Santa Barbara To Be Only U. C. Campus Offering I. E. Major

By BERNIE RUMACK

Provision Clarence Phelps released an announcement of extreme interest and importance to members of the industrial division and to the college as a whole. It concerns a communication from President Gordon Sproul stating that it was the decision of the university to restrict the four-year industrial arts training to Santa Barbara College. This will give the college the first "exclusive" or a monopoly of this area at the University of California campus.

This means that the industrial arts courses offered by any of the other campuses of the university will be dropped. The only other institutions offering similar courses, although on a much smaller scale, are Ohio State and Ohio State colleges. A nationwide survey conducted by graduate students of Ohio State University helped the facilities for industrial education on the four-year level to the greatest of any institute in the United States.

This announcement is of particular significance in light of the great expansion of the department and the program offered here. Almost the entire staff of that department has been on the campus since its inception and to anyone who is familiar with the personnel of the department, the full impact is not expected to be felt for some time, particularly until conditions return to normal.

Indicative of a return to normality is the fact that approximately forty new men are making plans to enroll in the department this spring. And there is no reason to believe that as many, or as many as five new men might not be enrolled next fall, according to Mr. Dr. Mohr, who released his discharge as a lieutenant in the navy, and will be on the faculty next semester. He will assist Professor Ericson with the counseling of students and their groups. These were:

Mr. John T. Porter of the printing department, who plans to enroll this fall. Pending his return, the print shop will operate on a limited scale. Mr. Ralph Noiz, who is now at the University of Ohio, working on his doctorate, will also return this fall to teach mechanics courses.

Due to the expansion, new instructors will be needed for the subjects of radio and electronics, electricity and industrial science, machine design and machine shop practice. In addition, there will be courses in aircraft pilot training, which will be open to both men and women. Agricultural courses will be added this fall.

The Labor-Maximzen Problem

... by Leonard Phillips

In the previous article of this column the author has given you the general ideological factors in the present manager-labor conflict — just a few of the economic and political ideas that America has come to believe, characterizes its "workplace." What affect the labor conflict will have on them and in what way they will be changed. Maxemzen concluded with a statement predicting all the old change which would be useless to ignore.

In this article 1 will endeavor to come down to the immediate questions facing us in this problem. These seem to be, essentially, two in number:

1. Can management afford a 30% increase in rate of pay without the need of a compensating rise in prices?

2. Is labor justified in its demand for this 30% increase in its rate of pay?

Beginning with number one, I will cover both of these questions and give you what I think are undoubtedly the right solutions. What first question really means, is whether labor or management is going to carry the weight of increased wages. With the information available we know the average American worker has only been able to save around two hundred dollars during the last two years, while the cost of living has increased by somewhat more than a third.

On the other hand, we know management also does not have any great amount of profit left over after taxes are paid. But it will be shown that by management using excise tax refunds and one one dollar sales tax on their labor unit, they can carry the weight of lower pay and still maintain a reasonable amount of profit. It is management who is in the position to Withstand the expense of lower pay and still maintain a reasonable amount of profit and suport the laborers. This is what I believe is the answer.

Beginning with the second part of this question it is, of course, and again, such an important consideration as General Motors refused to open its books and defend their policy by giving them. These are the officers of the public. However, from what information which has been made available to the government for tax evaluation, some authoritative economic experts of our government report in most cases profits have warranted an increase in rate of pay without a corresponding increase in prices. There is, of course, a good example of what I mean in the tobacco industry which has made annually over 150 million dollars and, at an early period in the war, was paying only 5% of this in the form of wages.

Regarding the second question, I propose to explain why labor is justified in its wage demands. The most important fact in regard to this question is, we must remember that labor is not demanding an increase in wages over the amount they have received during the war. They are demanding on an increase in rate of pay to compensate for a decrease in rate of pay to compensate for a short work week. The results of this short work week are well known, and in the form of wages. The intramural tennis tournament is now reaching its final bit of competition. Before the rainy season, Terry Dearborn would like to have all players connect with their opponents and end the season. To that end, he has asked me to extend this invitation to all of those Gauchos interested in tennis. The matches are scheduled for this Sunday, afternoon and are trying to get those service ends out of their heads. Bob Elliot who is trying to get the team started and produce some offense before the season opens has asked me to extend this invitation to all of those Gauchos interested in playing tennis. Commander Paul Jones will join us on the court.
