Supervisors Publicize Tensions Over Appointment to LAFCO

By CYNDE TAHSE

Internal disputes on the Santa Barbara County Board of Supervisors were aired at yesterday's meeting as members disagreed over who should represent the board on the Logac Agency Formation Commission.

As decided at last week's board meeting, Supervisor Harrell Fletcher, representing the 5th district, was appointed to the LAFCO seat, previously held by 4th District Supervisor Robert Hedlund. Supervisor Bill Wallace of the 3rd District was also appointed.

According to Wallace, Hedlund who was renominated for the seat, had not known at last week's meeting that a second was necessary for his nomination. As a result, his candidacy was not voted on and the LAFCO seat went to Fletcher.

According to observers at the LAFCO meeting last week, the Monday vote did not end the discussion. Fletcher reportedly arrived at the meeting a few minutes early to remove Hedlund's nameplate from the LAFCO Board's table and replace it with his own, much to the surprise of the LAFCO members and Hedlund. According to witnesses, a heated discussion ensued in public as to which of the supervisors was entitled to the position.

At yesterday's meeting, in view of requests from a number of Santa Barbara citizens for Hedlund's reinstatement, Fletcher was voted into the position of alternate while Hedlund was awarded the LACF position.

The proposed construction of the seawall on Del Playa was also on the board's agenda. The supervisors heard testimony from Susan Dewey, coordinator of the project, but decided to defer the project for two weeks before taking any action.

New Program for Grad Students Cut

Funding for a new Affirmative Action to recruit minorities and women for U.C. graduate schools has been eliminated from next year's state budget, Governor Brown announced January 10. The $600,000 effort would have replaced current measures characterized as "a paper-mailing program" by U.C. Student Lobby co-director, Amiel Jaramillo.

Student Aid funds to Graduate Fellowships were also cut, and Jaramillo said the two actions showed a "lack of commitment" to programs that would genuinely increase the number of minority professionals.

This was seconded by Richard Labunski, External President of the UCSB Graduate Students Association, who said that despite long-term pressure from graduates on the UC to recruit minority students into the graduate schools, the university is worried enough about budget cuts that very few new projects will be funded.

"It is sad," Labunski said, "that the University of California graduate programs (will) remain so white and male."

Jaramillo was slightly more optimistic, promising that the Student Lobby would "persuade changes in the budget, trying to get more pumped in there (affirmative action)," but didn't mention specific measures to be taken against the cut.

Labunski said the continued funding of undergraduate affirmative action (unchanged in the new budget) could not be counted on to remedy the disproportionate situation in the graduate schools because the educational advantage of the student from a more affluent household cannot be completely made up by "four years of General Ed and a dozen political science courses."

The cuts in the graduate programs came in a budget that gave the U.C. $797 million. According to sources, this proportion gives the U.C. regents almost everything they asked for in specific categories.

LNG & Pt. Concepcion Federal Hearings Determine Fate

By TRACY STRUB

The debate about liquefied natural gas at Point Concepcion will come to the public today as the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission opens three days of public hearings at the Lobero theatre.

The hearings which begin at 9 a.m. will permit input concerning the terminal site, its safety, and the overall necessity of a Point Concepcion tanker site.

Increased publicity about the site has occurred over the last several weeks, as different groups have tried to raise support for their cause.

One group which has publicized the event is Citizens to Protect Point Concepcion, which has run full page ads in many of the Santa Barbara newspapers and plans a rally at Santa Barbara county bowl which will headline singer Jackson Browne.

Another group which has made their ideas known is the Chumash Indians, who claim that the land of Point Concepcion is sacred and that the gas port would violate this land.

"We are totally behind the Indian's effort," said Ms. Schraft, a spokes person for the Santa Barbara Environmental Defense Center, said. Schraft added that "We expect no surprises from FERC," on the issue of the hearings.

Corporations and gas companies have already made their ideas and cases known to the Federal Energy Commission months ago.

"We've given all our information to Washington several months ago," said Joseph Staller for the Southern California Gas Company. Staller expressed hopes that the hearings would finally end the wait for some action in the Point Concepcion area.

"We've been waiting a long time for this to come up," Staller said, "it's been an indeterminate number of hearings for us."

"The delay in a decision has had some costly implications," Staller said, "And unfortunately, that is passed on to the consumer."

Staller believes that "Out of these hearings, we can get a definitive answer."

Storm Could Bring More Rainfall Today

The Santa Barbara area has been experiencing a rainstorm since Sunday, which is expected to continue throughout this morning. The weather for the last two days has been cloudy skies and frequent showers with winds at twenty-five miles per hour.

Predictions for today are for warmer temperatures and a possible clearing of the rainfall by tonight. The storm, which most of Southern California is experiencing, is coming from a low system west of San Francisco.

