Have Hopes for New UCen?-- All Suggestions Heard Today

By BILL GRAHAM
EG Sports Editor

In an effort to avoid criticism of UCen II and to allow expression of student desires, Dr. Gary Hess has announced that a meeting will be held today at 4 p.m. in the UCen Program Lounge to discuss plans and accept suggestions for the new UCen.

Hess, chairman of UCSB's Miscellaneous Facility Subcommittee, will conduct the meeting; he stressed that "all points of view may be expressed."

Hoping to have the project planning guide for UCen II finished by the end of this quarter, Hess is holding this meeting to discuss tentative plans made so far and to accept student suggestions for the new building.

Presently, there are two locations being considered for UCen II. The first is an extension of the present UCen building out over the patio east of the food service area and including a terrace area extending out to the lagoon over the present UCen lawn.

The second location is on the Storke campus, across El Colegio from the College Inn. Hess is hopeful that perhaps both facilities can be built, however, that will depend upon how much money is available.

Expansion of the present UCen has been suggested partly because the present building was designed for 7500 students and was too small when it opened.

Hess' committee has been working with the Recreation Committee, headed by Vice Chancellor Ray Varley, to coordinate the recreation program into UCen II.

Ideas based on the Storke location include 16 bowling lanes, a swimming pool, outdoor courts, indoor game areas, a recreation office and a locker room.

Other less tentative plans provide for food service, a social lounge, music listening rooms, craft and hobby areas, and rolling green lawns.

New ideas for the food service include barbecue areas, more informal, less "barnlike" seating, and hopefully a Rathskeller-like operation which would be able to sell beer.

Although none of these plans is definite, they show the

CHANCELLOR'S URBAN PROBLEM COMMITTEE

Initial Urban Crisis Target--'White Racism'

A plan recommended to the Chancellor by his 14-member committee on urban problems was presented to Leg Council last night.

The committee, comprised of students, faculty and staff, was appointed by the Chancellor in January and charged with developing a program for the most effective use of UCSB's capabilities for attacking root problems afflicting this nation's urban centers.

Expressing agreement with the conclusions of the Kerner Commission dealing with "white racism," the committee said in its report that "Santa Barbara's initial response to the urban crisis should be to attack ... those patterns of behavior whose consequences, intended or not, are to reinforce and maintain present inequalities among ethnic groups."

The report acknowledged the University's responsibility to deal with the many other grave problems of the urban crisis not related to race, and noted how this responsibility is being met at UCSB through research in such areas as smog control, marine oil pollution and sonic booms.

MULTI-FACETED

The committee recommended the establishment of a multi-faceted unit which would direct its service, teaching and research aims toward solution of racial problems both on campus and within "the external community."

Assistant Chancellor David Gardner, who chaired the committee, said that the structure of the unit was designed with deliberate flexibility so that its operations would complement and strengthen existing or proposed academic or administrative programs, such as those dedicated to chicano, black, or American Indian studies.

A principle recommendation calls for the establishment of a Bureau of Institutional Analysis which would:

- Provide a pilot institutional analysis of UCSB to determine "the modes and degree to which it functions in a racist manner."

- Recommend changes which would facilitate the elimination of such racism.

- Build a staff and research program to serve in a similar capacity as a consulting agency to government, industry and other organizations.

- Include on its staff students from both the majority and minority cultures who would become trained as researchers and practitioners of "what might prove to be an exciting and worthwhile professional field."

- Conduct research primarily on institutions in the dominate culture.

In addition to programs administered through the bureau, the proposed unit would involve itself in these four areas of teaching and learning:

1. It would attempt to learn how to improve the education of college students from non-Anglo cultures.

2. It would coordinate and/or administer various on-campus curricula on ethnic studies.

FULL-CREDIT

3. It would initiate a work-study program involving as many students as possible in approved field experience, principally in the tri-counties area. Full course credit would be allowed for student participation in such "community service."

This would include ghetto and barrio field experience whereby students would develop ways of serving such communities. Such courses would also be aimed at

RODDY CLARK, GREG KNELL, BRUCE HARGER

Administrative Vice Presidency Attracts Three Candidates

Organizational ability is the prime prerequisite for a potential administrative vice president, according to Jim Ashlock, present occupant of that post.

