow $13.4 billion to pay for electricity for three cash-starved utilities.

Davis could not guarantee the 15-year bond will be enough to cover the state's electricity purchases. But he said the $13.4 billion price tag represents "the best thinking of our financial analysts," and includes a reserve in case electricity prices remain higher than expected.

The state spent $1,900 per megawatt hour Wednesday as state grid operators narrowly avoided a third consecutive day of blackouts, Davis said, reiterating his call for federal price caps. Cooler weather helped the state avoid blackouts Thursday.

Wednesday's costs were a record or near-record since the state purchases began in January, said Oscar Hidalgo, a spokesperson for the power-buying Dept. of Water Resources.

Davis said he hopes the state can stop buying power for Pacific Gas and Electric, Southern California Edison and San Diego Gas and Electric by the end of next year.

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina celebrated its first Confederate Memorial Day on Thursday, but some people were caught by surprise when they arrived at state offices to find them closed.

The holiday was once an optional day off for state workers, but became an official holiday in a deal that also made the state adopt a permanent Martin Luther King Day holiday. It was the last state in the nation to permanently designate a King holiday.

"We just thought we were in luck when we saw the empty parking lot," said Nigi Varghese, one of dozens of people who left the motor vehicle office in frustration.

Other residents marked the holiday by honoring those who died in the Civil War. About 15 members of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, dressed in uniforms with swords and shotguns, stood guard and placed wreaths and flags on monuments on the Statehouse grounds.

The state House was in session due to a backlog of work, though the Senate took the day off.

In my freshman psych class, I read about experiments that rewarded pigeons with a special treat for tapping a lever.

Those scientists were silly.

They could have saved money on seed and saved those birds a lot of confusion by merely performing their experiment at the Weathercave.

You see, the Weatherroommate gets up really early every morning. After that, no one can stop me from abusing my snooze bar privileges.

Each tap takes me on a magical journey where donkeys and froggy pops dance through my head.

All this for free.

Man, those scientists really blew it.

threat of citizen's arrest and unlawful protest violations.

"It got to a point where it was necessary to get a permit, and we felt we were being strung on by the city," Lawson said.

Once the lawsuit was filed, CLAC received a letter from the city of Santa Barbara telling it to disregard the fees for the anticipated march.

City Attorney Dan

Wallace claims that CLAC became confused because it was dealing with two different departments in the city, the police department and the parks department. Wallace said the group only needed to obtain a permit to rent out space that would exclude the general public. Contrary to what CLAC was first told, it was not necessary to acquire a permit for holding the pre-rally at Ortega Park.

"The city has no interest in interfering with free speech activities," Wallace said. "I think what happened was that the police department was doing their thing and the parks department was doing their thing and the parks department made a mistake."

Wallace said CLAC now has the necessary permits to hold the rally as planned this Saturday, and there will be no complications between CLAC and the city of Santa Barbara.

CLAC continued with the lawsuit, filing it with the Los Angeles Federal Court in attempt to change city ordinances so they are more up-front with what fees are required.

"We filed the lawsuit so other groups expressing political opinions would not have to go through what we went through to put free speech events together," said Deborah Lagutaris, CLAC media committee member.

This lawsuit is expected to be resolved in the next three to four weeks. CLAC plans to make the march an annual event and said it hopes no future problems will arise with legal issues.

"We have done extensive work to open the lines of communication," Lawson said.

By Linda C. Black

Today's Birthday (May 11). Choosing one thing could mean giving up another this year. The best option should be obvious in May. However, the other option becomes quite tempting in June. Follow a hunch in July, and hide out in August. Love leads the way in September, and shrewd bargaining pays in December. Get out for a jaunt in January, and hold out for what you're worth in February. In April, go back for something valuable you left behind.

To get the advantage, check the day's rating: 10 is the easiest day, 0 the most challenging.