Since midnight on Sunday, approximately one third of an inch of rain has fallen in the Santa Barbara area. According to the Ventura County Highway Patrol, Highway 33 is closed due to snow. The rest of the highways in Santa Barbara and Ventura counties are in good condition.

University Employee Stricken with Heart Attack in Rob Gym

Herman Graeser, Principal Laboratory Mechanician in chemical and nuclear engineering, died of a heart attack after jogging yesterday afternoon. Graeser collapsed in the shower room of Robertson Gym after returning from the field.

Graeser was found unconscious and went into cardiac arrest shortly before the paramedic and fire units arrived. The paramedics immediately administered cardiopulmonary resuscitation upon reaching Graeser. An airway was inserted and an i.v. was begun.

Goleta Valley Hospital was contacted and ordered the proper medication to be administered by the paramedics.

Graeser was transported to Goleta Valley Hospital where he died in the Emergency Room.

Manor Residents Narrate Vastly Different World War II Stories

By KARLIN J. LILLINGTON

Everyone likes to think his experiences in life have been exciting and interesting. We all have a few good stories to hold everyone's attention: the one about that great party on your twentieth birthday, or the one about the time you had front row seats for the Who and Keith Moon threw his drumsticks to you.

But consider someone who has been around for 60 years or so. They can tell stories about events that we can only read about.

This is the last of a three part series dealing with Friendship Manor.

In the case of Friendship Manor residents Gerda Bresnitz and Henry Coray, a common experience was World War II, but they viewed it from vastly different angles. Gerda was forced to endure much of the horror of Nazi Germany, while Henry was a missionary in China on the eve of Pearl Harbor.

GERDA BRESNITZ

Gerda is a fascinating woman of Austrian background. Taking her first literary prize at 16, she was a member of the young literary crowd in Austria, and wrote for the largest daily in Vienna until the dawn of World War II. Because of her Jewish background, the Nazis put an end to everything.

Realizing the dangers of remaining in Europe, Gerda, along with her brother, mother, and father, began to work at getting passage out of the country. This was extremely difficult, as her mother already had a place on the Nazi blacklist. "All our papers were always artificially made invalid. If we were able to get our passport, our visa was not in order for that particular day of departure."

Gerda came from an extremely wealthy family, and they hired three lawyers to help them get out. "We even bribed the ambassador. We couldn't do anything else with our money, and it was a matter of life and death."

For eight months, her family would queue up in front of the bureaucratic offices from 5:30 a.m. until dark, waiting to have their papers okayed. Their furniture was already gone, confiscated by the Nazis, and they were sleeping on the floor, without lights. Finally her mother, a gutsy woman who had run the Gestapo out of their house more than once, knew they'd reached the end of the line. They had to get out immediately.

"It was a Saturday, and my mother was the last one in line. It was 12 o'clock when she was just approaching the desk. The clerk there said, 'That's all, no signature, no nothing anymore. Come back Monday.' My mother knew this was a matter of life and death, and there wasn't a Monday for us anymore."

"My mother always carried a long kitchen knife in her shopping bag, and she pulled this kitchen knife out and she pressed it against her chest, and she said, 'Either give me this signature, or this is what I'm going to do.' This man took off his hat and he signed the passport." With a laugh, she adds, "And all the people behind her were so mad that she'd pulled this trick."

They finally did get out, but on a German vessel instead of a foreign ship. The family still suffered terrible persecution throughout the entire trip. Gerda lost 37 relatives in concentration camps, and many friends, including her fiancé, a writer whose books were burned by the Nazis. Gerda spoke quietly and softly of those years, observing, "It hurts still, but it mellows with time." It is still too painful for her to talk of the many persecutions they suffered at the Nazi's hands.

Gerda has gone through a variety of jobs, but first and foremost, she is a writer. She came to Friendship (Please turn to p.3, col.1)

The State

LOS ANGELES — The Reverend Jesse Jackson delivered an emotion-charged speech Sunday in honor of Martin Luther King Jr., in which he said that Blacks must be "sober, sane, and sensitive" to meet the challenge of King's dream. Jackson addressed about two thousand at a South Central Los Angeles church during a day-long event commemorating the 50th birthday of the slain civil rights leader. Jackson told the crowd that race is the number one threat to domestic tranquility in the United States today. He criticized President Carter for not challenging the administrative structure in order to make King's dream of justice, equality, and freedom a reality.

SAN FRANCISCO — Hearings opened in San Francisco yesterday on the half-billion-dollar-a-year industry of television advertising for children. Kiddie ads have been under heavy fire for years, but it's taken the federal government "a while" to take up the battle. The Federal Trade Commission will spend two weeks hearing testimony on TV advertising for children to guide their decision on whether to regulate the commercials. Among the recommendations under study is an outright ban on TV ads directed at children younger than eight.

