Unity Day Effort

Student Leaders Visit Capitol

By ELLI VEIDMAN
Nexus Reporter

In an effort to show students are united on issues concerning higher education, over 100 student leaders from state and community colleges, and the University of California met with state legislators in Sacramento Monday.

Student lobbyists and leaders from the three educational institutions of the state met to show "solidarity, unity, and mutual concern regarding funding to higher education" and to express collectively that students have a "strong voice" on the issues, Associate Director of the U.C. Student Lobby Caroline Tesche said.

Associate Director of the U.C. Student Lobby Jim Lofgren said the day was a success as student leaders were able to show they are "at the capital in full force" by meeting with more than half the representatives from the 120 legislative offices.

Maintaining the quality of education within the three California educational systems was the most crucial issue addressed at Unity Day, UCSB Student Lobby Director Robijn Van Giesen said.

These systems have been on the decline for the last decade due to increasing budget cuts, Van Giesen said. An effect of the cuts has been increased pressure on students to "make up for the inadequacies in the budget." This has led to higher education becoming less accessible to lower income and minority students, Van Giesen added.

Students are "tired of bearing the brunt of the budget on their backs" and budget cuts are causing a decline in the levels of enrollment in the state's higher education system, Van Giesen said.

Student Unity Day demonstrated that the 1.8 million students in the three systems are "a force to be reckoned with" and are unified in their concern for maintaining the quality of higher education, Van Giesen said.

Students as well as legislators should do everything possible to ensure access for those individuals qualified to be in the university, he said adding unless "we come together as students we will continue to be viewed by the legislature as a convenient way for carrying the budget inadequacies."

Van Giesen said the U.C. is in jeopardy of losing its reputation as one of the best public higher education institutions in the nation due to such factors as low faculty retention. Faculty members are seeking employment at other universities that offer better salaries, living conditions and research facilities, he said.

Increased student registration fees have put "more and more on the students' back," Metropolitan Lobby Director for the UCSB Lobby Annex Doug Friednash said.

Over the past year, in community colleges alone, there has been an 8 percent drop in overall enrollment after implementation of a $50 student fee, he said.

Currently, 50 percent of educational fees paid by U.C. students goes to fund the Financial Aid program. The governor's proposed budget would relieve this financial burden from students by applying $7 million in state funding for Financial Aid, Friednash said.

Van Giesen noted this is merely a proposed budget, (Please turn to pg.6, col.1)

State May Provide Funds For Research

By JACQUELYN AFFONSO
Sacramento Correspondent

More high technology research facilities on the University of California campuses may be the result of legislation introduced Tuesday by Senate Majority Leader John Garamendi (D-Walnut Grove).

Senate Bill 1504 provides the university with a "funding mechanism" to acquire new buildings and renovate old ones for organized research in high technology, including micro-electronics, biotechnology and computer science.

The legislation would authorize the State Public Works Board to sell revenue bonds to the public to fund construction of the facilities. Under the revenue bond lease purchase mechanism the university would rent the new facilities from the board until a specified time of purchase, Garamendi's field representative Matt Liebermann said.

Garamendi said at a press conference that he authored the bill to "provide U.C. with the funds to remain competitive."

"California cannot survive in the future without addressing the high technology concerns we have," he said.

The U.C. Lobby was not aware of the bill and declined to comment.

The bill also states the legislature's intent to secure private and federal funding through the state budget for support services to new facilities. This would require the legislature to recognize the funding needs of the university system to maintain these facilities through the budget process, Masako Dolan, consultant to Garamendi, said.

These services include fund planning grants, faculty salary supplements and graduate student fellowships for research projects.

Senator Nicholas Petris (D-Alameda) sponsored similar legislation which passed in both houses last September. His bill authorizes the sale of revenue bonds by the State Public Works Board to both research and education facilities, while Garamendi's bill specifically applies to organized research facilities.

The bill, 1504, was one of nine presented in a legislative package aimed at boosting technology, trade and tourism in California.

"The package of legislation we have today addresses both short-term research needs through direct support to university research as well as structural support for industry-sponsored research," Senator Art Torres (D-Los Angeles) said at the press conference.

Bill Will Provide For Collective Bargaining

By JACQUELYN AFFONSO
Sacramento Correspondent

Assemblymember Tom Bates (D-Alameda) agreed to author legislation Tuesday which would mandate collective bargaining rights for U.C. student employees.

Bates' decision to author the bill was a result of a meeting Monday between his aides, the U.C. Student Lobby and the Berkeley graduate student employee union, the Association of Graduate Student Employees.

"He (Bates) recognizes that the student employees have a right to be represented under a collective bargaining agreement," Bates' Legislative Assistant Dion Aroner said.

The legislation would authorize individual U.C. campuses to form graduate and undergraduate student employee unions which would be formally recognized by the university administration and granted collective bargaining rights.

The bill would also clarify "ambiguous" language in the 1978 Higher Education Employer — Employee Relations Act.

"The university has interpreted HEERA to deny student employees rights to collective bargaining," AGSE executive committee member Helen Schwartz said.

Both the U.C. lobby and AGSE were "pleased" that Bates will introduce the bill.

"Bates is the first person we selected and we're really pleased he's going to carry it," U.C. Student Lobby Director Ron

10% Of County's Population Affected By Alcoholism

By SHARON TAYLOR
Nexus Reporter

More than 30,000 alcoholics and problem drinkers reside in Santa Barbara County, according to the final report on alcoholism and rehabilitation services published

Santa Barbara County Board of Supervisors Chair David Yager said.

The jury made recommendations to exclude private rehabilitation centers from county funding, initiate an effective than seeking professional help, according to the report.

The report reveals more than 10,000 arrests for drunkenness were made in Santa Barbara County last year. The average cost of booking and discharging each case was $125.

Presently the county pays for assistance given to alcoholics and the damage incurred by the community. "The new report will save the county money from the jail expense and keep officers from being taken away from their other duties," Davis said.

"Most of the changes in the report are administrative adjustments and do not have any effect on us," California Highway Patrol Public Affairs Officer Roger Runjaback said. "There is no different way the policemen arrest the problem drinkers."