Aries (March 21-April 19) - Today is a 5 - Some travel plans are put on hold. Others just suffer delays. You need to get the information or goods to the right people, so don't give up. If you persevere, you will succeed - eventually.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) - Today is a 6 - Take care of a personal matter first, or it will haunt you all day. You have better things to think about, like seeing new places and visiting with old friends. Keep costs and travel time down by meeting in the middle.

Gemini (May 21-June 21) - Today is a 6 - How long has it been since you balanced your checkbook? Do you know how well your investments have been doing? Don't have any? Well, maybe it's time you got some. Start by finding a private place to count and sort your money.

Cancer (June 22-July 22) - Today is a 7 - Friends are urging you to come out and play, but you may not be quite ready. It's a balancing act, with obligations demanding attention. If you get flustered, the job will take longer. Concentrate so that you can break free earlier.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) - Today is a 6 - Complications at work put your love life on hold. Don't make any promises for tomorrow. You won't have much time to play until Sunday, and then you'll be the one who's serious. You'll find out if this sweetheart is a keeper. If so, a commitment will be natural.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) - Today is a 9 - You're the lucky one. You're so well loved that everything else becomes insignificant. Grab your sweetheart and head for the hills - as soon as possible. Postpone the work until Monday. Romance takes precedence.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) - Today is a 6 - It's hard to get a household project done when you and your mate disagree. This goes for roommates, too. Maybe both of you will have to compromise to stay within your budget. Relax and go shopping again. You may find the perfect thing this time.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) - Today is a 7 - The work you do with your partner may get off to a shaky start. Don't be stopped cold by an initial setback. Learn an old trick from an old neighbor, and you can emerge victorious.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) - Today is a 5 - Business is interfering with your social life, but don't quit your day job. For now, this would be the case even if you were a famous rock musician. Schedule the party for Sunday, and get back to work. You'll need that paycheck to buy chips and dips.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) - Today is an 8 - There are a few more calls to make, maybe a few more letters to write. Tie up loose ends so that you can completely relax. Yes, it's possible for you to do that. It's a goal worth reaching for.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) - Today is a 5 - Every time you come up with a new idea, you're also coming up with the reason why it won't work. This is actually good, though you may think it'll drive you crazy. Instead of keeping all this in your head, write it down.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) - Today is a 7 - People are always talking about learning experiences. The one you go through today could actually be fun. For example, practice with a person who's a better musician or house painter than you are. You'll learn things you didn't know you didn't know.

Tourism's Final Frontier Millionaire Issues in New Era of Civilian Space Travel

BRIAN NOLAN

Welcome to Arthur C. Clarke's wet dream. Finally, in the year 2001, we have the beginnings of a space odyssey. On April 28, 60-year-old Californian tourist and super-rich businessman Dennis Tito accompanied a Russian crew on a visit to the International Space Station. Tito paid $20 million to participate in this little excursion. Why did the tourist, who was a former NASA engineer, go to space with the Russians and not with the U.S.? Well, whenever there's political controversy in America over what you want to do, and the U.S. won't let you do it, you go to Russia with lots of money and do it there. Which is just what Tito did. Isn't it great to be in the elite upper class?

This is perfect: tourists in space. Of course, you realize this is only the beginning. Soon we will have converted the cargo areas of space shuttles into passenger seating, making the space shuttle the world's most-expensive touring convertible. Next, we'll have a McDonald's in the International Space Station, since it is about the equivalent of astronaut food (no offense to astronaut food). Then we'll use the money gained from space tourism to build hotels on the moon. After that, it's only a small step to colonizing Mars and building flying saucers, and then just another small step to complete galactic superiority! We may even finally get flying cars (which I'm still waiting for).

Unfortunately, not everyone has $20 million to spare. Who will be the next filthy rich tourist to visit the space station? The following is a list of potential candidates who could drop $20 mil' like pocket change. George Lucas could go, and he would realize that there is not a dark enough and distant enough corner of space to throw Jar Jar Binks. Bill Gates certainly has the money and would be a great tourist. He'd make the International Space Station display a little warning box before randomly malfunctioning and crashing. Regis Philbin is definitely a millionaire, but would become the first person murdered in space after constantly asking the Russians if that was their "final answer." President Dubya could even visit space, and he would be the first person to try drilling for oil on the moon. You could forget about the Martian wildlife reserve! The possibilities are endless.