According to the A.S. Constitution, the administrative vice president shall "coordinate all administrative boards" and "preside over the administrative boards council." Thirty to 35 different committees exist within A.S. structure which the veep must make "run smoothly," says Ashlock. "You are a prodder, too."

Three men are vying for the post: Roddy Clark, Greg Knell and Bruce Harger. Since Harger is also seeking four other offices, including the presidency, his views will be presented Monday with the other presidential hopefuls.

RODDY CLARK

Clark feels the major issue in the campaign is what he calls "cultural diversification." He wants the University to go out into the community not just as researchers, but as workers.

In dealing with the administration, Clark states that he would "take a hard line in private" since that is where meaningful discussion and changes can be made and where the A.S. executive officers must give their staunchest support to the student body's wants and needs.

In concert with his "hard line" attitude, Clark wants to break the "buddy-buddy relationship" with the Chancellor and other administrators which he feels should inhibit any A.S. representative.

Clark doesn't believe that grades are essential to the educational process. "If a student is forced to read a book, how much less will he get out of it than if he read it of his own volition?" he queried.

Clark believes that his ability to listen to both sides of an argument and his willingness to compromise are his strongest points.

GREG KNELL

Knell's campaign is predicated on the theory that students need more power which they could get "out of the obscure faculty committees" where it is now.

He feels that "students have to form themselves into an effective political group to counter the Regents' conservatism. If the University community can present a unified, organized front with researched proposals," Knell feels that the administration and the Regents will be more receptive to the students, than if the students just go begging.

Knell believes, "The issues are so important that it is necessary to take a strong stand on everything. We can't be satisfied with the return of what the Regents have taken away; we must work for it all."

Math Professor Chosen to Speak At Faculty Lecture

"Combinatorial Mathematics" will be the subject of Dr. Ky Fan, UCSB professor of mathematics, when he delivers the annual Faculty Research Lecture today, at 8 p.m. in Psych, 1824.

The UCSB Academic Senate annually confers the lectureship on one of its members for outstanding research and scholarly attainment. In its presentation to the Senate, the nominating committee stated that "in a discipline marked by truly awesome specializations, Dr. Fan's versatility is as remarkable as his competence in each of the fields to which he has contributed."

These fields include functional and classical analysis, point set and combinatorial topology, game theory, probability theory, linear algebra, and convexity and inequality.

Fan was born in Hangchow, China, in 1914. He did his undergraduate work at the National Peking University and then attended the University of Paris.

He holds the Gold Medal for Scientific Achievement from the Republic of China and is a member of the Academic Sinica.

NFU Presents RESIST Poets in Reading Tonight

The New Free University at UCSB proudly presents this Thursday evening in Campbell Hall, for one performance only, the RESIST poets on National Benefit Tour: Robert Bly, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, Lenore Kandel, Kenneth Rexroth, and William Stafford; plus Vallejo Kennedy, Margaret Kleinman, and Galway Kinnell. The People, Poetry in Song, The Children in the Fiery Furnace, and Dry Paint will also appear.

Tickets are on sale at Lobero Theatre Ticket Office, Galeria Del Sol, Unicorn Bookstore, Red Lion Bookstore, and the University Center Information Desk.

For information and reserve tickets at the New Free University office, call 961-2393.

A few tickets will also be on sale at the door beginning at 7:30 p.m.; students $1.50, general public $3.

Tickets are already going fast since this is a rare opportunity to see so many internationally famous poets on one stage.

The readings are being coordinated by RESIST, a national organization of adults who support draft resistance and other anti-war activities.

A spokesman for RESIST explained that "the readings are designed primarily to raise funds for organizing draft resistance activities, and to help remind people all across the country of the heroism of draft resisters. Americans continue to die in a senseless war, and 33,000 young men are being drafted every month."

Readings are timed to coincide with a number of other anti-war events. RESIST and the New University Conference are sponsoring a Week to Confront Campus Militarism at about 50 colleges and universities, April 21-27.

'Non-Violence' Training Given by Peace Center

As a peace advocate cannot effectively espouse world peace--an end to international militarism--without knowing the reality of inner peace and incorporating peace into his interpersonal being, a life experience in non-violent resistance will be discussed at a mind gathering Thursday noon, UCen 2272. The program is under the auspices of the now-forming Community Peace Center in Santa Barbara.