One problem with county-funded alcoholism programs is lack of patient follow-up. There is no research done to find out if the centers are useful to the community, Yager said.

Though "most of the providers (of alcohol counseling and rehabilitation) are successful in their own way," the centers are not required to report whether or not the discharged client of six months ago is sober today, Davis explained.

"Alcoholism is a sincere, serious problem," Davis said. The jury viewed the problem and discovered its urgency.

To assist the people who do not show signs of continual drunkenness, a detoxification center with a system where people can go to "dry out" was recommended, Davis added.

Auto Workers Vote To Continue Strike

Long Beach — Despite threats that they may lose their jobs, workers at McDonnell Douglas Long Beach plant voted by a nearly three-quarters margin Tuesday to continue their three and a half month strike.

"By 72 percent they voted to reject the company's final offer," said Jean Gregory, seniority committeemember for the United Auto Workers local 148, which has been on strike since last Oct. 17.

Miami — One of the FBI's 10 most wanted fugitives, charged with a mass murder in Long Beach, Calif., indicated to a federal magistrate Tuesday that he intends to fight extradition to that state.

The man was arrested by the FBI Monday under the name George Bridgette. But he told U.S. Magistrate Charlene Sorrentino that his name is Odell Davis.

According to a federal complaint, the magistrate said, Bridgette is charged in California with four counts of murder and five counts of assault with a deadly weapon.

Los Angeles — The Justice Department sued one of the nation's largest tax-protest groups Tuesday, contending "false" advice by Your Heritage Protection Association cost federal coffers at least $60 million.

"As a result of the YHPA's activities ... between 1978 and 1980 there has been an underreporting of federal taxes of approximately $60 million to $80 million," the Justice Department alleged in a prepared statement.

Sacramento — Another baking mix was being withdrawn from California grocery shelves Tuesday following state discovery of "significantly high" levels of cancer-causing EDB pesticides in a Dromedary corn bread package.

The state Health Department confirmed that Dromedary brand corn bread mix was being voluntarily withdrawn from grocers' shelves statewide by Nabisco after state inspectors discovered 5,400 parts per billion of EDB in a package purchased in the Los Angeles area.

Previews Reveal $925 Billion Budget

Washington — Congressional leaders got a preview Tuesday of the $925 billion fiscal 1985 budget President Reagan officially sends to Capitol Hill on Wednesday. The legislators said they were not surprised by the election-year package, even by all the red ink — $180 billion worth.

"The budget deficit will be larger than we would like it to be. But not as large as some had predicted and many feared," Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said after he and other Republican congressional leaders emerged from a White House budget briefing with Reagan.

Those who attended budget briefings Tuesday confirmed anonymously that the spending package calls for spending $925.5 billion during the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1, including more than $300 billion on the military, with a deficit of just over $180 billion.

Chicago — President Reagan, in an indirect attack on Democrats in general and Walter Mondale in particular, said Tuesday that opponents who attack his administration's tax program are "trying to appeal to greed and envy."

"The finger-pointers and hand-wringers of today were the policy-makers of yesterday," the president said, "and they gave us economic stagnation and double-digit inflation."

New York — Bishop John O'Connor, named to head the nation's fourth-largest Roman Catholic archdiocese, vowed Tuesday that the fight to stop abortion and "defend human life" would "permeate everything I attempt to do" as archbishop of New York.

Shultz In El Salvador

San Salvador, El Salvador — Secretary of State George Shultz said Tuesday he was "proud to stand together" with the Salvadoran government, and he assailed violence by both leftist guerrillas and rightist death squads.

Arriving at San Salvador's airport, Shultz called the leftist insurgency a "totalitarian" movement that "depends on outside support" for its survival.

"Our enemies are weak," he said. "They represent forces that are foreign to this hemisphere and offer only totalitarianism."

Shultz asserted that "the tactics of totalitarian terror and the death squads have no place in a democracy."

Shultz's visit to El Salvador, the first stop of a five-nation tour of Latin America and the Caribbean, was seen as a bid to boost the morale of the Salvadoran government attempting to come to grips with the problems of uninterrupted warfare and a faltering economy.

Beirut, Lebanon — U.S. warplanes shrieked over Beirut on Tuesday to reconnoiter positions of militiamen who had shelled American Marines, and a spokesman for the Shiite militia said there were strict orders to avoid new clashes.

Diplomatic activity intensified in the Syrian capital of Damascus, meanwhile, and there were reports that officials were seeking ways to replace U.S. and other Western troops in Lebanon with U.N. peacekeeping forces.

Cape Town, South Africa — South Africa announced Tuesday it was "disengaging" its forces in Angola, calling it a first step toward a cease-fire in the 17-year bush war in South West Africa.

Prime Minister P.W. Botha told Parliament the disengagement was based on assurances received from the United States during a visit last week by Chester Crocker, assistant secretary of state for African affairs.

He would not disclose those assurances and would not define "disengagement" precisely.

Sarajevo, Yugoslavia — Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee, said Tuesday that all the Communist countries are getting ready to send their athletes to the Olympic Games at Los Angeles.

"I have visited all the Socialist and Communist countries in the last month," Samaranch said at a news conference, "and I can assure you that they are all busy preparing their athletes for Los Angeles."

"Provided the Olympic Charter is observed, I am sure they will all be there. And I am confident the Charter will be honored, because we have had a letter from President Reagan giving us that pledge."

war, was bishop of Scranton, Pa., for seven months before Pope John Paul II named him to succeed Cardinal Terence Cooke, who died Oct. 6.

Cape Canaveral — Five astronauts flew here Tuesday for final training for the 10th space shuttle mission, to include the first space walk without a lifeline.

One astronaut who will use a jet-powered backpack to walk in space said the flight will "open new doors and new frontiers" for servicing satellites and building a permanent space station endorsed by President Reagan.

Washington — The Reagan administration plans to use money from the 1985 federal budget to beef up the border patrol and stop the record flow of illegal aliens from Mexico, Justice Department officials said Tuesday.