LOS ANGELES — Saying the Los Angeles City Council's proposed rent control plan would "institutionalize inflation," two groups have prepared a plan of their own. Tom Hayden, chairman of the Campaign for Economic Democracy, and Cary Lowe, co-director of the California Public Policy Center, told a news conference over the weekend that landlords should be permitted to raise rents no more than seven percent a year.

KINGMAN, ARIZONA — Ailing Synanon founder, Charles Dederich, faced a hearing yesterday in his struggle to avoid extradition to California on charges relating to a rattlesnake attack on a lawyer. The 65-year-old Dederich has been under guard in a Kingman, Arizona hospital room. He is charged with conspiracy and solicitation in connection with the rattlesnake incident, in which Los Angeles attorney Paul Morantz was bitten by a snake placed in his mailbox. Synanon members Lance Kenton and Joseph Musico are awaiting trial in Los Angeles in connection with the attack.

BOSTON — Doctors at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston say crib death is now being prevented with electric monitors. The monitors sound screeching alarms when a child stops breathing. And the alarms give parents time to rush to the infant and shake the baby until he starts breathing again. Massachusetts General has provided the devices to the parents of 260 babies. Sixty percent of the infants reportedly had major episodes of breathing difficulty while hooked to the monitors.

NEW YORK — Cambodia's Prince Sihanouk underwent medical tests yesterday at a New York hospital. He was admitted Sunday for symptoms of exhaustion and stress. The results of the tests will determine how soon Sihanouk can resume activities on behalf of his country in the United Nations.

WASHINGTON — President Carter wants Leonard Woodcock to be ambassador to China. Carter said yesterday he'll submit Woodcock's name to the Senate for confirmation.

The World

KUALA LUMPUR, MALAYSIA — Some fifty Vietnamese are in the first group of refugees from the freighter "Hai-Kong" scheduled to arrive soon in the United States. The refugees began leaving for the U.S. yesterday after the freighter arrived off the coast of Malaysia with some 25 hundred passengers aboard. The United States has agreed to take about 800 of the refugees. The rest already have gone to Canada, France, West Germany, and Switzerland.

TEHRAN — Iran's Senate gave a vote of confidence to the new civilian government headed by Prime Minister Shapour Bakhtiar. The Lower House of the Iranian Parliament began debate Sunday and is scheduled to vote today. Meanwhile, more than one hundred thousand Iranians jammed the streets in Tehran yesterday for a massive rally against the Shah. No violence is reported.

TEL AVIV — Israel has started drilling a new oil well in the occupied Gulf of Suez. It's the eighth well at the oil field, which Israel has agreed to return to Egypt nine months after the signing of a peace treaty. Yesterday's announcement from Israeli radio follows by several days the statement by Iran's new civilian Prime Minister Shapour Bakhtiar that he will cut off oil exports to Israel.

TEHRAN — American embassy officials in Tehran have confirmed newspaper reports that a former U.S. Air Force Colonel was killed Sunday night in a southeastern Iran city. The Iranian paper said Martin Berkowitz apparently was stabbed in the kitchen of his home — and the newspaper said the words, "Go back to your country" were found on the wall of the house.

Information Center Shut Down Due to Financial Considerations

Vice-chancellor Ed Birch announced that The Information Center located in South Hall will no longer be of service to the students at UCSB due to financial reasons.

"The Information Center was created in another day when there was a specific need for that program," explained Birch. According to Birch there is a need to re-evaluate the many information services and cut down where there is duplication and overlapping.

A check list was created which listed all of the student services. From this list, it was decided where the same information could be given at a different location, thus eliminating the need for the Information Center in South Hall.

"Instead of going to one place for information, students must now go to many different places," state Joan Reetz, Director of the Information Center.

One of the biggest concerns in closing the Information Center was the elimination of seven student positions. "It was intended that no students lose their job," commented Birch.

Although they were selected for the full academic year, the employees were informed in October that their jobs would terminate in December. "Every student who wanted new employment found it through the Placement Center," explained Reetz.

The main location where information can now be obtained is the Office of Public Information, located in the Administration Building. This office deals primarily with referrals and the sale of catalogs, although they are prepared to give any type of information.

It is difficult to tell what effects the shut down of the South Hall center will have on the O.P.I. "By the Winter Quarter the students are pretty much squared away," stated one O.P.I. employee. "I don't even know that the students know we're here."

Hearings

A large number of people are expected to turn out and for this reason the meeting place was changed from the regular city offices to the larger Lobero theatre.