The meeting will propose the necessity of living peace as well as studying it. Any human being can join in.

Operating as a central part of the peace center, the training in non-violence is a way of life.

The commitment to non-violence is threefold: on the global scale (world or cosmic peace), on an interpersonal level (community peace), and on a personal basis (inner peace).

The training will be both intellectual and experience-oriented. That is, the students will explore the logic and corollaries of non-violent philosophy and then apply these principles and truths to daily living and social action.

Although the meeting this week will be instrumental in determining the program for this Spring and Summer, the non-violence training probably involve liberating Santa Barbara--by resisting unjust laws, conducting teach-ins on peace and love, street drama, celebrations of life, ad infinitum.

Anyone unable to attend Thursday but who wishes to participate should contact John Minkler (968-0862).

EDITORIAL

Abortion Should be Legalized

Issue: How satisfactory are current California abortion laws?

Most campus campaigns related to this issue have been attempts to get the Student Health Center to provide contraceptives for female students who need them. For various reasons, most important of which is financial, this campaign failed. It is still impossible to obtain The Pill through the Health Center. Students are now usually referred to Planned Parenthood.

Certain contraceptives can be obtained without prescription in most drugstores, but there is some controversy over their effectiveness.

But even The Pill is not foolproof. Dr. Garrett Hardin of UCSB's Biology Department, a long-time crusader for legalizing abortion, reports that The Pill's failure rate of one per cent produces about a quarter of a million unwanted pregnancies per year in the U.S.

So even if women at UCSB can obtain The Pill by some way or another, there is still the chance of pregnancy. For many of these women, abortion is a last-resort birth control measure.

Over one million abortions are performed annually in this country, and most estimates show that 99 per cent are performed illegally. Most college women early become familiar with horror stories about the trips to Mexico that pregnant girls have to make.

Somewhere underneath student cries for more power, more participation, and more relevance in the University lies another major unsolved problem: what to do about unwanted pregnancies.

Current laws in California, as in most states, stipulate that pregnancies can only be terminated when "there is substantial risk that continuance of the pregnancy would gravely impair the physical or mental health of the mother," or when pregnancy resulted from forcible rape or incest.

The "mental health" clause is usually the only hope for young unmarried girls who become accidentally pregnant. Unfortunately, the term "mental health" means "mental illness to the extent that the woman is dangerous to herself or to the person or property of others, or is in need of supervision or restraint."

Some women apparently are able to convince the committee of physicians which must approve abortions that they will be endangering themselves and others unless an abortion can be performed. But many women are not.

They are then forced to make the often dangerous visit to the illegal abortionist. Or they may have to go ahead and have an unwanted baby.

In the case of college women, the result usually is that the mother drops out of school and gets a job to pay for medical expenses, or she marries out of social pressures without desire or preparation.

We feel that current California abortion laws are not satisfactory, that other alternatives are intolerable, and that any woman should be able to have an abortion if she needs and/or wants one.

By PAUL CABBELL

I don't usually hang around outside the City Post Office with a yellow pad of paper, scrawling innocuous, esoteric notes on what Bertrand Russell had to say in 1905 about the "fundamental meaning of existence."

But there I was last Saturday morning, waiting for my wife to drop a letter down an airmail slot, when I heard a gruff, cop-like voice ask, "Hey, you seen a lady walk by here in a white hat?"

I looked up to see a well-tanned, well-fed, impeccably tailored member of the establishment standing relaxed, one hand in a suit pocket, the other fingering an expensive looking tie clasp, fashioned in the shape of a hard shell crab. Probably given to him by his mistress as a memento of a private experience during a fishing expedition, I thought.

"No, I haven't. Sorry."

He grinned and lifted his head, sniffing the wind like an elderly gelding in a pasture full of wild mares, all in heat. "The bitch," he muttered. He booted an imaginary piece of litter into the gutter and relaxed, accepting the fact that he would have to wait.

"What you writing?" he asked. "A letter to your girlfriend? Heh-heh."

"Something for school," I said.

"Oh, you go out there too, uh, what do you call it--the college out there?"

"UCSB," I said.

"Yeah, the college. I was down fishing in Mazatlan last week. One of your friends, Tom I think his name was, he was down there. You must know Tom, the guy with the beard and the long hair? Wears beads, too. One of those hippies." He aspirated the "H," practically breaking his lips in the "P" sound.

