ZELO

By Ladella Godessa

Club Zelo is celebrating its 10th anniversary on Halloween with a weekend full of events, including four different costume contests during which you can win cash, are planned to celebrate the occasion.

Had it not been for a great coincidence, I never would have the unique pleasure of enjoying a delicious meal at the downtown landmark.

My good friend Svenell LocEal and I stopped by Zelo's to use the bathroom in the early evening. Not expecting to find much in the way of entertainment before the nighttime club scene, we planned to just use the can and head out. We'd be back later.

Much to our surprise, Tad Talrmang was sitting by himself in the dim room enjoying a cool drink and a salad. Svenell, who went to high school with Tad, thought that he was the greatest thing since sliced bread. She had always wanted to get to know him better.

So, seizing the opportunity, we asked Tad if we could join him for dinner. Tad responded, "I'd be delighted," he said.

As soon as we sat down, a friendly waitress asked us if we'd like something to drink. Svenell ordered a water and I had an iced tea.

Tad told us while we were making our dinner selections that he ordered black bean and artichoke soup to go with his dinner salad. Trying to be polite, I complimented his choice.

When the waitress returned with our drinks, Svenell and I both ordered shark salads.

I told Tad that I was surprised to see him here, and that I didn't know this place served dinner. Tad replied, "This is my favorite dinner spot," he said.

Whether it was the gleaming smile or the look of longing, something told me Svenell was so smitten by Tad that she wasn't thinking clearly. While I couldn't tell because of the stuttering, I think she said she was glad we discovered this place for a meal. "III'mmmm glad umph disovcmph hrrr mealll," she said.

I told her to get a drink cause I thought she needed one. "Get a drink and make it a strong one," I said.

"OK," she murmured.

Our salads arrived along with Tad's soup, and everything looked delicious. Tad's bean and artichoke soup actually looked great, I thought. "Your soup actually looks great," I said.

"Thanks, I know," he responded.

The salads had mixed greens and big chunks of marinated shark in a vinaigrette dressing. Tad dove into his soup, and the waitress asked if there was anything else we would like.

Unable to think of a single missing thing, I told her no, thanks.

"I'll take another glass of ouzo," Svenell said.

Tad grimaced and said "Doesn't that stuff taste like paint thinner?"

"Oh no, no. It's great," Svenell said, throwing back the rest of her first one.

As we finished our meals, we decided to stick around and join in the revelry that was beginning to brew around us. The terrific meal was the beginning of night of good times at Club Zelo.

Club Zelo is located at 630 State Street in Santa Barbara.

Tortillas too Good for Tossing

By Lola Vanneuffsteindoff

If there were nothing else on the menu at Alex's Cantina besides the homemade tortillas, it would still be one of my favorite restaurants in Santa Barbara. The warm, doughy delicacies are without a doubt the best I've ever had.

But the fantastic food doesn't end with the tortillas—I would have liked to have tried every item on the menu, but that was just not an option since I had already filled up on crispy tortilla chips and spicy salsa before I even ordered.

Upon ordering, I was torn between the various enchiladas, burritos, fajitas and the wide variety of other Mexican food delights. I finally selected my favorite: the chicken chimichanga because you can't get them just anywhere.

The service at Alex's is quick, attentive and accommodating. While waiting for food, diners can watch chefs prepare tortillas in the large iron oven, giving the restaurant a comfortable, home-like atmosphere while in the next room fun-seekers take advantage of happy hour.

Alex's happy hour is unbeatable: free chips, salsa and burritos wrapped in those warm tortillas I love. It's a great place to sip on your favorite drink, watch a game on TV, meet people or just talk with friends.

Once the food came, I was thrilled. I have had many chimichangas at various Mexican food restaurants in my life and this has made me rather critical. Alex's, however, did not disappoint. In fact, my meal was without a doubt one of the best I'd ever had.

The chimichanga was lightly crisped, and the chicken was tender and flavorful. Garnished with beans and spicy rice, I couldn't have asked for more.

The true indicator of the degree to which I enjoyed my meal came when I had finished and I didn't have that uncomfortable lump in my stomach that eating lots of Mexican food can bring. In fact, for the first time ever, I actually finished my chimichanga—not because it was small, but because it was really good.

It is a very satisfying feeling leaving a restaurant, sucking on the after-dinner fruit-flavored candy provided in anticipation of customers' onion, spicy breath, knowing that you have paid a very reasonable price for an excellent meal.

It is even more satisfying that I enjoyed Alex's Cantina as much as, if not more than, one of my mother's home-cooked meals—and that's saying a lot. Alex's Cantina is located at 5918 Hollister Ave. in Goleta. Phone: 683-2577.

Shallow Inklings:
When someone asks me what day it is and I don't know the answer I just tell them, "It's today."

Unless, of course it's midnight. In which case it's tomorrow.

Mamma Mia! Pasta!

By Pursa Longshore

I have this little ritual once every month. My friend Jasmine and I always decide to treat ourselves to dinner — at a restaurant, that is.

As usual, we were low in funds and ravenous. We weren't in the mood for Mexican or Chinese, and wherever we were going, we had to get there fast. I was about to keel over from hunger.

Baltieri's all-you-can-eat pasta night was the answer to our rustling tummys and our less-than-adequate checkbooks. So we piled into the car and head down Hollister — Baltieri's is only a couple of miles away — thank God because my car was running on fumes.

The aroma of garlic and spices that filtered through the restaurant teased our appetites. It probably took us longer to decide which dish to order than it did for us to drive to and from Baltieri's — there were just so many choices! After much deliberation, we were prepared.

All conversation stopped once the food arrived. I was too preoccupied stuffing my face with bread topped with butter and fresh parmesan cheese to even thank the waiter for bringing my dish.

My capellini siciliano was a mound of angel-hair pasta tossed with a tangy tomato sauce chock-full of olives and sun-dried tomatoes — the kind that leaves that tingly feeling at the back of your palate.

One bowl was probably enough for breakfast, lunch and dinner. Being the thriftester that I am, I couldn't resist another bowl. I mean hey, a healthy, scrumptious meal for under $6, I was gonna get my share.

While I tend toward the tomato-based sauces, Jasmine takes a liking to the thick, white creamy kind. The fettuccini primavera white was just up her alley. There were pieces of broccoli, zucchini and squash that were steamed to perfection.

When I came up for gulps of air, I sampled her dish which had a little twist — jalapeño peppers mixed in with the veggies gave the oodles of noodles a flavor that I couldn't quite place, but I knew I liked it.

Jasmine and I were also impressed with the servers and bussers at Baltieri's; they were so attentive and even had time to joke with us. The busboy might as well have carved a groove in the floor to our table; I swear he had to refill my glass at least nine times.

After Jasmine told him I was water-deprived since we don't get bottled water at home, he even asked me if I wanted to take some to go!

By the time we had dusted two bowls each of Baltieri's all-you-can-possibly-store-up-for-hibernation-pasta, we realized we had almost spent the last hour and a half in silence. There was food to be eaten.

Baltieri's is located at 5892 Hollister Ave. in Goleta. Phone: 967-2881.