California Will Charge Tuition To Students At Community Colleges

By BILL DIEPENBROCK
Nexus Staff Writer

A $50 community college tuition per semester was recently approved by the California State Legislature, ending a 77 year-old policy of free education in the state.

The bill was accompanied by a $96.5 million compromise allocation to replace education funds cut by Governor George Deukmejian last September. This allocation will restore college funding to its original 1983-84 budget level. Currently the system is operating with less funds than in 1982-83.

The $50 tuition will be charged to full-time students only. Those taking less than six units a semester will pay five dollars a unit.

"It is unfortunate that we will now have this mandatory fee," Santa Barbara City College President Peter MacDougal said. "But it is a necessary action. There no longer seems to be the support needed for a policy of this nature."

MacDougal is disappointed to see the policy of UCSB director of Admissions William J. Villa opposes the fee because "it has been a sacred right in California to have tuition free education. It is a value the state has had. In return, the state has received an educated citizenry."

who transfer to four-year campuses.

"Although $50 seems like a miniscule amount, to one without any source of financial aid it can become a burden. It will have an impact on disadvantaged applicants who may want to transfer to a four-year college," he explained.

"We've got a particular problem within the U.C. system in attracting community college students. Only 10 percent of minority students transfer from a two-year school to a four-year. This fee compounds the effort this campus is trying to make," Villa said.

UCSB is attempting to create an "intersegmental agreement" with the local community college district, Villa said.

free post-secondary education change, but added "apparently it is a policy whose time has passed. I'm glad it's finally resolved."

The $100 yearly fee will absorb the existing $32 fee charged by the college system for field trips and other needed expenses, MacDougal said.

"The problem with a fee like this is that once it is established there is a temptation to raise it each year. It sets a precedent to increase the fees to balance the budgetary needs," he said.

Villa believes the fee will hamper the already low number of minority students

Women in Politics

Lobbyist Encourages Involvement

By BILL DIEPENBROCK
Nexus Staff Writer

Encouraging women to become involved in the political process was the focus of University of California Student Lobby Associate Director Caroline Tesche's lecture given Monday at UCSB as part of a "Women Taking Action" conference co-sponsored by the U.C. Action Network and Associated Students.

The lecture was the second of a two-part conference directed at involving women in political action. The first lecture dealt with overcoming the fears of public speaking.

Tesche, a UCSB graduate, spoke on the uniqueness and difficulty of being a woman in the political process.

"The only thing that can be done," Tesche said, "is for women to take action. I came here to share perspectives. What we feel and think as women and the action we take in the legislature for women's rights is important."

"When I first went to Sacramento I was terrified. It is not a feminist's kind of place. There aren't too many women in the legislature. In an assembly of 80 members, there are 12 women. In the 40-member Senate, there are only two women," she said.

"This is supposed to be California, the home of advanced rights and progressive action. There is a serious imbalance in legislature and it will be a long time until we reach equality in the legislative process," she said.

Describing her initial view of the legislature as a "zoo" when she was learning the process, Tesche said the only way anything can get done is through self-expression. She explained that to create a bill and make it law, a lobby must first formulate an idea, and then ask a "friendly" legislator to author it. After

Body Of Drowning Victim Found

The body of a 19-year-old Los Angeles woman who disappeared early Saturday morning from a Del Playa party was found Sunday afternoon in the Pacific Ocean off the coast of Isla Vista.

The exact cause and reason for the death is still under investigation, Santa Barbara County Sheriff's Public Information Officer Chuck Gourley said, but it is assumed to be an accidental drowning.

"Janet Mary Witte was attending a party on the 6600 block of Del Playa Friday evening. At around 1:30 Saturday morning her family and friends were getting ready to leave and noticed she was missing," Gourley explained.

Witte's family and friends searched for her until Sunday morning. "The Fish and Game Department discovered the body Sunday at noon about 300 feet off the coast of Santa Barbara," Gourley said.

The party began inside of the house and progressed to the oceanside backyard for a campfire. Witte apparently fell from the cliffs in the backyard, Gourley said. "An autopsy was performed Monday and the cause of death was determined as salt water drowning. She also had signs of contusions that would result from falling off of the cliffs," he explained.

Witte was in town for a family reunion. She was staying at a local hotel with family members, Gourley said.

Turning A Life Around

Once there was a young man named Thomas. He was from the Midwest but was never so conscious of it until he went to college in Southern California. When asked the standard question "Where are you from?" he replied "I hail from the breadbasket." Usually this reply was greeted with unspoken contempt until gradually he stopped saying "breadbasket" and let "hail" slip out only after a few drinks. Tom drank as much as the average college freshman, letting loose at keg parties after a week of classes and track practice.

Although a foreigner, Tom wasn't susceptible to most of the problems of assimilation. He was tall with blonde hair, and popular for being on the prestigious track team. His teammates liked to tell the story of how fast he was.

After practice one day they went to the cliffs to watch the sun set over the ocean. Andrew planned to meet a co-ed at Campbell Hall at 8:00 but went with them anyway. He forgot about the date until the "10 of" bell rang. None of the runners brought watches, but they assumed it was 6:50. After asking a passing jogger on the beach Tom discovered it was five of eight. He immediately took off in the wrong direction, running toward Campus Point around the lagoon. Everybody was yelling at him to stop but he was running as if the devil was chasing him. As they retold the story in the locker room, Tom was at Campbell Hall before the first stroke of eight, but the girl stood him up. Although this wasn't true, he arrived out of breath and sweating, much to the chagrin of his date.

During the winter Tom's performance in school and track declined noticeably. He became increasingly detached and sullen around his teammates. They attributed his changed nature to "Freshman blues." The track coach wanted to find out what was troubling him without adding any pressure. Tom didn't have any close friends to confide in, and only through his fellow teammates did the coach discover he was mumbling about a "reality war" and "other beings taking over my body."

The coach decided to confront him before the next practice. During their conversation Tom said he had decided to give all the glory of running to God, and had no problems of any importance. The coach knew of many reborn athletes who credited Christ with turning their lives and careers around. Perhaps Tom would start running at the level he was capable, he thought.