I told him that I didn't know Tom.

"Well anyway, he was there. Nice guy too. Real nice. I woke up on the beach one morning--I was in the camper--and there he was running along the beach. Beard. Long hair. Beads. Christ! Nice guy though."

"Yeah, some of them are nice guys," I said.

"I never got too much of an education," he said. "My family all did though. They all got educated and teach school and all. Me I made money. I made a lot of money. And I'm happier than any of them."

I thought about the kids in Watts. The barrios. This is one of Nixon's "silent majority," I thought. He obeys the laws, pays his taxes, and keeps quiet. I thought about asking him what he thought about "the problems of the poor," but somehow it wouldn't have fit. I'd have been jumping onto a soapbox. And for what? You can't really communicate with these pigs, I thought.

A woman in a white straw hat appeared behind the gelding and tapped him on the shoulder. "Let's go," she said. She looked down at me and with an index finger capped by a brightly polished nail she tapped the ashes from her lipstick filter tipped cigarette.

They walked together toward a Volkswagen bus parked by a fire hydrant. "If you don't hurry up we'll never make Solvang by 12 o'clock," she cackled.

Suddenly the old gelding stopped. He turned around and walked over to where I sat. He looked down at me and said, "You know, I'm gonna grow one of those beards. And I'm gonna get me some beads. Just like Tom."

Before I had a chance to reply he had climbed into the bus and waved. They pulled away from the curb, the woman talking and shaking her hands in the air, he with a large cigar--still wrapped in the cellophane--clamped firmly between his teeth.

I wondered, then, about Tom, whoever he was. I wondered how the hell he had done it, and if he knew.

PIECES

All that was left of him was drifting - an empty hull, passports, some packages, and the diary he kept.

It must be born to me to see other places, other people, to seek solitude at times.

There is a certain way to set a sail--a way learned by setting sails. And a way to live a life, found rummaging among the many remnants of hours spent wandering the back regions of men's minds. So many pieces.

I go get away from it all. When I feel ocean all around me I feel alone and that's when I feel good.

Days, months, putting together, making a single mind of himself, setting the same sails morning after morning, learning how they are set.

ROTC Useful and Valid

In reply to your printing of the editorial "The Question of ROTC on Campus" on April 15, an objective clarification of the issues seems in order. It is inappropriate to place the blame for the Vietnam War mess on the military; that situation was essentially a political one.

It is essential to remember that ROTC is valuable to students, as well as to the military and national security.

The philosophic arguments against ROTC are groundless. Indeed, academia's traditional function is to inspire critical thinking about man and his society aloof from partisan considerations. Critical thinking is essential to our continued prosperity and forward progress. But alone, it is not enough. People must be able to apply their thinking to decision-making.

The philosophical arguments for ROTC are not cancelled by the practical and pedagogical arguments against it. Students in the program are trained to assimilate facts, make a critical analysis and estimate of the situation, and decide on appropriate courses of action.

Contrary to popular opinion, the university does have power of final approval and disapproval of the appointments and tenure of ROTC instructors, although the military makes the tentative assignments.

The armed services have as much right to well-educated college graduates as do the civilian occupations.

Clearly, ROTC is an efficient way of training prospective officers while in school at minimum cost to both the individual and the Defense Department. Do you want inefficiency to force defense costs up even more?

The April 15 anti-ROTC editorial is most biased. The ultimate aim of ROTC is not to train to kill. Rather, it is part of a defense system which seeks to keep our country free and prosperous. Continual preparedness saves many lives in the long run.

ROTC not only contributes to our defense program, but it provides an important element in the university's responsibility to produce an enlightened citizenry.

Smothers Brothers Still Have Voice

The following remarks are excerpts from remarks by Tom and Dick Smothers at the Annual Banquet of the American Society of Newspaper Editors on April 18, 1969.

"There is a deep division between the generations today—in one case we have a generation whose attitude is conditioned by a war 25 years ago in which right was clearly defined. In the other, we have a generation whose only experience of a nation in arms is this six-year war where right, at best, is ill defined and at worst, is not on our side.

"As you gentlemen have already deduced, the point that my brother and I would like to lay before you tonight is that one such arena (of communication), television, is in danger of being lost and that the only other arena of equal importance, the newspapers you gentlemen edit, has never really been available for this dialogue between the generations.