What a wonderful world we live in where anyone with $20 million to spare can fly up to the space station for fun. Maybe these special millionaires will even get to ride a U.S. spacecraft soon. I certainly hope so. We are a global superpower and are among the technological leaders of the planet, especially in space. After all, isn't that what we spend millions and millions of dollars on? Or is the legend of the $700 toilet seat true? Either way, there is no reason why an American who wants to go to space should have to go through Russia. But that is irrelevant now.

It is being claimed that Tito's visit is causing stress for the United States space agency. There is, of course, an easy solution to this. Had he gone to the space station in a shuttle with that little stars-and-stripes logo, there would be no controversy. Instead, were this the case, the United States would be bragging to the international community about how we are "pioneers" and "moving towards the future." Now, ignoring American expansionist history, the Russians are taking that glory. The Russians! Our arch-nemeses took our guy to space and they get the credit. So naturally, the government is trying to make it look like a bad decision. They say that Tito gets in the way and is hampering research and everyday tasks. Let's hope they have the foresight to keep him away from the controls of the space station. Of course, this time the blame would fall on Russia and not the U.S., so he may yet find his way behind the wheel.

Am I the only person who sees through this political game? The United States made him agree to all sorts of restrictions to prevent him from interfering with any U.S. space business. NASA itself agreed to let him up there as long as he obeyed their limitations. So here's the situation: A United States tourist goes to Russia so that he can get to the International Space Station; NASA okays it and takes measures to prevent any difficulties. Now, after the Russian mission has proven successful, NASA says he is causing problems. Make what you will of the situation, but it stinks any way you look at it. My only hope is that this kind of political nonsense won't hamper even more progress in the future.

Bridge the Gap Between Environmental and Social Activism

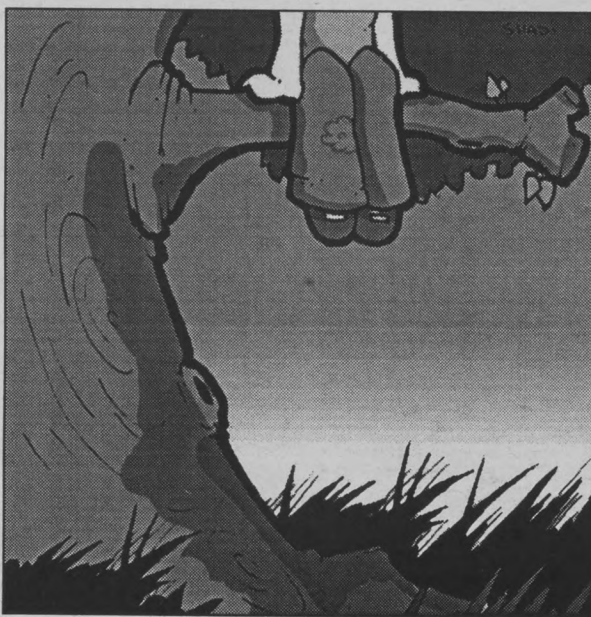

CHRISTINE UNDERWOOD

Environmental justice doesn't receive much attention at UCSB even though work in this area is on the front lines of environmentalism. Most students don't know what environmental justice is or what the term environmental racism means. Fortunately, this Saturday people will have the opportunity to experience an entire day of workshops and listen to speakers focusing on environmental justice and bridging the gap between environmental and social issues.

But what is environmental justice? This new movement will determine the direction of environmentalism. This particularly pertains to government actions on local, state and federal levels, as well as private industry. One of the key elements of environmental justice, as stated by the People of Color Environmental Leadership Summit in 1991, says, "environmental justice affirms the right of all workers to a safe and healthy work environment, without being forced to choose between an unsafe livelihood and unemployment." In addition, "environmental justice affirms the sacredness of Mother Earth, ecological unity and interdependence of all species, and the right to be free from ecological destruction."