In the spring quarter Tom's parents flew out to visit. His stern family disapproved of sudden changes, which temporarily curbed his religious zeal. His father thought it funny that Tom found God in California. "Just a passing phase" he told his wife.

Tom started attending bible studies regularly and went to church every Sunday. Everywhere he went he carried a bible with "The Way" written on the cover. "Here is truth," he said. While Tom grew increasingly devout, his running suffered considerably. Only his four-year scholarship was keeping him on the team. He no longer traveled to away meets, running only at large home tournaments. He continued to practice and at times there were flashes of his old ability, but they were only flashes, as if he consciously held back on account of the vanity of his effort.

After the final track meet of the season, Tom told the coach he couldn't run for the team any longer. "My heart isn't in it," he said. The next fall he enrolled in a multi-denominational seminary in North Carolina.

Eating Disorders

A Negative Self-Image

By MARY YANCEY and KELEIGH BURNETT

The week of Jan. 30 — Feb. 4 is Eating Disorders Awareness Week, co-sponsored by the UCSB Counseling Center, Student Health Service, A.S. Commission on the Status of Women, and the Women's Center. The purpose of the week is to educate students, faculty and staff about eating disorders — what they are, how they develop, and where to go for help. Information will be provided through a) a series of articles in the Nexus, b) pamphlets and other resources available at the UCEN from 12-1 during the week, c) films and discussions at Cafe Interim on Thursday at 4:00 p.m., and d) a conference for the UCSB community February 4th in the UCEN Pavilion from 12-4 p.m.

Scene. Judy comes to UCSB from her hometown in Northern California, where she was on the debate team, student council, and enjoyed the company of quite a few friends. She moves into an on-campus residence hall where she shares a room with Janet. Janet is typically cute and seems to have an easy time with acquiring new friends at UCSB. She is rather tall and quite thin, with masses of blonde hair. Outwardly, she appears to be the "California Girl".

What happens next? As the girls share the experience of being freshman women at UCSB together, they form a close friendship, in which they share values and concerns. As often happens in close relationships, the persons involved come to expect that they should strive to be like one another. For instance, Judy, although she never felt bad about her body before meeting Janet, may begin to think she won't be acceptable until she is as thin as Janet. So, after dinner almost every night of the week, Judy finds herself in the bathroom forcing herself to vomit her food, in an effort not to gain any weight.

It may sound unlikely, but similar situations may occur more often than we realize. Often, by comparing themselves to friends, or even an "ideal" magazine model, women create a negative self-image, and use weight control as a way to improve it. The rationale behind losing weight becomes clouded easily for many women. Instead of being a reasonable goal, weight loss becomes an obsession. They may feel that if losing an initial 10 pounds makes them feel good, then losing another 20 will make them feel just great. Of course, at this point they've lost sight of some simple facts. Not every person's basic body structure is the same, so it is not possible nor desirable for most women to have a model-like figure. Permanent and healthy weight control is a function of both diet and exercise, and must be approached based on an individual's bodily needs and abilities. It is equally important to realize that one's worth as a person goes past the physical aspect; as they say "beauty is only skin deep."

Living in the residence halls it is easy to get caught up in the process of comparing oneself to others, especially on a physical basis. Pressures and expectations may be compounded as a result of large numbers of women living so closely together. It becomes very important to maintain a rational outlook on dieting and weight control. They are not permanent solutions to a negative self-image.

For more complete information on dieting, peer pressure, and eating disorders, contact the UCSB Counseling Center at 961-2781 or the Student Health Service at 961-2289. For students on campus, your Resident Assistant may be of help in directing you to an appropriate source of information.

Reagan: False Claims And Few Accomplishments

So Ronald Reagan will run again. After his State of the Union address last week, with its glory-charged review of the last three years and its demonstrative agenda for the next four, any other decision would have been surprising. Now that the president has announced, voters across the political spectrum can, in all fairness, judge Reagan's real success against the accomplishments he claims to have made.

President Reagan clearly tried in his address before a joint session of Congress to beat his opposition to the punch. Touching on nearly every issue over which the Democrats could challenge him this year, the president claimed success where there often has merely been an effort at preventing failure.

He called the North Atlantic Treaty Organization strong, even as it is visibly divided. He characterized the Marines' presence in Lebanon as helping the Lebanese people "break their cycle of despair," even as American Marines have perpetuated the conflict there by remaining engaged in Lebanon's civil war. And, he said the world's "future is best decided by ballots, not bullets," even as his administration continues to support military solutions in Nicaragua and the Caribbean.

At home, Reagan took credit for the economic recovery, in reality brought about more by the Federal Reserve Board's monetary policies than by the administration's tax cuts and deficit spending. He called for more cuts in social programs, but asserted later in the speech that his America offered "hope by feeding the hungry." The president urged bipartisan cooperation to reduce the deficit, refusing at the same time to consider substantive cuts in the defense budget.

Underlying the president's improbable assertions of foreign and domestic policy success are two certainties. One is that Reagan has, over the past three years, defied the odds and strengthened the American presidency. The other is that he has done little else.

In 1980, Ronald Reagan was elected because of popular dissatisfaction with President Carter's lack of strong leadership. After the Vietnam debacle of the Johnson presidency, Watergate and Carter's vacillations, Reagan faced historical odds against reviving public faith in the executive branch. Yet he has achieved the turnaround, not to any great degree, but enough to quiet the universal discontent that expelled his predecessors. Should Reagan be re-elected, his next four years will judge how permanent that reversal really is.

Whether discontent with Carter was also a mandate for an alteration in the domestic structure built over the last 50 years, however, is debatable. A spate of domestic reforms proposed by the new administration in 1981 were intended to modify and ultimately demolish the New Deal-Great Society framework. To say that those policies have been unsuccessful is a great understatement.

New Federalism was intended to transfer tax and spending burdens to the states. Enterprise zones, to be developed in the inner cities, were supposed to encourage private sector urban development. Tuition tax credits were designed to provide parents with an alternative to the eroding public school system. All three proposals bogged down because, as it turns out, the change promised by these programs is not so welcome after all.