"Gentlemen—it is all too true, as Senator Pastore says, that there is terrible violence, and much of it adversely affects the young.

"Let me assure Senator Pastore, the young generation has come to abhor violence. . .whether men killing men or violence by default such as hunger in our cities. . .that all demographic studies show that they are watching television less and less. The violent fantasies being programmed are making their appeal primarily to those over 35.

"Many of today's leading young singers, poets, playwrights, musicians and producers refuse to work in the television medium. If these spokesmen for the young are denied access or sent in search of a more open medium, is it any wonder that the young viewer finds little relevant on the living room end of the tube?

"Isn't it time that television and newspapers alike stopped trying to homogenize controversy in terms of a one-value system?

"Gentlemen, a society which is comfortable with its media, which has insured itself against being shocked or disturbed by what it sees on television or reads in its newspapers, runs the risk of slow decay, or more frightening, violent revolution."

Rec Department Holding Shotokan Karate Class

Karate has arrived at UCSB. The Recreation Department is conducting a class in Shotokan karate on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays from 3:30 to 5 p.m. on the lawn in front of Robertson Gym. The class is open to all students, both men and women, and no previous experience or training is required.

John Flaig, UCSB student and second degree black belt, instructs the class, and stresses that "new students are welcome at any time." Flaig has been teaching Shotokan karate since 1963.

Karate may be defined, quite simply, as a weaponless means of self defense. It originated in China about 1400 years ago, founded by the same man who founded Zen Buddhism. Karate was not introduced to Japan until 1916 by Master Funakoshi.

Funakoshi developed the Shotokan school of karate, which was brought to the United States by Mr. Ohshima, a student of Funakoshi from 1947 to 1955. Ohshima, the first man to bring karate to the U.S., was Flaig's instructor.

Flaig noted that "by the end of the quarter, a student could be much more adept at protecting himself than he (or she) would be without karate."

IM WORLD

Intramurals, Male and Female

ANTHONY J. POPPIN

After two weeks of competition in Intramural softball, the class of the leagues is beginning to emerge, both in "A" and "B" division play. There are presently 11 undefeated teams, five of them in "A" Division, which should lead to some interesting races.

Phi Delta Theta and the Canadian Club share the top spot in the Cepeda League with identical 2-0 marks, while the Drysdale League sports a three-way deadlock between the GBTBs, the Sig Eps, and the Tarheels.

Favorites are the Canadian Club and the Tarheels, but by next week there should be a poll out to see if the refs agree.

In "B" Division, most leagues have one team at 2-0. The Aaron League has PFU on top, the Bonds League features Dawn of Man, and the Haller League is dominated by The Lords.

Barry's Ballers are 2-0 in the Mays League, as is Sequoia in the Williams League. A battle is shaping up between the Phi Psi No. 2 team and the Sacred Carrots in the Yaz League.

Volleyball results are insubstantial but by next week some semblance of order should appear. Action continues tonight in volleyball, and this afternoon Drysdale League softball competition is scheduled.

Information for rugby and coed canoeing will be ready Monday. Rosters are due Wednesday for coed softball and men's golf.

Due to a communications snafu, EL GAUCHO erroneously reported that women's badminton began last night—actually, it was coed badminton.

FEMALE FOOTNOTES

Women's flag football got underway Monday with the defending champion Strapp coasting to a 34-0 triumph over the Daughters of Odin. The Phi Sig Little Sisters edged Ribera, 12-0, and the Pi Phis nipped Kennesaw, 13-0.

Two dropouts forced a realignment of the Monday leagues so that there is now one six-team league. The Thursday league retains its two four-team league status, and the first two teams from each league will make the playoffs. In the Monday half, the top four teams will make it.

Playoffs will begin Monday, May 12, and will culminate the week of May 26.

In slowpitch softball, also beginning this week, The Strapp clubbed Chi Omega, 8-1; Sirena romped over the DGs, 12-4; The Roach smoked out Stanislaus, 14-3; and Somerset slugged out an 11-4 triumph over Alpha Chi Omega.

The roundrobin schedule for softball will lead to May 27, when first place finishers in the Dodger and Giant Leagues will clash for the title.

Coed softball and coed canoeing are the two events left for women this year; rosters are ready for softball now and will be for canoeing on Monday.