Progressive activists in communities such as UCSB commit much of their lives to working toward a society of environmental and social justice. Groups on our own campus of all different backgrounds hold weekly meetings, events, protests and parties geared toward their individual causes. We all fight for justice based on our interests and experience. Rarely do these action groups form together as coalitions striving for the same goal. How can we?

The Environmental Affairs Board and Increase the Peace are not the first organizations to seek a bridge between environmental and social activists. A longtime goal of both groups has been to join the community in a common action involving human and environmental rights. Many Faces of the Environment, Saturday's conference on environmental justice, is one such effort.

Julia Butterfly Hill, the conference's keynote speaker, became known across the world when she spent two years living in a redwood tree in protest of logging activities in Humboldt County. She wrote an autobiography of her story called Legacy of Luna and continues to travel and lead by example. She also does solidarity work with political prisoners, including journalist and former radical community activist, Mumia Abu Jamal. Speaking along with Julia will be LeVonne Stone, who works with the Fort Ord Environmental Justice Network and has struggled to clean up toxins seeping into the groundwater from a nearby U.S. military base.

The heart of the conference will come during the morning workshops. This is where the connections between environmental and social justice will be explored in an effort to establish links in our own community. Students that recently participated in the FTAA protest in San Diego will talk about the impacts of free trade on the environment and human rights. Another local activist will lead a discussion on the state of our beaches and the impact of oil and development on the coast here in Santa Barbara. Mark Rousseau, the director of the energy and environmental office on campus, will talk about how we can all make our homes less toxic and more sustainable. Lastly, in solidarity with the march for economic justice, we'll have a workshop on local economic issues.

The conference will begin at I.V. Theater with a complimentary breakfast at 8 a.m. The first session of workshops will begin at 9. Lunch and free transportation from the conference to the march downtown will take place from 11:30 to noon. The march for economic justice will take place in Ortega Park downtown. The conference will begin again at 5 p.m. with dinner and keynote speakers and a panel discussion from 6-9 p.m.

Economic, social and environmental issues are of concern to each one of us regardless of background. The goal is to unite our different concerns and bring out talents and skills together as a collective. Together we can accomplish so much. The first step is education. This discussion about linking social and environmental issues is only part of the beginning in building a strong enough movement to really challenge the power structures of this world. See you Saturday.

Christine Underwood is a sophomore religious studies major.

"When Eleanor Roosevelt asked [Mahatma Gandhi] to look for the commonalities in religion for the International Bill of Rights that she was working on in 1946, Gandhi said that he expected the harder he looked, the more differences he would find," Boyd said. "Instead he found more commonalities."

The U.S. was recently voted off the United Nations Human Rights Commission that Roosevelt once chaired. Disagreements with what constitutes a basic right is one reason the U.S. has not accepted many of the rights, said political science major Maya Rupert, who works on the project.

"There's just not enough agreement that those are rights that human beings have," she said. "I think we have a hard time convincing people in the U.S. that social or economic rights are just as essential."

During the Cold War, the U.S. and Soviet Union disagreed over the conflict between civil and political rights, and social and economic rights, delaying the project for Roosevelt. Boyd's universal bill declares that all of these are equal.

Countries also disagree on specifics, senior political science major Jason Simison said.

"Everybody agrees that people should have these certain rights and certain abilities to have shelter, property and freedom of speech," he said. "The thing is, no one ever agrees on a way to actually enforce these rights or a way to bring these together and have it in a way that will work with the whole world and integrate it into the whole world system."

Boyd's group does not support a world government to enforce these rights. "The individual countries would retain sovereignty," Rupert said.

The International Bill of Rights Project consists of Boyd as the executive director, as well as founding student members Rupert, Simison, Rachael Stiles, Rachel Johnson and web designer Jason Trintad.

MARCH

wage for city employees to $11 per hour with health benefits or $12.25 without health benefits.