The hearings will continue until Thursday under the guidance of Judge Samule Gordon, from Washington. The hearings are designed to give FERC an idea of public opinion on which to base their final decision, which could be as early as March.

"Everybody should get the right to speak their mind at the hearings," Staller said.

Manor Residents Tell War Tales

Manor awhile back because she hoped to work for the News-Press, but she suffered a stroke and complications, and now she must remain pretty much in her room, which is disheartening to this very energetic woman.

She is now working on translating the diary of a Civil War soldier of German background who wrote in old German. She also enjoys spending time with Linda, her "adopted grandchild" from UCSB.

HENRY CORAY

"I'm the old fellow with bags under his eyes and the body shaped like a question mark," said Henry Coray when asked how he could be identified by a reporter. Of course, he was neither, but this retired Presbyterian Minister does have a marvelous wit and sense of humor and an obvious fascination for life.

Henry hails from the northeastern portions of Pennsylvania. He attended seminary there, and eventually became head of a little church in a small town. He married his wife, who lives with him at Friendship Manor, at that church, and soon after was sent to China as a missionary.

"It was just fascinating. First, we learned the Chinese language, which is terribly difficult. You can pronounce the same word four different ways, and it will mean a different thing each time."

"Over there, Manchuria was taken over by the Japanese in 1938, and they broke off from China and set up the puppet state of Manchukuo. And actually, we could see what was going to happen over there a lot faster than they could over here. They were using Manchuria as a training ground for their troops. Shortly before Pearl Harbor we were evacuated. They said, 'Well, we can't order you home, but we recommend strongly that you leave. There was one side of me that said, 'well, you'd better get out of there,' and another that said, 'no, stick it out.' It was a very agonizing decision for me," he recalls. Since two of his children were ill, he opted to leave.

They came to California, where he took a church in Long Beach until his retirement in 1971. Both he and his wife now live in Friendship Manor with a special bonus: their son is the security guard.

Asked if he still works as a minister, he asserts, "Well, when people are awfully hard up they send for me," but he does admit to performing various functions for the residents at Friendship Manor, which he says the residents call "Wrinkle City."

Meet the Devil

A series of hearings on the proposed west coast LNG site being conducted by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission will come to order at the Lobero Theatre in Santa Barbara this morning.

This may be the last chance for local residents to have any real input into the LNG siting process. It is also virtually the first chance we have had to influence those decision makers that will decide the fate of Pt. Conception.

On the federal level, Energy Secretary James Schlesinger has indicated that LNG from foreign countries should be relied on only as a last resort. He has indicated a preference for other lower cost energy resources.

Some of those protesting the gas company's moves to bring LNG to our shores have speculated that the whole effort is part of a somewhat devious profit-making scheme. They explain that the price of natural gas would be brought up to the level of the more expensive imported and liquified gas, allowing a larger profit on the less expensive domestic variety.

Regardless of the motives of the LNG promoters, the hearings will be taking place. Hopefully these sessions will be interesting and informational. Those of you that have not formed an opinion may find the hearings especially helpful in that respect.

If you have the opportunity to go downtown today between 9:30 and 4 stop by the Lobero and watch a crucial decision being made.

A Fitting Tribute

Some of the three day weekends we spend away from work and school were originally holidays celebrating the births of some of this county's greatest leaders

It is unfortunate, however, that we tend to forget these people and what they stood for except on the one day a year our interrupted routines jog our memories.

President Carter has proposed legislation that would make the birthday of Martin Luther King, Jr. a national holiday.

We believe this gesture would be a fitting tribute to the man and his accomplishments and hope that, if established, it would be more than just another day off.

Share the Umbrella

UCSB students frustrated by a seemingly "faceless" administration have a chance to meet the Chancellor today.

Holding another of his somewhat regular umbrella sessions, Chancellor Robert A. Huttenback will meet with interested students in front of the UCen at 11:30.

Students should recognize a rare opportunity to confront the leading administrator on this campus. Those who do may be surprised by Huttenback's candor.

And if it rains, don't worry. The Chancellor will undoubtedly bring along his Cinzano umbrella....

The Chancellor isn't the only administrative activity worthy of attention. Today students will be filing their packets--that annoying task that comes every quarter.

Word is that students are returning their packets without the survey card--a move which could cost students $3. We find it appalling that students can be fined for not filling out or bringing their survey cards back to the Registrar. The questions on a survey ask for a choice--the decision to take the questionnaire should have similar options.

We understand that not all students who forget the surveys are fined. We hope that continues to be the rule instead of the exception.

We also hope students filing their packets--today the magic letters are S-Z--will kill two birds with one stone by registering to vote while they stand in line.

Sources tell us yesterday's group-- M-R --included a number of people who recognized the basic democratic right of voting

We hope today's gathering does as well.

