Election Ad Generates Controversy at UCLA

Group Believes Ruling Violates Free Speech

By Colleen Valles
Staff Writer

UCLA students faced the possibility of their votes for student government positions being voided this week when differing interpretations of election rules forced legal action against the campus' governing body.

The controversy surrounds the placement of an advertisement in the campus newspaper, The Daily Bruin, by the Bruin Democrats endorsing Students First, one of the campus' predominant political slates.

The ad did not follow the proper procedures, according to the Judicial Board of the Undergraduate Student Associated Council, said Max Espinoza, a campaign staff member for the Students First slate. "The Bruin Democrats didn't go through the official endorsement process," he said.

However, because the ad's expense was acknowledged on the accounts of the endorsed candidates, the campus group did not need to follow the official process, Espinoza said.

Freeway Access Adjustment Involves Archaeological Site

By Chelsea Coles
Reporter

Aiming to eliminate congestion and avoid future repairs, the California Dept. of Transportation proposes making adjustments to a southbound on-ramp and replacing a Highway 101 overhead in Goleta.

With funds allotted from state, federal and county agencies, the estimated $6 million Caltrans' project intends to widen the Fairview Avenue interchange and southbound on-ramp, adding a left-turn lane and a new right-turn lane. The entire overhead will also be rebuilt.

The newly constructed area will hopefully lead to a smoother flow for vehicles after its suggested August completion date,

Recent Attack Raises Lookout for Bombs

By Vaj Potenza
Reporter

In the wake of recent terrorist bombings via mail, Campus Police are sending letters to departments warning them to look out for letter explosives.

The precautions are generated out of general concern, not because of particular threats, according to Campus Police Sgt. John Foster.

"We always send out a bulletin when there is a possible danger," he said.

The notices follow a California Forestry Association lobbyist's death by a letter bomb FBI agents link to a terrorist known as the Unabomber last month.

Since 1978, the Unabomber has targeted universities or university affiliates in nine attacks. Those injured have included a UC Berkeley professor, a Berkeley graduate student and a UC San Francisco geneticist.

UCSB has never been threatened by the terrorist or other explosives, according to Foster. "As of now, no connection between the Unabomber and UCSB has been made," he said.

However, departments should take possible bomb threats seriously, according to Assistant to the Chancellor John Tucker. "It behooves everyone to be on alert," he said.

In a letter to the New York Times last month, an individual claiming to be the Unabomber said his enemies include scientists and engineers. However, the College of Engineering is not overly concerned with Campus Police's warnings, said David Probert, programmer analyst in computer science.

"It's a standard precaution the Campus Police take every time there's a bomb threat," he said. "Any of us are much more likely to die crossing the street."

Characteristics of letter bombs include excess postage or weight, a missing return address, oil stains, protruding wires or oddly shaped packages, according to Foster.

Police warnings reinforce the need to be cautious, according to Terri Coleman, an assistant

Leg Council Rep Resigns; New A.S. Budget Approved

By Michiko Takeda
Staff Writer

The emphasis at Associated Students Legislative Council meeting was on passage Wednesday, both in terms of the 1995-96 budget's rapid approval and a representative's resignation.

University-Owned Housing Rep Jennifer Brown officially requested resignation from Leg Council, explaining in a letter submitted to the board that she does not believe it has acted adequately to address "problems with our staff."

"In a nutshell, I no longer have confidence in the effectiveness and appropriateness of the actions and operations of Associated Students, and I have lost the motivation to change them,"

Brown wrote.

The announcement followed an April incident in which Brown said Advisor Dulcie Sinn and Executive Director Tamara Scott did not comply with A.S. Elections Committee's decision to prematurely end NetStation voting.

Due to the limited number of weeks left in the academic year, the university-owned housing rep seat is likely to remain vacant, according to Off-Campus Rep Cami Cooper.

In other business, Leg Council took less than half an hour to approve the budget presented by President Brittany Oates. This was the second of two council meetings focusing on its review.

While budget debating of past years has lasted until 3 or 4 a.m., this year's speed is especially remarkable, according to Cooper.

"We're all pretty speechless," she said.

Many of those affiliated with the budget process attribute the efficiency to extensive premeeting planning for the review, including Leg Council members gathering outside official meetings and working to prepare student groups for budget changes. Finance Board Chair Adrian Santos believes council members' preparedness prevented confusion. "I think everyone knew what to expect," he said.

Some Leg Council members also attribute the approval speed to a bill passed in November, which limited student group allotments to $150. Under the new rules, organizations wanting additional funding must apply for it.

U.S. Takes Trade Action Against Japan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton ordered an unfair-trade complaint filed against Japan with the new World Trade Organization and authorized publication of a list of punitive tariffs against Japanese automobiles and parts.

Clinton's decision was announced Wednesday at the White House — the latest attempt to pressure Japan to settle a bitter trade fight by giving in to U.S. demands for increased sales of American cars and parts.