"The idea for [the march] started within the Campus Labor Action Coalition, which in the past had been working on global issues, specifically sweatshops," Paysse said. "Then, at the beginning of the year, in keeping with that, we decided to put some of our efforts toward helping get the living wage ordinance passed. We wanted to bring attention to the fact that there are economic issues in Santa Barbara. There are people working full-time jobs here who can't afford to live here and therefore have to commute, and there are people lacking adequate healthcare and childcare also."

The march is being supported by organizations within UCSB and Santa Barbara, including the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, Latinos for Better Government, the I.V. Tenants Union and Campus Greens, Paysse said. The Fund for Santa Barbara donated $7,500 to help supply the march with funds for speakers, permits and organizing materials.

"We wanted to have the march to draw attention to these issues which are part of the living wage and in doing this, create a network of people and organizations working on the different facets of these issues," she said. "Through organizing the march, we've been able to bring all these groups together and we hope to keep this network going even after the march."

Paysse said the march's route was strategically chosen.

"We chose to begin the march on Cota Street because there is a lot of employers like Service Master, who would be one of the employers affected by the living wage ordinances because they do work for the city," she said. "Then we wanted to march on State Street because it's like the locus of Santa Barbara. Santa Barbara is this beautiful tourist place, and we want to bring attention to the irony that there are also all these people suffering here."

After the march, attendees will listen to speakers, including Steve Rhode, president of the Southern California chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, UCSB history Professor Alice O'Connor and various musicians.

UCSB Environmental Affairs Board Chair Courtney Estes said the I.V. conference will feature a morning of workshops to address issues, including indigenous rights and free trade, and their relation to the environment.

"[In the morning] we're going to do seven workshops, where we talk about environmental justice and what it actually is. A lot of times people involved in the environmental movement don't see all the issues — by taking justice, we can bring in social and economic issues as well," she said.

After the march, the I.V. conference will feature keynote speakers Butterfly Hill and Stone. Estes said the speakers will address the connections between social and economic issues and the environment.

"Levonne Stone is a member of the Fort Ord Environmental Justice network. She works mainly on environmental justice and environmental racism. They are closely linked," Estes said. "The environmental justice issue deals with taking situations where someone is affected by the environment and getting justice. In a lot of minority communities, they'll dump waste right next to their homes. Environmental racism is looking at the situation and making the connection between race and environmental degradation."

Estes said Butterfly Hill, who is well-known for her two-year stint in a redwood tree, is another example of someone who works toward both social and environmental justice.

"She pulls in a lot of economic and social issues," she said. "Julia works on indigenous rights and any other social issue, as well as the environmental stuff. She's an amazing woman."

Register Now for Summer Session
Philosophy of Law 143

This course will begin with a reading of the famous Supreme Court death penalty case Furman v. Georgia. The death penalty will provide us with an example with which to explore and evaluate different theories of constitutional interpretation. We will consider what advocates of an original intent approach to interpreting the Constitution like Robert Bork would say about the death penalty. Then we will investigate whether Ronald Dworkin's approach with its stress on unwritten principles can provide grounds for declaring capital punishment unconstitutional. This will lead us into a comparison of the merits of Dworkin's general theory of jurisprudence with H.L.A. Hart's rule-based approach to the law. Then we will look at how advocates of Legal Realism and Critical Legal Studies movements would criticize Dworkin's approach to the law.

The second section of the course will deal with whether the adversary system in American law can be justified and if there are any feasible alternatives. The third section of the course will deal with particular issues such as privacy, abortion, affirmative action, strict liability, exploitative contracts, and pornography. We will examine relevant Court decisions and philosophical commentaries on such issues. The fourth and final part of the course will examine different theories of punishment. We shall compare the merits of reform, retributivism, restitution, deterrence, expressivism, and hybrid theories that combine elements of retributivism and deterrence.

