Vol. 54, No. 48 Friday, November 16, 1973
University of California at Santa Barbara

The University of California Academic Planning and Program Review Board has issued a preliminary draft of the UC Academic Plan.

The report, issued Oct. 26, is being submitted to the university community for comments and suggestions, with faculty, students and administrators invited to comment.

The importance of the document, and of our response, cannot be over-emphasized. The University of California is at a crossroads in its prestigious 100-year history. The tightening of resources, the declining rate of population growth in California and the inexorable social and education changes from within — all pose an immense challenge to the future of the institution.

The development of an "academic plan" is the first step toward self-evaluation and self-determination since the season of curtailed growth came upon UC. It affords an opportunity for all segments of the university community to express their desires and concerns about the future development of UCSB.

The APPRB requests all individuals to forward their comments to Joseph W. McGuire, Vice President for Planning and Analysis, University Hall, Berkeley, Calif.

Copies of the document are available in the Reserve Room of the library, Associated Students office, Academic Affairs Board and from various department chairpeople.

The Academic Identity Crisis

The University of California, long the symbol of progressive, dynamic leadership in the design and delivery of mass higher education in the United States, is changing.

The changes have been precipitated by several factors. First, state budget support for UC during the years of the Reagan Administration have been hard-won and most agree, insufficient to support the vision of the great "multiversity" envisioned by President Clark Kerr in the early sixties.

By Dick Buford

Second, a substantial amount of student interest in higher education has shifted for both financial and academic reasons, to the State University and Colleges (CSUC) and community colleges. The shift has forced a larger share of the state's higher education resources to go to those systems.

The third factor — the one that is probably the most telling — lies in the erosion of the traditional bi-partisan pockets of support for the university within the California legislature.

In brief, the emergence of minority and liberal legislators into key legislative positions, along with the greater attention paid to tax cutting, has focused keen concern on the responsiveness of UC to the needs of middle class and minority segments of California's population. This phenomenon has, in turn, stimulated efforts to exert more influence over the policies and practices of the University. The pressure has been felt.

The strategy developed to cope with this "steady state" condition and to head off legislative interference is both ingenious and elaborate.

It calls for a detailed planning process, on both the statewide and campus level, that would coordinate the concentration of academic programs into centers of "special emphases" or strengths: "the campuses are ... advised to concentrate their resources on the field and subfield in which they have the greatest potential for quality — even if it means deferring the growth of, or eliminating, low priority programs."

ACADEMIC PLANNING

The planning project is being coordinated by the Academic Planning and Program Review Board (APPRB), a group appointed by UC President Charles Hitch two years ago. The board is composed predominantly of statewide administrators, but has faculty and student representatives.

The first step of the process calls upon the individual campuses to develop "a campus academic plan" that would "describe their ultimate goals and their objectives over the next 5-10 years ... The statements of objectives are meant to be more precise — more easily relatable to implementation — than those in previous academic plans.

"The campuses submit lists of currently approved programs (including degrees offered in each program) and projected additions and deletions ... Since resources are constrained, campuses should order their anticipated new programs in terms of priority with justification for the ranking. Campuses should also give an indication of the priority associated with the projected expansion or diminution of existing programs (in confidence, if necessary)."

The development of the individual campus plans, as described in the APPRB draft, are vital in that they will serve, when "completed", as the basis for determining levels of financial support for academic programs. "It (the plan) must be translatable into budgetary terms so that resources can be provided for its implementation."

The initial campus plans will then be examined by the APPRB as to "the implications ... for the University-wide impact." The board will then issue further guidelines by which campuses adjust campus goals to meet overall University-wide goals such as avoiding unused capacity and meeting overall student demand and social needs.

BULLETIN

The University of California Regents Building and Grounds Committee at yesterday afternoon's meeting in Riverside passed UC President Charles Hitch's recommendation that the regents support including UCSB in a moderate sized city in the Goleta Valley or an annex of such.

The recommendation passed despite arguments by UCSB A.S. External President Abby Haight to consider Isla Vista incorporation and a lawsuit threat by the Isla Vista Community Council. IVCC based their threat on Article IX Section 9 of the California Constitution, which reads:

"The University shall be entirely independent of all political or sectarian influence and keep free therefrom in the ... administration of its affairs."