On Law and Discipline

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I am concerned that people on campus understand campus regulations, so I will respond to Mr. Shapiro's letter, hopefully to correct some of the misconceptions expressed in it. His first question about whether I believe that the Chancellor should have the authority to punish students because "it is possible these students may be acquitted in a court of law," is probably the most revealing of a common misconception. The first part of the question is immaterial because it doesn't really make any difference whether I believe the Chancellor should have the power or not -- since he does. I do agree though, and the reason I do is related to the difference between the "discipline" for violating University regulations and the court process for violations of the law. There is a lot of difference between the two and they are completely separate. They are even legally separate. They are even legally separate, even though the same set of actions could be the basis for both charges of violating University regulations and charges of criminal action. The University deals with charges of violation of regulations and the courts deal with charges of criminal violations. This is not double jeopardy. "Discipline" is more closely related to the counseling process and corrective action than an adversary court case and punishment. People like myself who administer "discipline" on a campus are not normally legally trained and we do not have the same authority or range of sanctions of a court. We have no authority to subpoena witnesses, neither the accused nor witness are sworn (though we hope they will tell the truth), and our permissible sanctions do now allow us to send people to jail or otherwise "punish them." Mr. Shapiro seems to think that a letter or "Censure" is punishment, but I guess that that is a matter of opinion. The fact is that it is not a part of a permanent academic record that would accompany a person and the only real significance comes into play if that person is again found guilty of violating regulations. Then the fact that there had been a previous sanction would make a difference when the committee recommended a sanction for the latest offense.

Another reason for preferring the "discipline" possibility for violation of regulations is that the only alternative I can think of would be to have every matter referred to a court where charges could possibly be made -- and even the courts would not like that. Neither would the students who would have to hire lawyers and go through the time consuming process of the courts. I have known students who had to withdraw from school because they did not have time to study and/or they had to get a job to pay the lawyer when they got caught up having to defend themselves in court. Furthermore, court actions are as part of a public record and discipline hearings are not.

Discipline hearings are normally informal hearings and lawyers are seldom involved at all: by either the University or the accused student. The only time a University attorney is involved is when the student chooses to be advised by an attorney. Even in these cases we try to avoid an adversary kind of set up with the attorneys doing all of the talking. The role of the attorney is more advisor and to see that the rights of the accused are not violated. One recent United States Court of Appeals ruling even specifies this advisory role as the appropriate one for an attorney in a disciplinary hearing. Some courts have even declined to allow students the right to legal counsel in disciplinary hearings; Our regulations here do permit it. This should help point up to the difference between court cases and disciplinary hearings though.

It is possible for students to take the institution to court if he/she believes that the administration of discipline was improper or the sanction was out of line. Most of these cases do not focus on the specific issue of the violation of regulations itself as they do on the appropriateness of the due process that was followed. For example, a person cannot be suspended without providing a hearing, the opportunity to cross-examine witnesses, and written notice of the charges, etc. All this is spelled out in both system wide and campus regulations.

As to the several questions relating to the Chancellor's role in the disciplinary process, it is true that the Chancellor has the authority and responsibility for discipline on campus. This is true about almost everything else on campus except those things for which the Academic Senate is responsible. But, in fact, this authority is delegated and he has very little direct effect on the process. The Chancellor appoints the Student Faculty Conduct Committee -- but he does not choose them. Names are submitted by the Academic Senate Committee on committees, by the Graduate Students Association and the Associated Students. I have never known a case where the Chancellor failed to accept the recommendations that were made to him. The Director of Student Services (in our old regulations it says Dean of Students), has been delegated the responsibility of investigating alleged violations and determining whether the matter should be pursued by referral to a hearing or whether it can be best handled as a part of the counseling process. If it is determined that disciplinary action is appropriate -- and in close

Help S.A.V.E. S.B.

Editor, Daily Nexus:

For quite some time now, there has been a major controversy brewing over Western LNG's desires and attempts to site the West Coast's first Liquified Natural Gas terminal at Little Cojo Bay, just this side of Pt. Conception. For the most part, the local community has been ignored in the process; first by the utilities, and then by state legislators.

All the same, it should be clear that the local community is extremely offended and highly concerned about the possibility of an LNG port being located at Pt. Conception. And despite the seemingly unassailable odds of fighting Sacramento and the utility conglomerate, the local voice can and will be heard.

As the horror of LNG has begun to grow, several groups formed to fight it, in Santa Barbara and throughout the state. These are people who don't buy the Gas Company's tale of a California gripped by a cold and darkness without LNG.

Pt. Conception is an area of unpredictable and often fierce wind and wave conditions, with known seismic hazards. One of the few remaining pristine sections of coast in the southern half of the state, Pt. Conception is also a place of great religious significance to western Native Americans. For these reasons this location should be abandoned as far as building an LNG port goes.