This course is highly recommended for pre-law students as well as those with an interest in public policy issues. The student's grade will be a result of two multiple choice tests and a short paper. The course prerequisites for this course, have been waived, but students who don't meet the original requirements won't be able to RBT unless they email the instructor for an add code at dbb1@uimail.ucsb.edu

Softball Head Coach Kelly Resigns After Disappointing Year

BY MATT HEITNER
Staff Writer

All season long the UCSB softball team struggled to find its hitting stroke. Now the Gauchos will spend the entire offseason searching for something else — a new head coach.

On Thursday, UCSB Athletic Director Gary Cunningham announced the resignation of Head Coach Liz Kelly. The announcement came after a dismal season, in which Santa Barbara finished 18-34, including 4-18 in the Big West.

"I would like to thank Liz for all of her hard work and contributions to the department," Cunningham said in a press release. "I wish her luck with all of her future endeavors."

Head Coach of the Gauchos since 1995, Kelly compiled a 165-210 record in her seven seasons at UCSB. Kelly's best season at Santa Barbara came in 2000 when she guided the Gauchos to a 30-21 record, 14-10 in the Big West.

Liz Kelly

"I have enjoyed the opportunity to be a member of the staff and feel especially honored to have been a peer with the other head coaches," Kelly said in the press release. "I wish them all the continued success as I pursue my continued professional advancement."

Kelly's abrupt resignation came as a surprise to her team. Though Kelly has struggled to put a consistent winner on the field, her resignation caught many players on the team off-guard.

"I was really surprised [about Kelly's resignation]," freshman pitcher Ashley Carroll said. "I'm still kind of speechless, honestly. We weren't expecting anything to happen, and then we wake up today, and [Kelly's] stuff is cleared out of her office."

Kelly still has not spoken with her former team, and according to senior third baseman Teresa Tolson, the team first heard of her resignation "through the grapevine."

Junior second baseman Kim Sawyer also said she has had no contact with Kelly, and added that she doubts any contact will occur.

"There are going to be a lot of meetings [between the team]," Sawyer said. "But I don't know that she's going to be involved."

The Gauchos' 2001 season certainly did not help Kelly's situation. Santa Barbara did show flashes of its talent, winning eight out of 10 games at one point. But in the end it wasn't enough, as Santa Barbara finished the season losing nine straight games.

"It was a difficult year across the board," Sawyer said. "Playing, everything was difficult."

Carroll echoed Sawyer's sentiments and implied that the 2001 Gauchos' problems began at the top.

"We didn't have the motivation that teams need to succeed," Carroll said. "We need someone that has confidence in you no matter what, and we lacked that this year. We lacked someone that could pull us together as a team."

UCSB will now begin its search for Kelly's successor. It is not clear at this time in which direction Cunningham will go, but he is expected to start the search soon.

While the Gauchos themselves remain in the dark as to who their next leader will be, they are clearly ready to head in a new direction.

"I think it was just time to move on," Carroll said. "It's time to get a new face in here and see if they can make something happen."

Gauchos Brace for Weekend Series Against Top-Ranked Cal State Fullerton

BY MATT HEITNER
Staff Writer

Rarely has the UCSB baseball team played the role of the underdog this season.

Currently the 23rd-ranked team in the country, the Gauchos have steamrolled their way to a 35-12 record this season, usually playing the role of favorite. Santa Barbara was even favored against perennial Big West power Long Beach State, and the club was visibly disappointed after taking only two out of three against the Dirtbags.

But things are going to change this weekend.

The Gauchos are in for a rather large role reversal, as they travel to Fullerton to play the top team in the country. The Titans (38-12, 11-1 in the Big West) have won 24 of their last 26 games, but are coming off of a 9-3 loss at the hands of UCLA.

Nevertheless, Santa Barbara will be a decided underdog this weekend. At 9-3, UCSB stands two games behind Fullerton, and the Gauchos will hope to pick up some ground on the Titans this weekend.