"We are trying to erase decades of market restrictions in Japan," said U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor in announcing the president's decision. "The U.S. car market is wide open. Japanese companies enjoy a 24 percent market share in the United States. We have a meager 1.5 percent share in Japan."

The administration's tough talk followed collapse of negotiations last week in Canada. The ad-and seek a ruling from the 124-nation WTO that Japan has erected unfair trade barriers to protect its auto market.

The administration said its list of Japanese panese luxury cars, auto parts and possibly minivans.

The initial list is likely to include perhaps as much as $7 billion a year worth of imports from Japan. But after 30 days of public comment it would be reduced to between $1 billion and $1.5 billion of Japanese products that would be subjected to punitive tariffs as high as 100 percent — still the largest such sanctions case in U.S. history.

While U.S. auto executives applauded the trade threats, groups representing Japanese auto companies and foreign dealers in the United States said the tough talk would end up hurting consumers through higher prices. And they said it could spark a trade war if Japan decides to retaliate against U.S. products.

We are trying to erase decades of market restrictions in Japan in announcing the president's decision.

Mickey Kantor
U.S. trade representative

ministration said it would still prefer a negotiated settlement of the fight, which has dragged on for nearly two years.

But officials left no doubt they were prepared to retaliate. The United States will impose punitive tariffs on more than $1 billion in Japanese auto imports imports targeted for higher sanctions would be released early next week after Clinton returns from a trip to Moscow.

But congressional and industry sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the targeted products were expected to include Ja-

Committee Rejects Bill to Allow Public Breast-Feeding

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Mothers nursed their infants in a Capitol hallway on Wednesday, even as legislators were refusing to make public breast-feeding a protected right.

The Assembly Judiciary Committee for the second time rejected a bill that would have placed in law a woman's right to nurse in public.

The bill received a 7-4 vote, but needed eight to pass the 14-member panel. Democrats voted for it, while Republicans voted no or abstained.

"A dark cloud is hanging over us if we don't get this bill passed," said Assemblyman Antonio Villaraigosa, (D-Los Angeles) the author.

"This bill has gone far beyond breast-feeding in public. This bill goes to the very heart of the growing Victorian morality in the country," Villaraigosa told a rally of three dozen mothers on the Capitol steps.

The vote marked yet another offbeat stand by

Assembly Republicans, who for the first time since 1970 have enough members to block legislation. Republican committee members have said they certainly support breast-feeding, but not in public.

Several other states, including Utah, Florida, Virginia and New York, have recently approved breast-feeding bills with little controversy.

Creation of Bank Designed to Assist Small Businesses

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Vice President Al Gore announced Wednesday that $450 million in federal grants will be used to create a bank to provide capital for small businesses in depressed areas.

Using a South Central Los Angeles shopping center as his backdrop, Gore said the Los Angeles Community Development Bank will open at 4060 Figueroa St. on July 10.

The bank will distribute moderately risky loans for small businesses through existing banks and non-profit economic development agencies, Gore said.

"It is an extremely carefully designed program, designed by the community," Gore said. "It is based on a philosophy of community banking."

During the next 10 years, the bank is expected to offer $1 billion in capital. Four private banks — First Interstate, Wells Fargo, Bank of America, and Union Bank — will contribute a combined $210 million, Gore said.

The bank is part of the Clinton administration's plan to stimulate business in a 170-square-mile area including downtown and South Central Los Angeles, as well as parts of the San Fernando Valley.

Gore said the program will target small companies, and that under the program, the city must show that at least one job has been created for every $35,000 in loans.

More Military Bases Added to List for Possible Closure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirty-five military bases were added to a government panel's target list for possible closure Wednesday with the blows falling most heavily on the Air Force and the states of California and Texas.

The action by the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission means it will have more options to choose from when it makes its final proposal in late June. The list would then go to President Clinton and Congress, but in past closure rounds commission recommendations have been approved.

In all, the commission added 29 bases that hadn't been slated for any changes and also said it would consider closing six bases that the administration had recommended only for realignment, including McClellan Air Force Base near Sacramento. The changes could affect facilities ranging from major bases involving thousands of jobs to small offices with relatively few employees.

"All things are possible," said former Illinois Sen. Alan J. Dixon, the commission chairman. "Just because a base was added to the list today doesn't mean it will close or be realigned. It means the commission believes a fuller evaluation of the base is a reasonable thing to undertake."

California was hardest hit with eight facilities on the list.

Yeltsin Agrees to Scale Back Nuclear Deal Made With Iran

MOSCOW (AP) — In a summit of modest results, Boris Yeltsin spurned President Clinton's pleas Wednesday to halt the bloody repression in Chechnya and to abandon a nuclear technology sale to Iran. But Russia agreed to drop a particularly worrisome part of the Iranian deal.

Yeltsin, after six months of hesitation, also declared that Russia will formalize military ties with NATO, the Western alliance that once was Moscow's enemy.

Yeltsin made it clear, though, that he remains deeply suspicious of NATO's plans to expand eastward toward Russia's doorstep.