If it is possible to build an environmentally safe LNG port elsewhere in the state that will not tread on the Constitutional rights of Native Americans, then this should be done. But if this is not possible, then we had all better accept and begin to work towards decreased use of energy and development of alternatives to fossil fuels.

Beginning today and running through Thursday there will be Federal hearings at the Lobero Theatre pertaining to the siting of an LNG terminal at Pt. Conception. If you want to help preserve our coastline and prevent the disaster of LNG, you can do so by being present at the hearings or by voicing your displeasure in writing to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, which will decide if we are to have LNG in our backyards or not. You can present your written arguments to David Huard, Staff Counsel for FERC at the hearings or send them to:

As a student group dedicated to promoting the general welfare of the associated students, we hope you will join us in this fight. We also invite you to join our ranks, by mailing us a postcard or letter with your name, address, and local phone number. Or, you can come by Storke Building 1035 and give us your vital statistics. We have no club dues and you are under no obligation to do anything if you join. You may find, however, that our group can provide the vehicle needed to undertake and complete a local project, be it practical or social.

Whatever the case, please join us in the fight against LNG.

Law vs. Discipline

to twenty years I have never had a Chancellor make this decision for me -- all the due process steps are outlined in the regulations are implemented. The Committee, after the hearing, determines the guilt or innocence of the accused and if innocent, that is the end of the matter, even if I or the Chancellor happen to disagree with the findings. If the person is found guilty, the Committee recommends a sanction and I do not remember any case where the sanction imposed was more severe than the one recommended. Some of the cases have been reduced on an appeal. The Director of Student Services has been delegated authority to impose sanctions of "Warning," "Censure," or "Probation." If the recommended sanction is "Suspension," or "Dismissal," the decision is made by the Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs. Appeals of my decisions are made to the Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs, and appeals of his decision are made to the Chancellor. So you see, it really is incorrect to believe that the Chancellor plays a central role in this process. The fact of the matter is that the Chancellor would have to be persuaded that there were some good reasons why he should not support the recommendations of the Committee, and that is the purpose of appeal.

I see no valid reason why people on this campus should take any position on this matter at Berkeley when all we can possibly know about the specifics are what we read in the media or what the students who were found guilty say. I have no reason to believe that the process was not fair or that they had any of their rights violated. If that were true, the appropriate action for the students concerned would be to bring suit against the University on that basis. Having the Graduate Council at Berkeley urge the Chancellor to rescind his decision which was based on a recommendation of the committee that heard the case, is not very persuasive -- nor would expressions of support from this campus do much more than make the guilty student feel better. Mr. Shapiro asked my opinion on this matter -- so I gave it. I doubt that Mr. Shapiro or other members of CCUA will agree with me.

Mr. Shapiro's final question as to what constitutes "obstruction of University activity," "unauthorized use of University property," and "failure to comply with the directions of University officials," are pretty self evident descriptions of unacceptable behaviors. My experience is that there are a wide range of settings and situations where these charges could be made and it would not do much good for me to list some of these examples. The most obvious and most recent one pertains to the actions of the students Mr. Shapiro is concerned about at Berkeley. They were found guilty of these offenses. In any situation I have known about, the students are clearly warned that they are in violation of these specific charges, told that what they are doing constitutes a violation and are urged to leave or cease the unacceptable behavior. If they then do leave, no charges are filed against them. They may even be given a certain amount of time to leave and stop the unacceptable behavior. Obviously, at some point in time, some University official has to make the determination that what is taking place is an unacceptable situation, and once the warnings are given and people persist in committing the violation, action has to be taken. If no one was cited or disciplined at UCLA, the obvious fact is that the UCLA officials were willing to accept the situation as it was and did not choose to order them to disperse. This does not mean that other decisions could not have been made. I am sure that there are degrees of obstruction and differing tolerances for these problems.

I hope that this has cleared up some of these matters, but Nexus readers will be pleased that I do not really intend to get into a continuing dialogue through letters to the Editor. I wish you well.

Spikers Lose in Finals; Lady Gymnasts and Ruggers Win...

UCLA defeated UCSB 15-2, 15-3 in the finals of the All-Cal Volleyball Tournament last weekend in Davis.

The UCLA-UCSB final was expected. The Gauchos advanced to the finals by defeating UC Santa Cruz, 15-0, 15-4; UC Riverside, 15-9, 15-13; UC Berkeley, 15-10, 15-13 and UC San Diego 15-4, 15-2. Scott Steele, John Nisbet, Rich Ridgway, Dale Rhine, Joerg Lorscheider and David Lundin started for Santa Barbara. Tony Baumgartner and Mark Roberts came in off the bench.