"We expect a battle," UCSB Head Coach Bob Brontsema said. "We're going in looking to win the series, like we've been doing all season. I don't think that we have pressure to sweep. If we take two out of three, then we're only one game back, and we have to take care of business against [Cal Poly] San Luis Obispo. To go in there thinking we have to sweep would be putting undue pressure on the guys."

To compete with Fullerton, Santa Barbara will need Pitcher of the Week-worthy performances from all of its starters. Junior James Garcia (9-1, 2.62 ERA) will get the first crack at Fullerton on Friday. UCSB will send senior Rylie Ogle to the mound Saturday and sophomore Jim Bullard on Sunday.

"We're looking to take two out of three [from Fullerton], at least two out of three," sophomore starter Jim Bullard said. "If we play our game and hold Fullerton under four runs, we should come away with two victories."

Garcia will be matched up against Titan starter Kirk Saarloos, who carries an 11-1 record and a 1.87 ERA.

Ryan "Spilly" Spilborghs

"[The Titans] have one of the best pitching staffs in the country," Brontsema said. "All we have to do is score one more than they do. It's going to be a real dogfight because they have the best pitching in a real good pitching conference."

Though Fullerton boasts the best pitching in the Big West, UCSB can easily lay claim as the top hitting club in the conference. The Gauchos are hitting a robust .340 as a team. Senior third baseman Dave Molitor and sophomore center fielder Skip Schumaker are hitting .406 to lead UCSB.

Lost in the current record-setting year has been sophomore right fielder Ryan Spilborghs. Hitting out of the nine-hole, Spilborghs is in the midst of a school-record 26-game hitting streak. The man known as "Spilly" is hitting .440 during the streak, and .500 in Big West play.

"He's swinging the bat extremely well," Brontsema said. "We haven't sacrificed with him because he's swinging it so well. We expected him to have a good year, but we didn't expect him to hit .500 in conference play."

The Gauchos will need their entire team to be hitting on all cylinders this weekend to upset Fullerton, but freshman pitcher Matt Vasquez thinks UCSB will be up to the challenge.

"We're going to go in strong," Vasquez said. "We're going to go in there and play our 'A' game. Fullerton's a good team and we're a good team. It's going to be a great series."

The #23 UCSB baseball team will put its national ranking on the line this weekend when it travels to play Fullerton, the #1 team in the land.

UCSB Readies for Last Meet of Season at Occidental

BY BROOKE ROBERTS
Staff Writer

This coming weekend the pressure is on.

At the Occidental Invitational in Los Angeles, the UCSB men's and women's track team will have its last chance to get ready for the Big West Championships scheduled for the following weekend. Many Gauchos have their sights set on trimming seconds off of their times, or jumping and throwing the last few inches required to score a NCAA provisional mark.

Josh Horton

The Occidental Invite should be an exciting meet. Although the entire team will not be competing, the track and field athletes that will be there are ready to push the limits.

"A lot of people are running Occidental for fine-tuning," sophomore 1,500-meter runner Katie Appenrodt said. "[Senior] Jessica [Lunt] and I are trying to run a 4:23 for a provisional time, and we're at 4:26 right now."

Both Appenrodt and Lunt have their sights set high. Just last weekend Appenrodt found a new spot of third place in the all-time Gaucha history books by running 4:26.77 in her event. The two 1,500-meter runners spend a lot of time on the track together, since they have similar goals.

"[Jessica and I] are always running for the same time, so it's fun to train together," Appenrodt said.

On the field, junior Paul Anderson will represent Santa Barbara's men in the hammer throw and senior Jen Gardner will represent the Gaucha women in the same event.

Freshman Faith Reyes and sophomore Becky Freeman will compete in the pole vault, and freshman Preston Biller will represent UCSB in the men's long jump.

Very few of the distance runners will be competing this upcoming weekend, opting instead to take a break before participating in the upcoming Big West Championships.

The UCSB men's and women's track team will try to fly past its competition this weekend in its final meet of the year at Occidental College.

"Since it's right before conference, not a lot of people will go, to rest up," junior distance runner Josh Horton said. "But that's just as far as distance runners go."