Coaching Minors

All candidates for a coaching minor must attend a meeting tonight in Robertson Gym 1125. Two meetings will be held, one at 4:30 p.m., and one at 7 p.m. Students may attend either meeting.

Further information may be obtained from Coach Breyfogle, RG 1006, 961-2180.

Urban Crisis Problem Studied

 "suburban mission" work—attempts by supervised student teams to share their knowledge about the urban crisis and contemporary racism with members of the dominant culture.

4. It would provide training for off-campus people in key community positions, mostly among persons in the tri-counties area. This training would emphasize skills needed to work with minority populations.

One obvious example, according to Gardner, would be the teaching of Spanish to social workers, teachers and clergymen whose work brings them into contact with Spanish-speaking people. Another such illustration would be the training of teachers to work in public schools which have significant minority populations.

Students serving on the committee are Booker Banks, Castulo De La Rocha, and Tim Weston.

Faculty members include Dr. David Brokensha of anthropology,

V.P. Hopefuls...

His view of A.S. executive officers includes the idea that they should lead the student body and its opinions rather than merely respond after the fact.

Analyzing his positive points in comparison to his two opponents, Knell believes that his background of experience in A.S. and in working with various and numerous organizations is the strongest factor in his favor.

Dr. Roger Davidson of political science, Dr. Steven Horvath, director of the Institute of Environmental Stress, Dr. Walter Mead of economics, Dr. David Messick of psychology, Dr. Harvey Molotch of sociology, Dr. Lyle Reynolds, dean of students, Dr. Stewart Shapiro of education, and Dr. R. J. Snow of political science.

E. L. Chalberg, manager of the UCSB Placement Office, is also a member. Consultants are Dr. David Gold, director of the Community and Organization Research Institute, Dr. Otey Scruggs of history, and Eugene Wheeler of University Extension.

Tosdal Seeking Rep Position

(Editor's note: Following are the responses of Tom Tosdal, candidate for rep-at-large, to questions on the United Front demands, ROTC, war-related research and athletics. Tosdal was inadvertently omitted from yesterday's report on the rep-at-large candidates.)

On U.F. demands: "I supported them as a member of Concerned Campus Community and still do. I believe that they are necessary in that they aim at academic reform in the education of both minorities and white students. However, implementation must be approached rationally with a view of what is possible to attain."

On ROTC: "The choice to join ROTC is up to the individual, but in order for ROTC to be a member of this academic community it must open its courses to truly academic and critical inquiry. If not, it should leave."

On war-related research: "I don't think the University should be subsidized by or in close contact with any defense agency. We must maintain the University's autonomy and its main function of education, social evaluation and change."

On athletics: "Students should have more say in the IAC (Intercollegiate Athletics

New UCen Suggestions

 informal atmosphere that Hess hopes to create.

The presence, or lack thereof, of these facilities will be determined by the amount of money available, which in turn is determined by student enrollment.

Hess hopes to employ a less expensive architecture in the new building, not only to save money, but also to attain a different atmosphere.

The present UCen was built with 40 year loans which are repaid by the six dollar UCen fee that students pay each quarter. Financing of UCen II will be done on a similar basis.

When Hess' committee has finished the project planning guide, it will be presented to the Campus Development Committee, headed by UCSB

Registrar Dr. Theodore Harder. Harder's committee will review the recommendations of the Miscellaneous Facility Subcommittee and then submit the plans to the Campus Planning Committee, under Chancellor Cheadle's charge.

At that time, plans will be finalized and action will be initiated to obtain the necessary loans. Tentative completion date for UCen II is now set for 1973.

Commission). We must work toward athletics on a self-paying basis and shift the funds away from intercollegiate athletics to more free recreational activities, intramurals, EOP and CAB."

Police to Probe Death of Student

Santa Barbara Sheriff's deputies are still investigating the Monday night death of a UCSB student in the College Inn residence hall in Isla Vista.

The body of Phillip Gillespie was discovered in his room about 1 a.m.

Captain Joel Honey of the Sheriff's office said Tuesday that "there are no opinions as to whether the man died of natural causes or not. We have no report at this time as to what the cause of death was."

Honey said the investigation had begun immediately after the body was discovered. He added that an autopsy may take as long as five months.