"The only place we can go against UCLA is up," first year head coach Ken Preston said. "They were awesome. They blocked everything and played a tremendous game at the net."

UCSB will play an alumni team Wednesday, January 24, before hosting the UCSB Collegiate Volleyball Tournament, Saturday and Sunday, January 27 and 28.

'No Contest' Claims Intramural Championship; Defeat Booters

The IM coed soccer tournament was held Saturday on Storke Field and won by 'No Contest.'

The coed rules were such that each team had nine players: four women and four men in the field and a goalie of either sex. Goals scored by males counted as one point, while those by females were worth two points.

The tourney consisted of six teams in two brackets of play. Bracket One had four teams: Big Booters, Tropicanni Balls, We Dribble on Leather Balls, and The Stoned Crabs. The second bracket matched the two best teams, Heidelberg FC and No Contest.

The Booters dominated bracket one play by defeating the Balls and then the Crabs to advance to the finals.

No Contest defeated Heidelberg and went on to shut out the Booters in the championship game, 3-0. No Contest was comprised of UCSB men and women soccer club players.

Dean Ties Gym Record

GYMNASTICS

Pat Dean tied a school record in the vaulting but the men's gymnastic team was defeated by San Jose State 197-153.5 in Rob Gym Saturday night.

The Gauchos women's team defeated Cal Poly SLO and Cal State Los Angeles, 103.45-97.65-71.65 during their tri-meet held simultaneously with the men.

Dean recorded a 9.1 in his event to mark the first time he has ever bettered the nine point barrier. San Jose's Marty Sharpe won the six-event all around competition with 53.1 points but Dean and teammate Bob Kohut bettered their 40 point goals. Kohut recorded 41 points, while Dean accumulated 40.7.

Karla Schatz and Mary Ellen McNaughton lead the women's victory. Schatz won the uneven parallel bars event with a 7.1 while placing second on the beam with a 6.95. McNaughton won the beam competition with a 7.15 and placed third on the bars with a 6.3.

Both the men's and women's teams will compete together Saturday night in Rob Gym. The men will face USC, Sonoma State and Sacramento State, while the women will face Hayward State. The women travel to UCLA today to face the Bruins tonight.

RUGBY

The Gauchos rugby team started off their home season in an impressive fashion, routing the USC Trojans, 47-0, Friday night in the Campus Stadium.

UCSB built a 29-0 lead at the half and eased in for the win. Kevin Corcoran, Dane Clark, and Ken Kenrick were standouts for Santa Barbara.

The ruggers will play their biggest game of the season Saturday in the Stadium against UCLA.

IM Soccer

women's club, scored the first goal of the final game which was worth two points. The other goal was registered by Mark Hall, a men's club player and assistant coach of the women's club.

Hall's game clinching goal occurred in the last minute of the game on a direct kick from about 20 yards out. The ball sailed over the Booters' wall of defensemen and into the top of the goal.

This was the first of a series of four IM weekend tournaments scheduled for this quarter.—A.J. Houston

PCAA—Right on Schedule

By RICHARD BORNSTEIN

Anyone looking back at Saturday night's basketball game against Irvine, would have to agree that the Gauchos were fortunate to win.

In the final minute Matt Maderos hit the go ahead basket and Jerry Ocasio sank the key free throws in what turned out to be an unlikely comeback. The game proved more than anything else that college basketball is the most competitive brand of basketball played in this country.

Despite all of the warped values displayed in recruiting, and all of the alumni intervention, there is still an opportunity for an unlikely upset, a great comeback and effective strategy. Saturday night was a perfect example.

Two weeks ago in losing to the University of San Diego and Puget Sound, Irvine looked as if they were about 30 points worse than their PCAA rivals. They were a short team and made up for it with a lack of quickness. Fullerton was coming here first, and people were talking upset, with UCSB being 2-0 after the first week of conference play.

A lot changed for Irvine in the last few weeks. First they defeated MacMurray College by 50 points prior to coming up here. Then, they let Lester Jones run their four corner offense and the result is a different team. While most people will look at the Gauchos three point victory and say Santa Barbara played poorly, Irvine played possibly their best game of the year.

What happened was simple. UCSB was heavily favored, down a bit from the loss to Fullerton, and Irvine is always emotionally ready for Santa Barbara. The Gauchos missed a few shots at the game's outset, had a couple of turnovers, and later became frustrated while the visitors patiently worked for a good shot.

The Anteaters used up the clock each time down and took advantage of the PCAA's decision not to use the 30 second clock. Without the clock, a physically inferior team like Irvine can compete with more talented groups.