The same pattern of proposal and failure applies to foreign policy. Reagan talked in 1980 about restoring international faith in America, standing up to the Soviets by dropping SALT II, and strengthening the NATO alliance. In 1984, the United States, according to Reagan, has faced up to Soviet aggression and the European alliance is more unified than when Carter was in the White House. But his assertions are misleading.

As the United Nations can attest, international faith in this country remains fundamentally changed from the days before non-alignment; and will probably stay that way. America's greatest Third World critic when Reagan took office, Iran, remains so today: the administration believes the Khomeini regime is responsible for the Beirut truck bombings. There is restored faith among other nations, however, following the Grenada invasion and the Lebanon crisis, in this country's resolve to use military force to achieve ends for which diplomacy has been abandoned. That faith is a mixed blessing, at best.

Contrary to the president's claims, NATO remains divided. Superficially, the Western democracies are amicable, but underneath the comity lie the same fissures which led to the failure of the Reagan administration's attempt to impose uniform sanctions against construction of the Soviet natural gas pipeline. Recently, these divisions have arisen in the controversy over the deployment of cruise and Pershing II Euromissiles and over the U.S. failure to negotiate arms control agreements with the Soviet Union.

If standing up to the Soviets means bluster verbal attacks on their ideology, foreign policy and economy, then Reagan has certainly stood up. But if it means working for an arms control agreement despite Soviet intransigence and conducting talks to secure peace, the president has been sitting down for three years.

Ten months before the general election, the conventional wisdom is that Reagan will emerge the winner in a close race with former Vice President Walter Mondale. Either candidate will confront a policy vacuum of Reagan's making, full of false claims and few accomplishments. One of them will have to do something about it, or the next four years will be merely a repeat of the clumsy policymaking of the last four.

however. "We will have to sweat it out until June." Even if the governor's budget is put into effect, the U.C. Regents may still act autonomously regarding the possible $70 fee reduction as a result of the new budget.

Friednash said the fee reduction is a step in the right direction, but "it doesn't come close to restoring what has been cut budgetarily in the last three years." With the budget reduction included, the net increase in U.C. student fees for the past three years is still $180, he said. The CSU has experienced a more gradual fee increase, he added.

"Crises and conflict tend to activate and motivate people," Van Giesen said. Students are coming to see that these budget cuts "can't go any further without causing the system to crumble." He said when pushed past the limit, students would begin to leave the U.C. system and most likely it would develop into an "elitist institution."

Lecturer Discredits UFO Sightings And Defines Space Phenomena

By BOB WITTENBERG
Nexus Reporter

UFO spottings, star formations, and the idea of life on other planets were the focus of Santa Barbara Natural History Museum lecturer Ernest Underhay's discussion at the Gladwin Planetarium, Sunday.

Underhay's presentation, entitled "UFOs, Sundogs, and Other Mysteries" included a brief mapping of the January sky's visible planets and star formations, as well as discussion on the validity of UFO sightings.

Many UFO sightings can be attributed to "natural occurrences" in space, Underhay said. He explained many times the wind will blow the earth's atmosphere around, include rocket streams, sun halos and even unusual cloud formations. Underhay said many of the more common events such as sunsets or moonsets can be deceiving. "I have seen some sunsets, that when refracted by the clouds, seem to split the sun in half," Underhay said.

Although UFO sightings are often unexplainable, Underhay discussed the difficulty in proving the sightings. "The only way the UFO spottings can be validated is if they are recorded or repeatable events, and even with our technology that is difficult to find," he said.

The idea of life on other planets was also touched upon in the presentation. "Many of the elements that exist between stars are common to us on earth," Underhay said, creating a "prism-like" effect on our perception of the night sky.

"Some of the brighter stars in the sky have often been called in by people as UFOs, due to the fact that they saw them on a particularly hazy night," Underhay said. Even planets that are exceptionally bright this time of year have been mistaken as unidentified objects. "Somewhere around 60 percent of the sightings can be located to be the planet Venus on a hazy night," Underhay said.

Meteors and other burning matter in space are also commonly mistaken as UFOs, he added.

Other phenomena which are often identified incorrectly

"although we know by the fact that a human could not survive in space." Underhay cited one of the moons around Jupiter as having the best possibilities to sustain life, according to scientists. But, he said, "even that is far from being substantiated."

Underhay has been the planetarium lecturer for the Santa Barbara Natural History Museum since 1975 and also teaches courses outside the planetarium to both students and private groups. The Natural History Museum will run UFOs, Sundogs, and Other Mysteries" on Sundays through March 4 at both 1:30 and 4 p.m.

California Children Need Shots

If you have a child born in 1982, there is a good chance he or she needs an immunization right now, advises Lawrence Hart, Director of Health Care Services.

"California studies have shown that two out of three toddlers are behind in their immunizations. Although most children receive immunizations during their first year, they need additional ones during their second year to protect them from the dangerous childhood diseases. It seems parents don't realize the toddler immunizations are just as important as those the child receives as an infant," Dr. Hart reported.

In an effort to call attention to this problem, February has been proclaimed Toddler Immunization Month in California, he said. Physicians will be reminding parents, and county health departments will hold clinics for toddler immunizations during February. Immunization for children of all ages will be available at these clinics free of charge.

If any of your children need immunizations, Dr. Hart suggests you call your doctor or the County Health Department to schedule an immunization visit during February. Don't leave your child unprotected.

UCSB Shows Talent

Comedy Expanding On Campus

By SHEILA HOLENDA
Nexus Reporter

Because students have responded to Tuesday comedy nights at the pub with standing room only crowds, the event will become standard entertainment, A.S. Program Board Special Events Chair Nailah Malik said.

In addition to the professional shows, "an amateur comedy night is now in the works. Though it will be slightly different from the typical form of two stand-up acts presented at each show, it nevertheless promises to be just as entertaining, if not more so.

"I detect that this campus is burgeoning with good comedians who are just dying to showcase their talent, and the comedy night setting is a perfect testing ground for them," Malik said. Amateur night should get underway sometime this quarter, she added. Applications will be available at the Program Board office in the UCen.

Comedy Night was initiated last year by then-Program Board Special Events Chair Erika Logan, and has been popular ever since.