After three hours of Kremlin talks, neither leader asserted any breakthrough on policy differences that have put Russian-American relations under their deepest strain since the Cold War. Yet both sides were able to walk away with some claim of satisfaction.

"In playing this relationship out, there will come times when there will be differences," Clinton said. But he added, "Our people will be safer as a result of this meeting. It was an advance for security."

Under intense pressure from Clinton and threats from congressional leaders to cancel U.S. aid to Russia, Yeltsin agreed not to sell Iran a gas centrifuge that could be used to produce weapons-grade enriched uranium.

Weather

Watching the news last night, I happened to catch a feature on this six-year-old prodigy from New Jersey. According to "experts," she was "capable of reading literature at the 10th-grade level." At this point, I recalled reading a number of reports of how modern 10th graders often couldn't read at the sixth-grade level. I was left to wonder what was meant by "reading at the 10th-grade level" was supposed to mean. Is it that she could read as well as any 10th grader or that she can read at a level we wished was the norm for high school sophomores?

Even more frightening was the idea voiced by the parents, that a six-year-old was ready for college. I know too many people 18-25 who are emotionally unprepared for this.

Park Fest by Greeks Benefiting Area Kids

By Brenda Maxwell
Staff Writer

Softballs and balloons will fly at Anisq' Oyo' Park Friday evening for the first annual Spring Fest aimed at benefiting local children.

The three-hour festival will feature two live bands, Mama Llama and Soil, as well as eight carnival-style game booths set up by local fraternities and sororities. Tickets for the games will be available for 25 cents.

"We've come up with something new this year. It's a carnival in Anisq' Oyo' Park this Friday from five to eight," said Tamara Kutchai, festival coordinator and member of Sigma Kappa sorority.

"I'm getting the different sororities and fraternities together to come up with booths for children," she added. "Proceeds go to Adopt-A-School and Let Isla Vista Eat. We're doing this for the kids."

Organizers anticipate the fest will provide an opportunity for greeks to get together in an event to close out the year, according to Taft Owen, festival coordinator and member of Theta Chi fraternity.

Trash, Walkway Problems Top IVCEC Items Tonight

Sidewalks and solid waste will be the main topics of discussion when the Isla Vista Community Enhancement Committee meets tonight to pinpoint problems and brainstorm possible solutions.

Potential dangers arising from the lack of area sidewalks will be addressed by the committee, according to Mark Chaconas, aide to 3rd District Santa Barbara County Supervisor Bill Wallace. Chaconas will present a map of existing walkways and assist the committee with necessary data, he said.

"I know that they wanted to talk about the sidewalk plans of Isla Vista and I have a sidewalk map that I am going to present," Chaconas said. "We're more of a resource for the committee. For example, they want a map of the sidewalks and that's the kind of stuff we can pull up. We can facilitate people and resources for them."

The festival welcomes the involvement of all fraternities and sororities and will set aside a small portion of the proceeds in a fund to encourage participation, according to Kutchai.

"We're trying to get a lot

The county Solid Waste Dept. will also give a one-hour presentation on I.V.'s garbage problem, including recent steps taken to correct it. Since trash has become a community crisis, the committee has asked a county representative to discuss what actions are currently being implemented, according to IVCEC Chair Lee Bailey.

"Mark Chaconas is arranging for Geoffrey Simpson [of the county Solid Waste Dept.] to come out and talk about solid waste and what measures have been taken in the last couple of years," he said. "There is a form that states that property owners have to provide a certain number of cans and/or a dumpster, depending on how many bedrooms there are."

The IVCEC will meet at the University Religious Center from 7 to 9 p.m.

Hopefully the event can be used to dispel some of the assumptions about members of the greek system, according to Todd

 "According to the election board, it was recorded on all the student-expense accounts of the Student First slate," he said. "According to the election board, the Student First slate followed all the rules."

The question of a violation of the First Amendment of the Constitution rights of the Bruin Democrats arises with the issue of regulating the elections process, said a Daily Bruin story printed May 9. "We felt that it was our Constitutional right to free speech to endorse these students," said Bruin Democrats President Tristen Sotomayor in the article.

A temporary restraining order was filed May 8 against USAC for violating the First Amendment rights of the Bruin Democrats.

UCSB has no formal process for endorsing candidates, according to Associated Students Elections Committee Chair Guillermo Martin. "To my knowledge, we don't have one," he said, noting that campus organizations or students wishing to endorse candidates must be noted in a document provided to the hopefuls at the onset of elections.

Two USAC members

filed a complaint over the endorsement venue used by the Bruin Democrats with the Judicial Board, composed primarily of members of the greek slate, a competitor of Students First, Espinoza said.

After hearing each side, the board decided against Students First, forcing candidates for two positions to compete in the run-off elections this week, according to Espinoza.

"They deliberated and came to the conclusion that the Students First team violated the election code," he said. "The general representative and student welfare commissioner would have to go to the run-off."