Legal counsel for the Regents argued, however, that since UCSB was specifically involved in the matter of incorporation, it had the right to speak on it.

Why we are here

Students and faculty have long asked themselves, "Why am I at UCSB? What does it have to offer to me?"

That was the question that was addressed and deftly evaded by the Academic Planning and Program Review Board up in Berkeley when they sat down and wrote up a description of the purpose of UCSB: Their conclusion, written in hard-to-decipher bureaucratese for the new academic plan:

The emphasis at Santa Barbara focuses sharply on expansion of educational opportunities that are responsive to student interests and capabilities, and to the perceived or forecast needs of society. The campus seeks to diversify offerings and to intensify use of available resources while providing opportunities for experimentation in teaching and learning. Towards these ends the following things have been accomplished:

- modification of the general education requirements;
- establishment of new undergraduate majors designed to meet student needs;
- development of new structures and programs designed to bring together leadership and resources for innovative and improved approaches to teaching and learning.

The vision is uplifting.

"I'm sorry," the busy administrator says on the telephone to his wife who hasn't seen him in weeks. "We're working under a tight deadline to expand educational opportunities based on our perception of society's needs."

"Look at this new catalogue," comments one knowledge-hungry student to another. "They are offering a new major designed specifically to meet student needs. We'd better pre-enroll."

"I have designed here," says the management analyst, "a system that is 100% sure to bring together leadership and resources for innovative and improved teaching and learning."

"Yes, but are we intensifying the use of available resources while providing opportunities for experimentation," answers the suspicious vice chancellor.

"As I foresee the needs of society," muses the UCSB phrenologist, "society is going to be needing lots of English majors with teaching credentials topped with a few hundred sociologists, with a smattering of dance and dramatic arts majors on the side."

Well, it's not the same as a world wide reputation for excellence in scholarship.

Carnegie group failed to define higher education's goals, paper says

By Mark Forster

In a report released earlier this year concerning the future of post-secondary education in the United States, the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education called for a major revamping of the university system to meet educational and social needs.

Reviewing the commission's study, the Chronicle of Higher Education writes that "new conflicts have arisen over how higher education's responsibilities should be carried out."

According to the Chronicle, the report outlines such conflicts as minority employment in higher education, the responsibility of colleges for overall student development and the position of colleges in society as corporate bodies.

The commission favors employment of more minorities and believes this can be accomplished without lowering academic requirements. Concerning student personality development the report maintains the responsibility should be left to individuals, but also that colleges should offer aid by creating a campus atmosphere beneficial to student life.

In connection with the question of colleges as corporate entities, the Carnegie Commission urges institutions of higher education to "work with the rest of society to promote gradual social progress."

Quoting the Commission's study, the Chronicle writes that "higher education is in society but not totally of society. It should be more than a mirror, but less than a whip."

The Carnegie report also outlined the need for placement of "non-traditional" students within the college system, enhancement of vocational education and reduction of pressure on young people to attend college.

To accomplish these goals the study listed specific objectives such as reduction of entrance barriers to college, a closer link between vocational education system and industry, expansion of armed forces and prison educational facilities and encouragement of adult and part-time students to take advantage of higher education.

Through these objectives, the Commission, headed by former UC President Clark Kerr, hopes to alter the direction of higher education from a youth-oriented, pressurized atmosphere to a system of various post-secondary educational opportunities for whomever wishes them.

Academic Plan...

The second step of the planning process entails the refining of the individual statement of goals and objectives by the campuses, but this time, with special attention paid to the "designation of programs to receive special emphasis in resource allocation." This stage will require the setting of maximum funding levels by the board with the campus plan to describe how the quality of the programs will be related to the resources available.

The third and final step of the process will require the campuses to submit their plans to the APPRB "for consideration and resolution of differences." The board will then make recommendation on the campus plans to the President.

"The campus plans form the basis from which the board will draft a current University-wide plan to recommend to the President, this document. In such a document, the President makes a public declaration of the plans of the University."