"So far, response has been booming. I attribute our success to the fact that we draw upon the L.A. comedy circuit to get our talent. A lot of these comedians have been on TV; some on Saturday Night Live," Malik said.

The program is good for UCSB students because, "it's free, it's fun and entertaining, and the comedians are in sync with our mentality, our tastes," Malik said. "They talk about things that are of interest to students."

Most people in the audience at Comedy night seemed to agree. "It's great. This is the third time I've come and I always have a blast," Gina Thrasher, a junior at UCSB, said.

One recently featured comedian was Bob Zany, who frequently performs on Los Angeles-based radio station KLOS, and writes material for one of the station's disc jockeys, Frazier Smith. Zany, born and raised in the L.A. area, was a big hit with the UCSB audience.

Now 22, Zany has been performing professional comedy acts since he was 17, and says he was always the class clown in high school. He started his act at talent shows and at L.A.'s popular nightclub, The Comedy Store.

"I've been lucky to get some help from radio — KLOS," Zany said. "You have to be naturally funny. You have to be funny as a kid," to be a successful comedian. As class clown, "I had no choice in the matter," he added. "My all-time goal is to be the next Steve Martin — to be able to fill big halls like he does."

Zany talked about the ups and downs of his profession. "I'm lucky; I'm at the point where it (the act) works about 90 percent of the time now. You have to take the bad with the good. Everybody has an off night once in a while."

In addition to comedy night, the Program Board sponsors free music at the Pub. "The area lends itself really well to activities, and the Pub made it all the better. It's a great place to do things," Doug Birch, UCen Activities Chair, said. Two years ago, Program Board began having regular Thursday night shows with local bands, and "it has since become a tradition," he added.

Unlike the comedians, who are usually from L.A., local bands are not paid, Birch said. Because the comedians are fairly expensive, comedy night is held only every other Tuesday. On non-comedy Tuesdays, Program Board pipes in music from KCSB and free albums are given away. Friday nights during happy hour will soon feature jazz bands, Birch said.

"It's definitely top-quality entertainment, and the only reason we're able to get it is because of the students," Birch said.

The pub is operated, maintained and financially supported by the Alumni Association. Program Board receives its funding from the $2.35 every student pays toward its fund in registration fees, Birch said. This money is used to pay for acts, office expenses and employees, he said.

this, the lobby must follow the bill, testify as needed and inform those voting on the measure of its content and intent.

"We follow 70 bills each session and in the past two years the lobby has helped create about eight bills. Currently we are negotiating on our first bill which will affect women in the U.C. system," Tesche said.

The proposed measure would increase the size of existing women's studies programs by creating nine new positions. The lobby is attempting to get an author for the bill.

Increased communication is needed to further women's issues such as this, Tesche said. "Networking is important" and women should "act together and set up communication, both locally and state-wide," Tesche explained.

UCAN Director Holly Gold agreed, saying "bringing women together is really important. We should work together both on campus and throughout the state to get our views known."

Newsletters, conferences and letter writing were ideas discussed as possible methods to accomplish that goal. Gold stressed the open structure of UCAN as one accessible way for women to get involved.

Book Collecting

Cash Awarded in Annual Contest

By SUZANNE AVELLANO
Nexus Reporter

A total of $1,000 in cash will be presented to UCSB student winners in the 21st annual Edwin and Jean Corle memorial book collection contest.

The contest is open to all undergraduate and graduate students at UCSB who have private book collections representing well-defined fields of interest. The appropriateness of the books will be a primary consideration in the judging.

The collections must be limited to a selection of more than 35 but fewer than 50 titles. Recent themes of winning collections have included: "The Image of the American Indian," "The American Smalltown," and "Butsudoo Literature of Japan." Themes have covered interests as diverse as renaissance music, scuba diving and children's books.

Contestants are required to submit an annotated bibliography of their collections, along with a short essay of no more than 400 words describing how and why the collection was assembled.

The purpose of the Corle contest is to "encourage the love of reading and the collecting of books," Christian Brun, the contest chair and head of the UCSB languages said.

"It is important that whatever the field of interest, the collection assembled comes from the heart of the person who collects," Brun said.

Becky Larson, one of last

"It was a process of self-discovery and it helped me to focus and realize what the collection had meant to me," she said.

Although the contest has typically attracted a wide response, there tends to be more entries from graduate students than undergraduates. Brun encourages more undergraduates to "give it a try" as they will be judged separately from the graduate entrants.

Sample entries from previous years are available in Special Collections on the third floor of the main library and students may drop by without appointment to view them.

Entries should be submitted to Brun by Wednesday, April 11, 1984.

After announcement of the awards, the winning entries will be displayed in the university library. The prizes and an award certificate will be given in a public ceremony during the week of April 23.

'There is an expectation of some sophistication, some depth to the collection, as well as sincerity and a knowledge of the subject matter.'

library's Department of Special Collections, said.

The collections need not be made up of expensive volumes or first editions. Paperbacks are perfectly acceptable. The judges look for book collections that correspond to the aims the collector has outlined in the essay, Brun said.

"There is an expectation of some sophistication, some depth to the collection, as well as sincerity and a knowledge of the subject matter," one of last years judges Torberg Lundell, a professor in the Department of German and Slavic year's undergraduate winners had a particularly memorable collection of children's book, Brun and Lundell said. "Her essay was written with enthusiasm by someone who clearly loved books and for whom the collection had played a part of the person's growing up. She put the books into a context and had memories as to how she had acquired each one," Lundell said.

Larson's collection began with a gift from her grandmother. Larson found it gratifying to be able to share a personal interest she has had for many years.

New Historical Essays Feature UCSB Professor

By KIM ALEXANDER
Nexus Reporter

UCSB Professor Emeritus of Spanish and Mexican History Phillip Powell's prizewinning essay, North America's First Frontier, 1546-1603 is being featured as the leading piece in a new book, Essays on Frontiers in World History.

Powell is one of the most influential and respected scholars in the field of Latin American and Mexican history.