Under the decision, two Students First members and one greek slate candidate elected to the three general representative posts, and a Students First member chosen to fill the position of student welfare commissioner, would be required to go to the run-offs.

However, the Judicial Board decided not to overturn the election of greek slate member Cheryl Chang, according to Espinoza.

"On Sunday, they had an emergency nighttime meeting," he said. "They decided that Cheryl Chang would not have to run."

The board eventually decided to turn the matter of sanctioning students, or prohibiting them from campaigning, back to the Elections Board and overturned its decision to have the candidates in question participate in the run-off elections.

Espinoza believes the board is stacked against Students First. "The Judicial Board is appointed by the president," he said. "Just a week ago, just before the elections, two new appointees to Judicial Board were approved."

At UCSB, allegations of bias could not be levied at the council, according to A.S. Judicial Council Chair Kevin Williams, despite the fact that Williams chose the members himself and the approval process for the past year's judicial council members began only this quarter.

"I know that, in our situation, when I came into office, I was not told who was on the list [of Judicial Council members]. I was just told I needed a committee," he said. "I went out and found people for my committee who I thought would do a good job. The people I picked are outspoken, strong-willed people and they have their own views."

Williams believes the selection procedures for the council precludes the charge of bias. "I think that's why we have an interview process and applications," he said.

Blasting Away Civil Liberties

William Yelles

In the three weeks that have followed the tragic loss of life in Oklahoma City, much rhetoric has been leveled by the liberal media and politicians as to who was "responsible" for this terrorist attack. Apparently, President Clinton and his aides in the Washington press corps are not satisfied with the knowledge that this heinous crime was committed by Timothy McVeigh and/or some other depraved lunatic. It seems that who is really to blame are conservative radio talk-show hosts who, the logic goes, have some sort of Svengalian influence over their listeners, all of whom, at any given moment, are potentially going to run out and blow up buildings.

The past few weeks have shown just how paranoid people can become in a short amount of time. While the militias' fear of America being invaded by the so-called "one-world government" is utterly ridiculous, so too are the theories expressed by the president and members of the media. It is impossible for some people to accept that there are always a few nut cases in the world who will commit inexplicable acts of random violence. Rather, these individuals don't just act out of their own volition but are driven to madness by a societal phenomenon or influence. In the 1980s, teenagers were being ordered to commit suicide by listening to supposedly Satanic heavy metal music backwards. A few years later, "increases" in acts of violence were blamed on television, even though the amount of violent acts on television was actually at a lower rate than during the 1970s. (To paraphrase George Carlin, there were world wars, crusades, invasions, slave trading and atomic bombs, among other things, long before television.)

Now, it seems, the latest media frenzy is surrounding the rapid growth of the militia movement. Current conventional wisdom by self-proclaimed "experts" and "analysts" is that members of these

"Although it is not because of any kind of United Nations conspiracy, there is some truth to the point that Americans' civil liberties are slowly eroding, as reaction to the Oklahoma City bombing illustrates."

groups are not thinking for themselves, but are being encouraged by talk shows and right-wing politicians, fueling their suspicion of the federal government.

On the contrary, governmental policies and rhetoric of late can make the public's blood boil without the help of G. Gordon Liddy or anyone else. Although it is not because of any kind of United Nations conspiracy, there is some truth to the point that Americans' civil liberties are slowly eroding, as reaction to the Oklahoma City bombing illustrates.

Shortly after the blast, President Clinton, of course, condemned the act, but then he and numerous members of Congress went on to suggest that such an act could have been prevented had the FBI possessed broader wiretapping and surveillance powers. A few days later, the president appeared in a national television interview on 60 Minutes, opining that if these "dangerous" militias could be infiltrated, we could prevent a future tragedy from occurring, even though there is still no direct link between these groups as a whole and the April 19 incident.

Lesley Stahl, one of the magazine's hosts, then asked him for his reaction to militia members' obsession over the 1993 raid by federal agents on the Branch Davidian compound in Waco, Texas. The President looked unusually dumbfounded by this notion, expressing that the agents were totally justified in using lethal force after cult members already killed four of them. What he failed to mention, though, was that the agents were killed in self-defense during an earlier, botched raid. Didn't David Koresh, despite being perhaps morally reprehensible and one of the world's most pre-eminent nut cases for a time, have a Constitutional right to protect his own private property?

DAVE KERMAN/Daily Nexus

Clinton and other political leaders should not forget that the first American Revolution was fought because of taxation without representation. Colonists were sick and tired of sending away their hard-earned money to a remote, out-of-touch government bureaucracy and getting little in return. As our national debt continues to spiral because politicians don't have the courage to slash entitlement programs such as Social Security, more people will wake up to the fact that when they get older, the money they've paid into the system won't be there for them. (Technically, it's already occurred since trust funds have been repeatedly raided by Congress.) That means younger generations of Americans — including most students on this campus — who will be making up the majority of the workforce, will have to shoulder the enormous burden of ridiculously high payroll and withholding taxes.