PROGRAM REVIEW

The second process prescribed in formulating the Academic Plan is "program review". Generally, this entails the evaluation of the quality and objectives of on campus programs, i.e., departments, graduate and research units.

The plan recognizes the subjective and, therefore, questionable nature of the criteria that will come to bear in the evaluations. While all reviews will have administrative guidelines to adhere to, "the procedures will assure full academic review" by the appropriate Committees of the Academic Senate.

Existing courses are due to come under close scrutiny: "program review also serves to identify areas from which resources would be released for re-allocation to activities of higher priority."

Suggestion about the departments and programs under review will be solicited from student, faculty and administrators in the departments, but the plan fails to specify how this information will be utilized.

The question of who will oversee the development of any priority lists is left unanswered. The manner in which each campus performs this task is not described, "but the University assumes that the process of campus planning includes appropriate consultation with faculty and students, through their duly constituted representatives, and in particular with appropriate Academic Senate committees."

Response to Plan needed

By Ray Sawyer

A number of copies of a draft of the University Academic Plan for the years 1974-1978, presented by the Academic Planning and Review Board, have been sent to the various campuses for comment and response by members of the University Community. This draft provides perhaps the first coherent insight into recent thinking at the statewide level. Faculty and students who want to try to influence policies which will affect the future of this campus should look closely at the draft plan.

There are at least two avenues of response:

- By written memorandum to APPRB, addressed to Joseph W. McGuire, Vice-President for Planning, 247 University Hall, UC Berkeley. A copy should be sent to Chancellor Cheadle.
- Through Robert Kelley, Chairman of the UCSB Academic Senate and our representative on the Academic Council. Dr. Kelley is organizing a meeting on Saturday, December 1, for the purpose of discussing the plan (details will be forthcoming).

Undoubtedly our administration will also make its own response directly to APPRB. Copies of the draft plan can be found in the reserve book room of the library.

Much of the plan consists of generalities to which few will take exception. In addition, there is considerable space devoted to factual descriptions of existing programs and facilities. However, there are also scattered sections which may be of great significance to the future development of UCSB, for example, the comments on page III-5 on the subject of differentiation between campuses, from which the following quotes are extracted:

"This Academic Plan seeks to provide for continued development which will preserve the distinctive character and meet the individual needs of each campus. It is not desirable, however, simply to state that the individual campuses are unique and allow each one to go about its planning in any manner it thinks appropriate. This would not assure true diversity within the University ....."

"Therefore, the University endorses the principle ..... that its organizational structures, curricula and courses, and institutional styles should vary from campus to campus, and that these differences should be made known to prospective students ....."

The four pages devoted exclusively to UCSB should be of interest to everyone and should be compared carefully with the corresponding sections devoted to the other campuses.

I would particularly like to call attention to appendix A, dealing with the planning process. Among other things this section calls for full participation, at the campus level, by the committees of the Academic Senate and by student representatives. Planning is not yet organized at UCSB in such a way as to make this possible, and one of the items of campus business this year should be to make it so.

LETTERS

Alexander on classroom politics

To the Editor:

Regarding the Nexus article "Sanders, Alexander duel on 'politics'" and Dr. Sanders' letter to the editor (Nexus, Nov. 15), I would like to point out the following:

• The issue is not "controversy" in the classroom — controversy is inherent in the University's mission — but political advocacy in the classroom. The University of California policy on this issue is as follows: (The Regents of the University of California) "... are responsible to see that the University remains aloof from politics and never functions as an instrument for the advance of partisan interest. Misuse of the classroom by, for example, allowing it to be used for political indoctrination, for purposes other than those for which the course was constituted or for providing grades without commensurate and appropriate student effort, constitutes misuse of the University as an institution ... it is the Regents' policy that no campus, no academic college, no department and no instructor distort the instructional process in a manner which deviates from the responsibilities inherent in academic freedom. This includes introducing subject matter foreign to the regular course content, using classroom facilities and supplies or other non-free speech areas for political purposes." (Adopted by the Regents June 19, 1970).

Whether or not anyone is engaged in political advocacy in the classroom is likely to be very difficult to ascertain. For this reason, it would be unwise and dangerous for anyone to interfere in the classroom. This statement should not be construed as an allegation on my part that anyone at UCSB has used the classroom for political advocacy.

