If Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning had AT&T's 60% and 40% discounts, it would have been a terrible loss for English literature.

And of course, she wouldn't have had to restrict her feelings to a mere sonnet's length, either.

After all, you can always think of one more way to tell someone you love them when you're on the phone.

Let us count the ways you can save. Just call weekends till 5pm Sundays, or from 11pm to 8am, Sunday through Friday, and you'll save 60% off AT&T's Day Rate on your state-to-state calls.

Call between 5pm and 11pm, Sunday through Friday, and you'll save 40% on your state-to-state calls.

So when you're asked to choose a long distance company, choose AT&T. Because with AT&T's 60% and 40% discounts, you can satisfy your heart's desire without exhausting your means.

The Party Cindy Gall

She often wondered what she was doing there, in the smoke filled room, staring at the ceiling, pretending to be listening to some pretentious bastard spouting off about his latest philosophy on life. She was bored, more bored than she could remember being in her short lifetime. Still, she remained there, drawing on a Dunhill Menthol cigarette, trying to look intellectual, but only succeeding in looking meek, out of place, out of mind, a fixture in these unfamiliar surroundings in which she felt unbearable, uncomfortable, but still remained, being too helpless to do anything other than sit there, crossing and uncrossing her legs, puffing nervously on her cigarette.

A man in polyester pants and an Indian gauze shirt suddenly plopped himself down on the couch next to her, splashing his drink on her new flowered pants. She stared at him out of the corner of her eyes, giving him her "get lost buddy" look, specially designed for jerks like this. He didn't seem to notice and began talking to her, telling her all about his life as a big Hollywood producer. She didn't look at him but he continued.

She felt like emptying her drink on his lap and leaving this loser to babble on about himself but something held her back, something about his manner of speaking fascinated her, the way his thin lips jerked on his face like a rubber band, ready to burst, the tension causing a crease on his inner lip, dividing it into two taut sections. She seemed transfixed by this ceaseless movement, his words becoming a blur in her mind, her thoughts centering on those strange lips, wondering what it would like to kiss him and shuddering at the thought.

She nervously dragged on her cigarette but it had gone out, she had forgotten to smoke it. She reached for her purse and extracted the gold lighter which she had bought in France. She carefully lit her cigarette, hoping the man with the lips had noticed the lighter. He didn't. He continued to talk, moving those hideously thin lips, pausing occasionally to take a sip from his scotch and soda, not seeming to be aware of her presence.

She finished her cigarette and extinguished it in the ashtray. She picked up her purse and walked out the front door. She didn't look back, leaving the man and his blur of words to continue on without her. It was 11:00 and it was time to go home, her family was expecting her.

Perhaps she would tell her sister about the man with the thin lips. Then again, maybe she shouldn't. Her family didn't understand her lifestyle.