While militias are still a fringe group for the immediate future, their anti-government message will continue to gain support as long as politicians remain unwilling to react to the runaway deficit spending and ballooning federal bureaucracy that will ruin our quality of life if we're not careful. The winds of change are definitely in the air, and the results could prove explosive.

I picked up my cousin at the bus station on Tuesday (mind: 1) I was not loaning him any money, and 2) apartment.

"God, it is so great to see you! I'm so glad you could be waiting very long. Can you just grab my backpack and — I know, all my clothes are in that bag. I've been my mom kicked me out. Support

Sylvia Luis

Almost four years and a hell of a struggle later, I finally got the child support order from the state of California stating that my daughter's absent father has to pay child support. My first reaction was to jump for joy, justice had finally been served ... or had it?

As I read the document I was elated to see that he is required to pay the back child support that he owes, but my euphoria soon flared into anger as I read the fine print. My daughter was born in 1991, and the District Attorney is only requiring him to pay a total of $7500 in back pay from the year 1993 to the present. I knew that it was too good to be true. The government doesn't work to help the impoverished or seek out justice in any form.

Being on the welfare system, I signed a form stating that I would cooperate to the fullest extent with the Santa Barbara District Attorney's office to assist them in acquiring the child support that the government and I both fully deserved. The understanding is that whatever the child support amount comes to it will completely go to the state (as it should!) and then I would get $50 more a month. That was fine with me. I can always use an extra fifty bucks.

At first I was so anxious to nail her father and make him pay up to his responsibility — he shouldn't be able to just take off without ever seeing his kid and get away with it. In the beginning I had complete trust in the system and kept surviving on the mere flicker of hope that justice would some day be served. I called the D.A.'s office so much the first couple of years, I think the receptionist had my case number memorized. Anytime I would find out any new information the first thing I would do was pick up a phone and dial those familiar numbers to report the essential data, just as I was instructed to do.

As the years passed the reality of a child support check soon faded as I realized that the state of California would never pursue the matter with the same determination and fury that I had burning in my soul, they have hundreds of other cases to worry about. After some major soul-searching, I decided to give up the fight and go on. What comes around, goes around and his irresponsibility would come back and hit him right in the face years down the road.

The district attorney has the right to make negotiations with the father's lawyer in court regarding the child support order and what actions should be taken. Nobody asked me, or my daughter, for our opinions and what we thought would be fair. They just took the initiative to negotiate solely for the last couple of years, completely disregarding the fact that she was already two years old! Did she not exist during that time? Just because he didn't have a stable job during that time period they are going to be lenient with him? What about Alexis during that time? With formula costing about $10 a pop and a supply of diapers for a week priced at least at $15 per package she definitely had some bills that had to be covered (along with the high cost of clothing, food, shelter and the list goes on).

The worst part is that I am not even permitted the $50 a month of the allotted back child support for the last two years that I would have gotten if it had been in effect at that time — it all goes to the state of California. It is no wonder that welfare recipients abuse the system and make it a permanent solution in their lives. The welfare system is in a major crisis because they don't even know how to make the program work in a logical manner — make the deadbeat dads pay from the start! There shouldn't be any kind of negotiations in child support; it is a child's life we are talking about here.

When Alexis is old enough to understand what happened, I am going to have to be the one to tell her that her dad left before she was ever born, and that the state of California aided in the denial of her existence during the first couple years of her life by making idiotic decisions like this. The district attorney's job is to seek out justice and to ensure that it is served, not to help out the criminals and let them get off easy. As far as I am concerned my daughter's long-awaited day in the sun just exploded in her face.

The Reader's Voice

Feel His Pain

Editor, Daily Nexus:

This is in reference to the Pi Kappa Alpha beating of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon president Hugh Campbell, which occurred on April 30, 1995. The article was published on May 2, 1995, titled "Three Greek Resignations Result After Friday Fight." I would like to take the time to explain why Hugh Campbell's physical pain inflicted was considerably better than what happened to me as a result of my association with the greek system.

First of all, I will preserve everyone's name so that no reference can be made, in order to protect the innocent. The guilty parties know who they are so I will not indicate them either. The purpose of telling my story is that sometimes greeks or other groups can do much worse things to an individual than what some Pikes did to Hugh Campbell.

I would much rather have been thrown through a plate-glass window and beaten, because I would have had the opportunity to see who was harming me. Not to justify eight-on-one, but it seems to me a person is much more of a man to come to your face than to ruin you behind your back. In my case, these men slandered and defamed my character. They developed malicious lies that ruined my reputation. I do not claim to be 100 percent innocent, but fabricating lies is cruel and reprehensible behavior. In fact, it goes against these men's fraternity ritual which states that they will "ever guard all men and women's integrity...."