• In my interview regarding this matter I stressed that my comments, relating to the essence of the quotation above, were made in the abstract and not in reference to any individual(s), including Mr. Sanders.

• Teaching is evaluated in the review process. That "things fall into place" does mean that controversial teachers are penalized, as Mr. Sanders suggests. It does mean that allegations concerning the misuse of the instructional process will have to be looked into very carefully.

Rhetoric or UCSB identity?

By Bob Ellis

The Academic Planning and Program Review Board has recently circulated for community review and comment a draft version of the new academic plan for the University of California. That plan deserves your attention and comment because it represents the most significant change in the structure of the University of California since UCLA was constructed as the 'southern branch'.

Within that plan you'll find that the University is committed to excellence in teaching, research and public service, affirmative action, student participation in governance, political autonomy, faculty renewal, all the applehood and mother pie statements, in fact, that one has come to expect and that are required in a statement such as this. It is very tempting and easy to become diverted by the wording and imagined motives for those several statements; direct your attention, rather, to Chapter 3 and Appendices A and B for they embody the heart of the structural change referred to above.

NEW CAMPUS GOALS ARE SET

In response to curtailed growth following a period of rapid but incomplete expansion, the administrators of the UC system have developed a process for coordinating the development of new programs on nine campuses. Heretofore, the individual campuses were allowed to develop in a relatively unchecked manner. That goal is now abandoned.

In its place is the plan that UCLA and UCB continue as general campuses with the complete spectrum of excellent academic and professional programs, whereas the other seven campuses are to develop specialized identities and particular areas of strength and excellence.

The new premise is that the UC system is to be viewed as a coherent whole, with each important program being represented on at least one campus. Such coordination requires a planning process (that process has been developed and is outlined in Appendices A & B) and a coherent identity for each campus. Accordingly, Chapter 3 of this plan is extremely important for it contains the preliminary statements of those campus identities; for those of you that have read UCSB's 'Academic Thrust', it is apparent that our identity crisis is recognized by the President's office.

UCSB has as yet to get its collective head together: there have been suggestions that we focus on the arts, performing and/or visual, that we focus on the fact that we have I.V. nearby, that we emphasize our marine science capabilities, or that UCSB become the center for the study of California in all its aspects.

As Appendices A & B indicate, we are going to have to live with that statement for some time and so I respectfully suggest that our community focus on that particular aspect of the plan and develop a more coherent statement before the review deadline of December 15.

A.S. editorial unfair

To the Editor:

On Wednesday, an editorial entitled "Reject A.S. Elections Bylaw" appeared in the Nexus. At this time I would like to clear up some of its allegations.

The editorial begins by stating "... our partisan politicians have ordered the Daily Nexus and KCSB not to endorse candidates for student government. This policy was devised without our being consulted, and we will not abide by it." The editorial fails to mention that an editor of the Nexus, a member of the elections reform committee, agreed that no student organization that receives funds from A.S. be allowed to endorse a candidate — this included La Raza Libre, the Daily Nexus and the BSU. Our unanimous feeling was that this would be a policy that would be fair to everyone concerned.

It is interesting to note that the Nexus has never endorsed an A.S. candidate that is running against one of its own staff members. As one former editor puts it, "Either they would endorse me (for an A.S. office), or they wouldn't endorse anyone." So, when the Nexus states that "their policy on endorsements is fair," they are far from the truth.

The editorial goes on to state that the election committee was "odd" — containing two partisans from either side (ISL and USC), and "one apparently misguided neutral." The editor of the Nexus fails to point out that one of the partisans within the election committee is also an editor of his paper. Furthermore, he fails to mention his participation in the ISL when he was news editor. The "misguided neutral," Sue Fishman, is known by many council members and is extremely well-informed and intelligent. It does not surprise me that the Nexus labels an individual they have never interviewed.

Although the editorial makes several charges against me, my main purpose in this letter was to give the students both sides of (Cont. on p. 5, col. 4)

Faculty, student input lacking

By Dick Buford

The development of a campus academic plan is an extremely important undertaking and it is one, unfortunately, that has precipitated an unfortunate misunderstanding between the Administration and members of the faculty and students.