The closeness of the Irvine game and the other PCAA games indicates the conference race will be as competitive as it has been in the past. Fullerton is 2-0 after defeating Long Beach in overtime but they are not supermen by any stretch of the imagination. Long Beach almost defeated Duke, but they are struggling, and last year's regular season champs, Fresno State, have not played up to expectations. They are 1-1 after the first week.

Thursday UCSB travels to San Jose to play the Spartans who are currently 0-2 in the conference. But San Jose State is a strange ball club and as long as they play in Independence High School's gymnasium and have their boisterous fans intimidating referees and opposing teams they always will be. When they get together to play UCSB strange things seem to happen.

Two years ago it appeared UCSB had earned a hard fought one point victory in San Jose. With three seconds to go the Spartans inbounded the ball, and to most of the people in the stands, Wally Rank's desperation 35 footer came after the horn had sounded. The shot went in, the referee signaled it counted, and that was the ball game.

In post season play that same season, San Jose had lost two starters due to the rule which says a player can only play a certain number of games during the season. In desperation, the Spartans changed their offense in the final week of the season and came within a few points of defeating Long Beach State in the Tournament Finals.

Then, last year in San Jose with time running out and the Gauchos ahead by two, a turnaround, corkscrew, no-look shot from the dead corner pushed the Spartans into overtime. They went on to win the game and continued the odd occurrences of the past.

No one knows what is left to be invented this season by San Jose. Star players have a habit of disappearing before UCSB comes to town and appearing just in time to make a crucial basket.

Everything adds up to a PCAA race that will undoubtedly come down to the final weekend of play and inevitably end with an unpredictable tournament in Anaheim. Idealistically, UCSB has as good a chance as everyone else. Realistically...?

MARY ELLEN McNAUGHTON helped lead the women's gymnastic team to a win over Cal Poly and Cal State Los Angeles. Both the men and women's teams will be competing Saturday night in Rob Gym.

The Devil (LNG) And The Deep Blue Sea.

To hear the gas company tell it, the people of Santa Barbara County are trapped between the devil and the deep blue sea. Either we submit to the dangers of LNG or we run out of fuel to heat our homes.

We believe there is a third alternative. Surely, a site can be found where public safety would be insured, where sea conditions are calm and safe, where the environment can be protected and where people's rights can be respected.

If not, we suggest alternative energy sources be found to meet our needs.

Selma Rubin, Resident, Santa Barbara

"The prospect of an LNG facility here is a terrible thing. We would live every day in fear.

"Santa Barbara is a beautiful, lovely place to live and we love it here. But now they are trying to make this area into an industrial dump, and it's wrong.

"What the gas companies don't seem to understand is that we live here and we have the right to protect our own lives and property.

"This is our community — our home — and we should be able to decide."

The battle over LNG in Santa Barbara County has finally reached the federal government, and the final decision is theirs.

Our fears, concerns and protests are well-founded, valid and justified. And you can be sure we have been heard in Washington, D.C.

So, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) is coming to Santa Barbara to hold hearings on all the issues involved.

The Point Conception Earthquake Fault.

California is riddled with earthquake faults but, with care, they can be avoided. Two nuclear generating plants have been shut down in California because care was not taken to avoid them.

Trenches dug at the proposed LNG terminal site confirmed the existence of an active earthquake fault exactly where the gas companies propose to build their terminal.

Too many well-qualified experts say LNG is a time bomb whose danger cannot even be measured. The people of Santa Barbara County refuse to live under a gas cloud of fear, waiting for the next quake.

A Most Sacred Temple.

To western Native Americans, Point Conception is the single most sacred temple on earth. It is their Jerusalem. They are there now to protect their temple. The people of Santa Barbara County support their fight for religious freedom and equal protection under the law.

Captain Atlee Clapp, U.S. Navy, Retired, Santa Barbara

"LNG at Point Conception would be a disaster. Whether the accident occurred in the first six months or some other time would make little difference.

"Operating a ship the size of an LNG tanker in proximity to land is always hazardous. To do it in the Point Conception area with the weather that's there — with the fog and winds and sea conditions — is just too dangerous.

"I think it's just a matter of time."

"Red" Allen, Commercial Fisherman, Santa Barbara

"An LNG terminal at Point Conception would be disastrous for the marine ecology here.

"We would lose the fishing grounds and it would pollute the water and spoil this entire area.

"I'm a commercial fisherman. I've been fishing here since 1936 and I love this coast. That area around Point Conception is one of the only areas left. I think if people knew the area and its beauty, they would think more about saving it."

A Demonstration Of Our Resolve To Fight.

The people of Santa Barbara County will hold a rally to dramatize our opposition to an LNG terminal at Point Conception. We want to show FERC that our commitment is strong and our feelings are deep.

We want to tell FERC that we refuse to be trapped between the devil and the deep blue sea!