The falsehoods that were told stemmed from what was perceived rather than substantiated. An incident that happened to me last year involved the campus police paying me a visit to this fraternity last year. I had been accused of battery on a woman who was my girlfriend at the time. We had gotten into a fight and began yelling at each other. Unfortunately, I snapped. I covered her mouth with a firm grasp and told her to "Shut up!" At this moment I felt so bad. I had lost control of the situation. I just wanted the noise to stop. I then released her. She yelled at me that the whole relationship was over and stormed out. She then called the police, and they arrived at the fraternity house. They questioned me and ascertained that I was not a threat. Nothing legal happened to me and all the charges were dropped.

These so-called brothers watched and did nothing else. None of them, except one, who came to me and asked what the commotion was about. The president had the audacity to make a suggestion for a standards board review without even talking to me. This never happened, but he still planned to expel me another way.

Come this fall, alleged allegations of hazing came out against me, which were false. Nevertheless, this is what the president used to expel me. I was actually happy to go. Part of the reason I did not resign from the fraternity was that I would have had to sacrifice my financial well-being. With the fraternity expelling me, all of my monies — including dues, rent and deposit — were returned to me.

But the point of all this is that about three weeks ago, these individuals had gossiped so much that the facts were altered so significantly that I had become a rapist! Yes, in fact, a young woman who I had been dating, learned at a party of all this. When she confronted me with this news, I gasped. I was speechless. These guys had slandered me. They said I had been thrown out of the fraternity because I had choked and raped this person.

When I asked this woman who were the ones who would make up something like this, she only told me that they were in this old fraternity of mine. Still having some contacts inside this house, I asked a member to find out who was telling these lies about me. I told him that this person should talk with me man to man. To this day, this coward — I said coward — has not come forward. I doubt that he ever will.

So, Hugh, consider yourself lucky. That black eye will go away, and those guys, if you choose to press charges, will be in tremendous trouble with the law. I, however, have lost a wonderful woman, and had my character dragged through the mud. I would love to change shoes with you.

Educate Me

Editor, Daily Nexus:

This is in response to Alison Ward's response to Charles DeFlanders' column, "Domestic Abuse: A Man's View" (May 4). First of all, I'll assume that you are right in saying that he offers "horrible, demented, warped (and unsolicited) advice, as though he is in a position to understand, much less remedy, physical abuse from a boyfriend or husband." I believe this would imply that you do understand domestic violence against women, and have some opinions on how to remedy the situation. However, the only advice that you offered was to step aside and let women fight their own battle.

I suspect that most people, DeFlanders included, honestly hope for an end to domestic violence, even if they aren't completely up on where the heart of the problem lies. I, for one, would hate for women to continue being "misrepresented and misunderstood." So please write and educate me and my fellow males on what exactly the problem is and why victims of domestic violence are misunderstood. Also, what do you think males should do about the problem, as your previous advice was somewhat nebulous? Should I remain silent, and thus risk the implication that I don't care?

Thank you for your reply.

"During peak hours the traffic can get real bad," he said. "It's not going to make it 100 times better, but it will be a lot better than it is right now."

The overhead must be reconstructed due to concrete erosion and necessary repair, according to Alessi.

"The bridges need to be replaced," he said. "The process is such that we can do some maintenance on it, but eventually you can't stop the deterioration."

However, the overhead replacement will encroach upon a Native American archaeological site within the project vicinity. Local tribal concerns must be included in the planning process before development begins, according to the Caltrans Initial Study, a detailed outline of the project available at both the Central and Goleta branch libraries.

Although construction activities will be witnessed by an indigenous people's representative as well as Environmental Planning personnel, some local Native Americans remain against the project. "I don't think it's right they dig up anything," said Earnestine Sotl, a Chumash representative. "But everything is already dug up."

Nonetheless, Sotl appreciates the supervision of a Native American. "I have qualms if it's not Chumash-monitored," he said. "And they must be proven Chumash."

The proposed construction, initiated in 1990, has only a few steps left before it is put into action, ac-ording to Alessi. "We have just about concluded the environmental phase and then we have to start the archaeological stuff," he said. "That can be a very time-consuming process."

Although a Caltrans study states that the project will not create any major environmental consequences, an overt effect remains, according to Pam Dimberger, a senior environmental studies major.

"Expanding the roads may actually encourage more vehicles to use that road instead of finding an alternative method of transportation, for example, public transportation or carpooling," she said.

The council voted against Oates' recommendation that several student groups, including the Laughter Club and Starfleet, receive only $50 of the $150 available to them. Leg Council decided to allot $150 to each group, as Finance Board originally recommended.

The board agreed with Oates' recommendations that the Isla Vista Youth Project and IVYP Recreation Program receive more than their original budget allotments.

"I based [the increase] on the productivity level and how wisely they used the money," Oates said.

Leg Council tabled approval of Judicial Council members until they are able to interview the current recommended appointees or until a new list of candidates is provided.

Sullivan, Delta Upsilon fraternity president.

"My plan is definitely to have some guys there to help out with the booths," he said. "The stereotypes of the greek system is that it is narcissistic and is just doing things for ourselves. But we're doing things to better the community and to better ourselves and we take full advantage of that."