The particulars of the misunderstanding are less interesting than what they point to, namely, a deep-seated distrust of the actions taken by the Administration in the development of the plan.

A report coming out of the Academic Senate's Committee on Educational Policy criticizes the lack of significant faculty input that was allowed before Phase III, authored by Geology Professor Richard Fisher, went to President Hitch.

The committee was correct in its criticism. The amount and quality of the faculty and student input into the document was inadequate, especially considering its importance. Moreover, proper administrative planning could have insured that the document had reached key committee hands in time to allow close scrutiny and criticism, with the Administration still meeting all imposed deadlines.

The Administration was conscientious, however, in indicating to Hitch that the document did not have sufficient faculty and student input and, additionally, in insuring that the description of UCSB's goals and educational objectives was general enough to readily accommodate change. APPRB is aware of this.

So the challenge, now, is to gather real input from students and faculty, to work together toward some consensus — uneasy as it may be — of what each of us would like UCSB to become.

The proposals put forth by Robert Kelley, Chairman of the Academic Senate, will prove indispensable to this end. I would urge all of us to become involved in a constructive, hopeful dialogue about them and the campus academic plan.

Little Emo concert scores over obnoxious flash bulbs

By Stephen Griffith

Last Saturday, Nov. 10, UCSB's own Little Emo played to a very receptive audience in Campbell Hall. Given only five days notice on the availability of the auditorium, it was remarkable that Campbell Hall was almost full, especially since Little Emo handles its own publicity. But by the time the concert was over, the audience got its money's worth.

Little Emo entered from the rear of the auditorium, coming down one of the center aisles and crawling onto the stage. Their first number was a sophisticated barnyard piece, displaying their knowledge of music along with their ability to perform. Much of the audience was seeing Little Emo for the first time, and were truly amazed at the high quality and togetherness of the group, as shown by the resounding sound of applause at the end of the first piece.

Little Emo continued to play for over an hour before they stopped for their first intermission (more time given an audience than some recent A.S. concerts have given), repeatedly demonstrating their versatility, switching from blue-grass to soft rock to classical. And humor was always a part of the show.

CREAM

However, the lyrics left much to be desired. One often got the feeling that they were filler where the band felt they needed some vocals. This lack of depth was exhibited in lines like: "40,000 leagues under the sea, is a pretty heavy place to be." But they did provide humor, for example "I told my mother, music makes me cream."

Their new play, "Arion Meets the Schnib and the Grib," performed after the intermission, also lacked depth, though the music was good and it was entertaining.

Little Emo, composed of Jim Sitterly on violin, Brian Mann on flute and guitar, Alan Lochhead on bass and Thomas Lackner on percussion, has added a new member: Daryl Caraco on electric guitar. Caraco clearly showed his talent in the solos he was allowed. But they were too controlled. I think the audience wanted, if only once, to hear him let loose on some wailing electric sound.

BAD PHOTOG

At this time it is my duty, on behalf of the audience, to expose Little Emo's obnoxious hired photographer. Of the several photographers present, including the "La Cumbre" editor Steve Suess, Emo's photographer was the only one with the audacity to use flash. And he was often on stage blocking the audience's view, while the performers mugged for him. Sitterly, please take note: that photographer almost ruined the evening for many of us.

A pleasant surprise were vocalist Michele Downey and classical guitarist Jeff Linsky, who appeared after the intermission. Linsky impressed me more than Downey, who sang the usual "romantic" numbers, including "Love Story" and "Try to Remember." But the audience (including myself) really enjoyed it, and surprised the duo by asking for an encore. They answered with "Summertime" from "Porgy and Bess," impressing many in attendance.

After an all out performance of all the entertainers, the Little Emo concert ended as the audience gave the group a well deserved standing ovation. And the group responded with their old favorite, "Walk Along the Rainbow." Three hours of sincere music for $2 left everyone satisfied.

Margaret Mintz and Karen Theilacker have a two woman show of paintings, drawings and prints opening on Monday, Nov. 19 at 6 p.m. in the College of Creative Studies Art Gallery. The show will run through Dec. 2.