Powell's piece, which won the $500 Webb-Smith Essay Prize in 1979 explains that the settlement of the North Mexican frontier resulted from the silver rush in Mexico during the 16th century.

"It (the essay) essentially points out that this frontier is where the Spanish government learned how to handle primitive tribes," Powell said. "The Hollywood cowboys and Indian scenes we see were heavily fantasized; it all really happened in Mexico on the North frontier in the 16th century."

In addition to Powell's contribution, Essays on Frontier in World History includes works by four other authors dealing with aspects of frontier life in French-influenced territories of North America; Sao Paulo, Brazil; Southern Africa and Australia.

Powell's interest in Latin America and Mexico began when he was growing up in Ventura County. "I was raised among Mexicans here in Southern California and I became interested in their cultures and language," Powell said.

While in graduate school, Powell developed a specific interest in Mexican history. Later he began to focus more upon the Mexican frontiers. He received his Ph.D. in Latin American history and literature at U.C. Berkeley.

Powell taught Spanish and Mexican history at UCSB from 1948 until 1981. "He's one of those people who built this campus," Joachim Remack, chair of the Public History Department, said. "He was here when we made the transition from a college to a university."

Powell also taught at Northwestern University, University of Pennsylvania, University of Michigan, and U.C. Berkeley. He believes teaching and researching are equally important.

"You do research to establish a reputation in a field; you teach because that's what you get paid for," he explained.

Collective Bargaining...

Although university administration is expected to oppose the bill, both the U.C. Public Information Office and the lobby declined to comment on the bill until they had seen it.

Aroner said Bates expects university opposition to the bill. "We are aware in past history the university has been opposed to collective bargaining for its own employees."

Balestrieri said the university wants to handle collective bargaining and other issues through the appropriate administrative channels. However, he said, "if the issue had been handled administratively we wouldn't be going to the legislature."

He said the administration has already said it could "support very few items" on the lobby's legislative plan for this year.

Legislation is approved by the Student Body Presidents' Council before being sponsored by the lobby.

AGSE, a 1,200-member association established on the Berkeley campus in April 1983, is now not recognized as a labor union by the university or able to participate in union negotiations, Janine Berbinski, co-chair for graduate external affairs at Berkeley, said Monday. Collective bargaining rights legislation would change this.

The newly authored bill must be introduced in a legislative committee before Feb. 17. It is now in legislative council, where bills are sent for drafting.

Alcoholism Report...

(Continued from front page) relationship between the NCA and the county should be examined for the value of the organization and its effectiveness as a rehabilitation center.

"The report was supposed to be based on a thorough investigation of the alcoholism programs in the county," Bobi Stevenson of NCA said.

"The many contacts from this office, the report says it spoke to, were not contacted. None of my board of directors were approached either. The members of the jury never set one foot in the (NCA) building," Stevenson said.

Without looking at any audits or reports on the effect of their program, the jury received an erroneous and non-existent opinion that is mostly hearsay, Stevenson said.

Stevenson says the NCA has had a flawless reputation for 35 years in Santa Barbara County and the support of the community. "Our board of directors is going to ask the Grand Jury for a formal apology and a revocation of the policy (recommendation).

"I think the individual members of the voluntary jury do not like what we do, because there is no way of attributing the fact that someone can be prevented from becoming ill," she said.

"When the report was issued, it was sent to the local administrative heads. The Board of Supervisors has a specific period of time to receive comments on the report before they are obligated to respond," Yager said.

Mexico has resulted in a variety of projects. Through his research, he has published several books, documentary works, articles and one historical novel in Spanish. Powell worked for the U.S. State Department from 1941 to 1943. During this time, he dealt with cultural relations with Latin America, and served on the Bi-National Cultural Institutes program. In 1947, he lectured for the Cultural Relations division of the State Department. He also worked in establishing United States libraries in Latin American countries.

At UCSB, Powell is most highly recognized as the founder of the Educational Abroad Program with Madrid, which he directed from 1964 until 1966.

Since his retirement, Powell has been able to do more research. He recently travelled to Columbia on a trip sponsored by the U.S. Information Agency so he could lecture and interview officials.

Powell lives in Santa Barbara with his Colombian wife and is content with his retirement. "I'm delighted with it," he said. "I'm working harder now than I did before."

Remack agrees that "retirement doesn't seem to have slowed Powell down. 'Once a professor, always a professor. Powell's not retired; he's a meritist,' he said.

Powell is currently working to complete a book on U.S.-Latin American relation. In the future he would like to do more research and write historical fiction. Powell plans to forego Mexican research and return to it at a later date. "I can't get away from Mexican topics," he said.

Swimmers Place Third In Meet

By DAVID COOL
Nexus Sports Writer

The UCSB men's swim team slipped past the University of Nevada, Las Vegas on the final relay to earn third place in last weekend's Rebel Classic Invitational.

With UCSB and UNLV in a virtual tie going into the 400-yard free relay, the Gauchos' John Boegman, John Otsuki, Matt Lum, and Chris Rehak aced the UNLV team by little more than a second to ensure the third-place finish.

The nine-team invitational was dominated by Arizona State University (664.5 points) and the University of Arizona (529), with UCSB (265) and UNLV (262) trailing far behind.

"ASU has incredible depth. They were missing five or six of their best swimmers and still scored 664 points," UCSB Head Coach Bernie Stenson said.

Stenson felt his own squad didn't swim a whole lot of spectacular times, but they did have a solid meet with many people swimming close to their seasonal best times.

"Mike Carpenter had another good meet," Stenson said. Carpenter was UCSB's leading scorer with a third-place finish in the 400-yard individual medley (4:07.84), a fifth in the 200-yard IM (1:56.80), a 12th place tie in the 200-yard butterfly (1:56.14), plus a fifth-place finish as part of the 400-yard medley relay team.

"John Boegman swam a solid 100 (47.23) and 200 (1:43.03) free. He swam his best time this season in the 500 (4:41.52), and also swam the fastest 100 back (55.82) we've had this year," Stenson said.

Boegman finaled in three events and took part in the Gauchos' 800-yard free relay, 400-yard free relay, and 400 medley relay, finishing in the top five in all these events.