The carnival will be underwritten by the Interfraternity Council, according to Kutchai.

"We wanted to have an event at the end of the year," she said. "IFC is sponsoring it. It's not a whole week thing, like Greek Week. It's just one day."

sophomore catcher and team co-captain Dave Willis, who has played with Phoenix for three years. "On the field, he's one of the hardest workers on the team. He always stays after to take extra hitting and fielding."

Despite his lowered batting average, Brontsema isn't disappointed with Phoenix's performance this season.

"The fact of the matter is, he's led our team in runs scored most of the year and also driven in a lot of runs," Brontsema said. "We have a stat called runs responsible for, and he's one of our top guys."

Although Phoenix can't recall his first at bat as a Gaucho, he definitely remembers his second, an opposite field home run.

"It was here and we were playing LMU. The count was 2-2. I swung at a high fastball outside. Before, my swing was different—I would have had to catch the ball perfectly to send it out of here going the other way and I just happened to on that one. I haven't done it since."

When Phoenix was a freshman at UCSB, he and fellow freshman teammates Jared Janke and shortstop Zach Elliott all earned All-American honors. The Gauchos appeared to have the nucleus to put together a mini-dynasty, but the team has never finished at .500 or reached postseason competition in Phoenix's three years at UCSB.

"It has been a little disappointing, a little aggravating," Phoenix said. "With all the potential we have on the team, we never really put it all together. Each year there seemed to be a different factor and I thought this year we might have done it. We were coming in with really high expectations and so, in that respect, it's been a little disappointing, but it's still been fun and I've still learned a lot."

Early season worries about his position in the draft may have led to Phoenix's slow start. Since then, however, he has relaxed at the plate and seems to be more comfortable with his draft prospects.

"I was picked preseason to go between the second and fifth rounds," he said. "As of late, I haven't heard too much. I hope I'm back up there. I hope people still realize I have potential and I hope they go from that."

Although Phoenix, a biology major and Arthur Ashe scholar-athlete award winner who averages between a 3.2 and 3.4 GPA, is likely to leave school for the draft, he promises that he will return to UCSB to earn his degree next year.

"I've worked too hard not to continue my education," he said. "I've taken too many classes, too many difficult classes not to. If all goes well and I get drafted and play during the summer, I'll definitely come back in the fall and finish up."

PHOENIX RISING

In January of this year, Baseball Weekly published its ranking of all Division I baseball teams for the 1995 season. Although UCSB was ranked below 150, gracing the page with an enormous photo was Gaucho junior right fielder Wynter Phoenix, a rising star in the Santa Barbara baseball program.

The honor was only one of many Phoenix has received. As a freshman, he was named an Honorable Mention All-American by Collegiate Baseball and was one of 64 invitees to the USA Baseball fall trials in Florida. Prior to his junior season, the 6'2", 210-pound left-hander was named a third-team preseason All-American by Baseball America.

Certain to be drafted in the top rounds of the amateur baseball draft this June, Phoenix has actually already been drafted. As a senior out of Grossmont High School in El Cajon, east of San Diego, he was a 37th round pick of the Detroit Tigers.

"Being drafted was a great experience," he said. "I was very flattered. That's when I thought, 'Maybe I'm good enough or as good as everyone says.'"

Although the decision to pass up the Tigers' offer to attend college was not a difficult one, the selection of universities to attend was tough for Phoenix.

"[Detroit's] first offer was low, and I had pretty much always planned to go to college," he said. "I'd worked hard on my education in high school and throughout most of my life, so college was something I thought I was prepared for and wanted to do."

"Having to make that decision [choosing UCSB] was the hardest I've had to make in my life. Even when I think back on it, I remember how much pressure I felt."

Former UCSB Head Coach Al Ferrer — who was replaced by current Head Coach Bob Brontsema after Phoenix's freshman year — recruited Phoenix out of high school.

"I find it difficult for him to have ever had a teammate that didn't admire him or respect him," Ferrer said. "Not just because of the athletic ability but because of the way he treats people. There's no ego involved at all and he's never been the prima donna type."

Wynter, whose name comes from the season in which he was born, has overcome slow starts in all three of his seasons at Santa Barbara to post big numbers. At one point in the season just a few weeks ago, Phoenix was batting below .200 with just four home runs. Since then, he has gone on the hottest streak of his career, raising his average to over .260 to go with his 10 round-trippers. In his freshman season, Phoenix batted .315, while in his sophomore campaign, he batted .300, the only Gaucho to reach that plateau that season.

"The last two years, I've had a slow start, and then come March, whether that be my magic month or something, I start to turn it on," Phoenix explained. "This year has been a little more extended period of drought, but I still personally have major goals for the next four games we have."

A recurrent theme that runs through the words of teammates and coaches when talking about Phoenix is the dedication and hard work he puts in both on and off the field.

"Off the field, he's a real quality individual," said

Atwood Earns Big West Honors for Second Straight Week

For the second consecutive week, a UCSB softball player has been honored as the best of the Big West.