The UCen Gallery opens with its first show, "Unknown Works from the Known," on Monday at 5 p.m.

Choral groups in concert

UCSB vocal groups will join for a concert in Lotte Lehmann Hall Saturday, Nov. 17 at 8 p.m. under the direction of Carl Zytowski, UCSB professor of music; Michael Ingham, UCSB assistant professor of music, and Salli Terri, UCSB lecturer in music.

The public is invited to attend the performance without charge.

Terri will conduct the University Singers, whose 165 members form the largest performing group at UCSB, in three pieces by John Biggs, Santa Barbara composer and Terri's husband, as well as a Czechoslovakian folk song with dancers, "Howl Ye," a chorus for double choir by Randall Thompson, "Holiday Song" by William Schuman and "O Magnum Mysterium" by Tomas Luis de Victoria.

The University Chamber Singers, 20 vocalists who are selected by audition, will sing three settings of folk songs by Terri, a black spiritual, "Is Anybody Here," arranged by William Grant, and two tunes by William Billings. In addition, the group will sing "Pensive Dove," an early American work of anonymous origin; "My Bonny Lass" by Thomas Morley, Aaron Copland's "Las Agachadas" and "In Excelsis Gloria" by Peter Racine Fricker, chairman of UCSB's music department.

Correction

Yesterday's edition of the Nexus said that "The Caretaker" was going to be shown at Campbell Hall next Sunday. Well, it's not. Instead, "Pygmalion," the play by G.B. Shaw which was later turned into "My Fair Lady," will be shown at 7:30 p.m., Campbell Hall, Sunday.

The film stars Leslie Howard and Wendy Hiller and was personally supervised by G.B. Shaw himself. The film is a rarely seen classic.

Correction

In yesterday's article on Veterans' Affairs, page 2, the number given to contact Linda Perlin, Veterans' Affairs secretary, was in error. The correct number for veterans looking for work-study appointments is 961-4193.

why does a man join Maryknoll?

There are probably as many answers as there are individual Maryknoll priests and Brothers. Some men are deeply moved when they hear of babies dying in their mother's arms because of hunger or disease. Others are distressed by the growing antagonism and separation between the rich and the poor nations. More are concerned about the great injustices that have been inflicted upon the poor by those who possess wealth and power to an excessive degree. Others look to learn from peoples who have grown up with a different mentality than that which is theirs. All feel that the only solution to the crises that threaten to split men asunder is the love of God as shown in the life of His Son, Jesus Christ. This love of God urges men to go forward and be missionaries so men can love one another. What could be your reason for joining Maryknoll?

If you keep saying you want to do something with your life — here's your chance to prove it

I do want to do something.

V-ballers to play

Top caliber men's volleyball, played by teams among which there is no love lost on either account, will be the diet prescribed for tonight's special benefit match between UCSB and Long Beach at SBCC's sports pavilion beginning 7:30 p.m.

Proceeds from the $1 admission cost will go to SBCC, which is trying to establish a volleyball program of its own.

Last year, after taking the Gauchos in straight sets in Long Beach, the 49ers rubbed salt in the wound by staging a workout.

FB FORECAST

Duane Brash, with 23 picks, captured top honors in last week's Pigskin Forecast. This week's prize—a dartboard. One entry per person. Remember the Monday night score.

Water nymphs host meet

The Women's Swim team, fresh off their weekend sweep of Whittier, Long Beach and San Diego, will end their regular season by hosting the UCSB Invitational this Saturday at 9 a.m. in the Campus Pool.

The meet features such talented teams as UCLA, Pomona College, UCSD, Long Beach State and UC Davis.

UCLA's Dana Schonfield, who last year won an Olympic bronze medal in the breaststroke, and Karen Moe, Olympic entrant in both the butterfly and relays, will highlight the individual stars.

Last week's results, a 61-6 immersion of Whittier, a 75-50 win over Long Beach and an 85-4 rout of San Diego State, stated unequivocally that Santa Barbara also can perform at high levels.

Ann Loucks dominated the 200 free in all the meets in addition to taking a first in the 50 free at Whittier and a first in the 100 free at Long Beach.