Freshman Sean Dailey was the only other triple finalist for UCSB, finishing sixth in the 500-yard free (4:37.07), eighth in the 1650-yard free (16:09.46) and 14th in the 200-yard free (1:44.10).

Softball Team Goes Without Win But Benefits From First Tourney

By DENNIS RODERICKS
Nexus Sports Writer

The Gaucho softball team began its 1984 season last weekend at the first ever UCSB Invitational, which featured some of the best collegiate competition in the country.

Although UCSB went winless in their six games of the three-day event, Coach Bobbi Bonace was pleased with the overall performance of her young team, which includes six freshmen and four sophomores.

"The tournament was exactly what we needed," Bonace said. "It gave us a chance to see our players compete under game conditions. We've been practicing since the start of fall quarter and we needed an opportunity to see how we would perform against some quality competition."

UCSB was involved in several tight contests.

Freshman Sandy Ortgies, an All-CIF selection from Newbury Park High, pitched well despite suffering two 1-0 defeats at the hands of nationally ranked Cal Poly Pomona and defending Division II national champion Cal State-Northridge. She allowed just eight earned runs in 26 innings during the four games in which she appeared.

"Our pitching was solid and our defense was very good, especially in the Pomona game," Bonace said.

The Gauchos received strong performances from several freshmen over the weekend.

Third baseman Joann Saul, in addition to playing a fine tourney defensively, led the UCSB offensive attack with five hits, including three hits (one home run) versus United States International University.

Tracy Villegas, a talented catcher from Dos Pueblos High, exhibited poise and composure behind the plate as she demonstrated her leadership in difficult situations.

Sophomore right-hander Lori Witz gave the Gauchos a lift with a strong effort against Cal State-Long Beach. She came back the next day to make several fine plays in left field against Pomona. "Lori gave us a fine effort in the tourney and will help us with her versatility," Bonace said of Witz.

The next action for the Gauchos will be the annual alumni game which will feature former Gaucho standouts such as Maurine Howell, Karen Griffith, Lori Sanchez, Mary Beke, Janet Pande and Mary Jo Speer. (Please turn to pg. 14, col. 1)

UCSB softball coach Bobbi Bonace is shown instructing her team in a pre-game meet and the Gauchos are looking ahead to a successful 1984 season.

Editor Ed Evans

Next on the agenda is yet another weekend trip as the Gauchos travel southward to take on PCAA foes U.C. Irvine on Friday and Cal State-Long Beach on Saturday.

UCSB should easily defeat both Irvine and Long Beach, though Long Beach could cause some problems in the sprint freestyle races with stars Kevin Zirzow and Allan Spehar leading the 49er swimmers. Long Beach also has two very good divers in Andy Kwan and Kevin Ellison.

NOTES: Going into their two PCAA meets this weekend, the Gauchos are still the top-rated swim team in the conference, according to the coaches poll.

New Coach Looks Ahead

Men's Tennis Team Hoping To Improve In PCAA

By SCOTT CHANNON
Nexus Sports Writer

UCSB has never been a college power in men's tennis, but the Swingin' Gauchos are optimistic for 1984, under new head coach Gary Druckman.

Finishing fifth in the PCAA last season, UCSB will be trying to improve their standing in the hotly contested nine-team division.

Returning in the No. one singles slot is junior Gus Andersen who is ranked among the nation's top 15 amateur players. Chris Russell, Sam Angus and

Chip Conk make up the second through fourth spots respectively. Freshman Ron Reiter, a nationally ranked junior player from New York, is the number five man. Dan Alle rounds out the top six singles players for UCSB.

The Andersen-Alle duo comprise the top doubles team, while freshman John Washer and Russell team up to form the No. 2 doubles team.

Druckman coached at San Diego City College for the last two years while also acting as administrator of the Roscoe Tanner/Marty Riessen Tennis Training Camp.

"I'm happy to be given this opportunity at such a fine institution as U.C. Santa Barbara," Druckman said. "I'm looking forward to developing the potential that is here," the 1975 PCAA doubles champion from San Diego State said.

Druckman feels the competition in the conference is strong this year.

"UC Irvine is the top team in our conference, and ranked 13th in the nation," he said. "Our team, along with San Jose State, Cal State-Fullerton and Cal State-Long Beach are in a second group right behind Irvine ... We should give Irvine a good match if we're healthy and playing well."

Top singles player Andersen said, "This is the best team I've been on in the three years I've been here." Individually, he had high aspirations for the season. "My game is really coming together. By playing a lot of tournaments this summer, I've gained confidence and earned a high ranking in the amateur polls."

In last year's PCAA championships, Andersen lost in the semifinals to the eventual winner, and lost in the doubles consolation match.

The Gauchos kicked off their season last Saturday playing an illustrious group of alumni. Some of the notable players on hand included: Lloyd Garrison, a 1941 graduate and local tennis author; Ed Doty, coach of UCSB from 1960-74 and 1942 graduate; and Steve Ruggles, a 1973 graduate who, along with Jerry Hatchett, owns the local Hatchett's Racket Tennis Shop. Fran Manis, who coached at Santa Barbara City College in 1928 and played at Cal, was also out to give the players a few pointers.

The Gauchos won all their matches and are hopeful the trend will continue on through the season.

Softball...

The contest will be played Saturday starting at two 2 p.m.

"We need to generate more scoring opportunities and improve our baserunning," Bonace said. "Overall I am pleased with the development the team has made since the outset of fall workouts. Our pitching and defense will play a major role in our success this season," Bonace concluded.

I.M. On Tap

The Intramural Office is sponsoring three different coed tournaments in the month of February.

A Coed Double Volleyball Tournament will be held this weekend, February fourth and fifth. On February 11 a Coed Two-on-Two Hoop Tournament will take place with signups beginning the sixth and ending the ninth. A Coed Doubles Tennis Tournament will take place on February 25.

In addition, a five- and ten-kilometer Fun Run will also take place on the 25th.

Winners of each event will receive a small prize, so a negligible fee will be charged for each event.

Come to the IM trailer next to Rob Gym to sign up or for more details.