After her Big West Field Player of the Week citation last week for her hitting accomplishments against the University of the Pacific and San Jose State, junior Stacy Atwood was named Big West Pitcher of the Week on Monday. It marks the first time a Gaucho has earned the award twice in one season.

The La Crescenta, Calif., native went 3-1 over the last week, tossing a pair of shutouts to lead Santa Barbara over New Mexico State on Friday. Atwood only gave up six hits and struck out nine against NMSU, helping UCSB garner a pair of shutout wins, 4-0, 2-0.

Atwood came back 18 hours later to beat #3 Cal State Fullerton 2-1 in a complete game six-hitter over the Titans.

"She hit the corners, and her pitch selection was very smart," said UCSB Head Coach Liz Kelly. "She had pinpoint command of her pitches.

"She is definitely deserving," Kelly added. "Stacy is hard to stop when she has her focus and confidence."

Overall, Atwood threw 26½ innings, allowing only four runs on 18 hits, while striking out 18 batters. She walked only three to post a 1.06 ERA in the stretch.

BRIAN BERGER

Hey Sophs, Don't Lose the $$$$ in Your Eyes

Magic Johnson, Jason Kidd, Chris Webber, Joe Smith, Rasheed Wallace, Jerry Stackhouse and Rashard Griffith. An impressive list of talent who have more in common than just their basketball playing abilities. Not only did these players dominate the NCAA, they all left after just two years of service.

In recent years, there has been a growing number of college sophomores who have made themselves eligible for the NBA in an attempt to duplicate the success of Magic and the others who made the jump before them. And, as each of these "students" say their teary-eyed goodbyes to the institutions that offered them five years of education in exchange for four years of their basketball skills, a question arises as to how the school allows them to leave.

Like it or not, present-day college basketball is a money-generating sport that is responsible for bringing funding to college athletic departments and helps support many less profitable sports. When an athlete — or athletes, in the case of Wallace and Stackhouse — leaves a program, it not only removes a star from a very talented team, but it also affects recruiting.

For example, last season, Jason Kidd publicly promised Cal Head Coach Todd Bozeman that if the Golden Bears did not reach the Final Four, he would remain in Berkeley for one more season. However, just weeks after Cal was knocked out of the first round by Wisconsin-Green Bay, Kidd called a press conference in which he shed tears in telling the Bay Area that he would forego his final two years of eligibility and enter the NBA. It should have been Bozeman and now North Carolina Head Coach Dean Smith doing the crying as they see their visions of an NCAA Championship walk out the door.

The lack of a veteran point guard showed as Cal did not even receive an NIT invitation.

When a coach assumes that he will receive at least three years of play from an athlete, it affects the way he recruits. In the case of Cal, Bozeman was guaranteed that his talented point guard was returning, thus allowing him to fill more present needs on his squad. Luckily for Golden Bear fans, Bozeman was looking toward the future and was able to land freshmen Jelani Gardner and Tremaine Fawkes. However, these players were meant to be groomed for the future and not sacrificed into the starting lineup in their first run through the grueling Pac-10 schedule. The lack of a veteran point guard showed as Cal did not even receive an NIT invitation.

Not only is recruiting hurt by the early exit of sophomores, but some schools suffer irreparable damages in lost publicity and notoriety. LSU Head Coach Dale Brown has seen his program decimated by the loss of point guard Chris Jackson (Mahmud Abdul-Rauf) after his sophomore campaign. Brown believed that he was building an SEC powerhouse with a nucleus of Jackson and a powerful young center named Shaquille O'Neal. Jackson believed otherwise, and took his raw skills to the NBA where he has enjoyed only moderate success, while LSU has slipped near the bottom of the Southeastern Conference.

Now it's Dean Smith's turn to look into his much-glorified bag of tricks and try to fill the spots of two All-Americans in his starting lineup. With the majority of the "blue chip" players already committed to other schools, Smith will have a difficult time finding a freshman that will provide as much as Stackhouse and Wallace did.

In no other profession, including pro sports, can an individual walk out of a five-year commitment without punishment. Supporters of the athletes who leave early would argue that college sports are not professional. But aren't they? Very few other individuals are given the opportunity to attend college for no fee while only donating the naturally gifted skill they possess.

The only way in which college coaches will be spared the headaches that are given to them now is if the NBA steps in and adopts a policy similar to that of professional baseball, which prohibits teams from drafting players before they have served three years (which includes redshirt years, if applicable).

Currently the NBA threatens to enforce a rookie salary cap in an effort that it hopes will reduce the amount of young players that are lured by the high-priced contracts of pro basketball. However, due to the fact that the NBA is currently operating without a collective bargaining agreement, and since the veteran players are trying to prove that their salary cap is illegal, the threat of a rookie cap in the near future is doubtful.

Without a cap, and with the current trend in multimillion-dollar contracts, the NCAA will continue to watch its top young stars walk away from the institutions that gave them a free education and into the open arms of the NBA.