Pat Shine, winning the diving, also placed first in the 50 breaststroke and second in the 50 free at Whittier. Leslie Pettitt (backstroke and relays), Rosie Saecker (butterfly, freestyle and relays), Patty Stearns (relays and butterfly) and Syd Brown (relays and freestyle) also excelled for UCSB.

Hank Babcock, transfer from UCLA, where he starred in the backcourt along with Greg Lee, Bill Walton and company, will debut as a Gaucho tomorrow at 8 p.m. when the varsity meets the JV and redshirt squad in the annual Hall of Fame Game in Rob Gym. Regular admission procedures will apply. $2 general admission with UCSB students free. 1973-74 is Santa Barbara's last season in the PCAA but could be its best ever.

Rec. Dept. Plans Five Trips

By Raye Douglass

This year the UCSB Recreation Department is sponsoring five ski trips. We're expecting a lot of snow this season so plan ahead now.

The first trip is over Thanksgiving vacation and we're heading for June Mt. Calif. (Only an eight hour drive). 30 people will be staying in plush cabins, and skiing the varied runs of June and Mammoth Mountain.

Second on the agenda is the skiing highlight of the year as fifty UCSB students will be winging their way by jet to Sun Valley, Idaho, for the All-Cal Winter Carnival.

Over 800 skiers from all UC campuses will be attending this once-a-year extravaganza set for December 15 through December 20. Participants will enjoy plush accommodations, a huge ski area, and Sun Valley's famous snow conditions.

Unfortunately, the Thanksgiving and All-Cal Winter Carnival trips are already full but you may put your name on the Rec Dept waiting list.

Still open are the three-day weekend Mammoth Mountain trips on January 18-20 and February 22-24.

Roundtrip bus transportation from UCSB to Mammoth, daily shuttling to the slopes, lodging, breakfasts and dinners are included in the package price of $38.

The bus leaves UCSB Thursday night so you awaken to the dramatic sunrise off of the snow on Friday morning.

Ski all day Friday, Saturday and Sunday and return home late Sunday night. If you've never skied Mammoth Mountain here's your chance!

Mammoth is one of the largest and most dramatic ski areas in all of California. The trips are also an exciting way to meet and get to know other skiers from UCSB. Be sure and ask for the detailed handout sheet and payment in full is required when registering.

The final Recreation Department sponsored trip is over the Spring quarter break from March 25-29. The trip is tentatively set up for Squaw Valley. Included in the package price of about $80 are meals, lodging, and lifts for five days. The Squaw Valley ski trip will go on sale sometime in January.

To assure a space on any of the trips, early sign-ups are suggested. Stop by the Recreation Department, South Hall 1229, for more information.

Also, skis, boots, poles and racks can be rented at the UCSB Equipment Room. Reserve your equipment 7 days in advance.

Ski Swap Booth

The Rec Department will operate a special ski swap booth for anyone wishing to exchange or sell equipment on November 28, market day, in Storke Plaza.

Ski Team Sets Trials

By Dan Shiells

Most students rarely get an opportunity to watch UCSB's only defending league champions perform. Indeed, few even know about the existence of the team or its league.

Nonetheless, Santa Barbara possesses a top notch ski team, consisting of 10 men and 10 women, who compete regularly in the Southern California Intercollegiate Ski Association.

Last year the men's team captured top honors while the women managed to place third amongst thirteen teams including UCLA, USC, and Orange Coast College.

As league champions, however, the Gaucho ski team, must face the extra pressure of being the temporary "king of the hill."

Hence the team will again stress the elements which most people feel are the key ingredients behind their success—practice and conditioning.

November 17 is the first practice, at which over 40 prospective tryouts will be screened for the final limit of 20.

Practices for UCSB are strictly enforced and no one is allowed to compete without attending practice, creating a team of athletic competitors rather than an assortment of hot doggers and prima donnas.

The team works out at least two times a week in preparation for competition as well as skiing at every possible opportunity. As far as the actual competition is concerned, points are accumulated on a seasonal basis as regards individual placing of each team's top five members in meets held on local slopes such as Mammoth and June Mtn.

All thirteen league teams attend these meets, except when injuries or travel problems prevail, and compete under the auspices of an electronic timing device in slalom, giant slalom, and, this year, downhill.

Slalom, is, of course, where the skier is required to maneuver a preordained zig-zag course. Giant slalom is merely a different version of this event, with wider gates to allow greater speed.

Downhill is strictly speed and skiers must retain balance at speeds ranging between 40-60 mph.

The ski team, sponsored by the Rec Dept, pays their own way except for transportation and must pay a league due to cover gates, timing instruments, uniforms and officiating costs as well.

Top individuals for UCSB's team include Chris Thiel, nicknamed "captain powder," Paul Kurth, team president, and Kris Van Lengean for the men and Karen Walters for the women.

Within two years at least 80,000 California skiers will be taking up ski touring, the "gentle use of the forest." This extraordinary growth in numbers, estimated at 800% last season, stems from a desire to get away from the madding crowd increasingly evident at California's Alpine Ski facilities.

Cross-country or Nordic skiing was introduced to the United States and Central Europe in the latter half of the Nineteenth Century. Unlike the Scandinavians who had taught them, the Europeans and Americans began skiing for recreation and sport rather than for practicality. The Central Europeans developed their own form of pleasure skiing suited to the steep Alpine slopes. Thus Alpine skiing refers to recreational downhill skiing, slalom, and downhill racing events. Nordic skiing is touring, cross-country racing, and jumping.

In Alpine skiing the skier is tightly bound into stiff boots which are firmly affixed, heel and toe, to his skis. Alpine skis have hard cutting edges which enable the skier to maneuver by weight shifts and carving turns in the snow. Alpine skiing is high-speed skiing which requires the use of mechanical uphill lift capability.

Nordic skiing is as old as winter transportation. The boots are soft, and the heel is not attached to the ski, enabling the skier to "walk" across flat terrain. Nordic skis are kept from sliding backward and their running surfaces matched to snow conditions by careful and complex waxing. Maneuvering techniques are entirely different from Alpine skiing and the terrain used is rolling or flat. Ski touring may be likened to on-snow hiking and backpacking.

There are certain dangers in untrained tourers trekking off into the forest. If you plan an overnight trek or a day tour which will take you far from base facilities, a guide is mandatory. The Sierra is famous for its blizzard snowfalls.

Equipment for Nordic skiing is relatively inexpensive. Skis, boots, and poles costing as little as $85. Ski touring is the sound of quiet—no lift tickets, no crowds, no noise.

Locally, the best area for cross-country skiing is Mt. Pinos (from Ventura take Highway 126 to Interstate 5 Northeast, enter Frazier Park from 5 and continue on to Mt. Pinos). If you've never tried cross-country before, contact Sid West at Upper Limits in Goleta regarding lessons at Mt. Pinos and equipment rentals. If you want to buy Nordic equipment Granite Stairway and The Great Outdoors, as well as Upper Limits, all have good selections on hand.

NORDIC GEAR SHOWN AT UPPER LIMITS

Area Stores Keep Pace with Skiers' Needs

For all its being a summer recreational area, Santa Barbara has quite a good selection of ski stores. Just a few years ago there were only one or two such stores locally and these emphasized Alpine Skiing. With the recent increase in backpacking and its winter counterpart ski touring, several good Nordic skiing stores have opened up.

If you've recently taken up cross-country skiing, there are two good stores in Goleta where a complete ski touring package can be purchased. Granite Stairway Mountaineering at 320 South Kellogg started out basically as a mountaineering store. This fall they have added on a ski room and have plans to go into downhill equipment. If you don't live in Goleta, Granite Stairway has another store at 3036 State Street.

Upper Limits at 133 North Fairview near Builders' Emporium has a resident ski touring instructor and enthusiast, Sid West. If you're interested in learning more about cross-country he's the one to talk to. Nordic equipment may be rented at both Upper Limits and Granite Stairway. Both stores also have a good selection of cold weather clothing, and backpacking gear for lengthy ski tours. Great Outdoors at 420 South Fairview also has cross-country equipment. Owner Denny Frye knows quite a bit about local conditions also.

For Alpine enthusiasts Ski West at 2911 De la Vina offers a complete line of equipment as well as the latest fashions for on the course and après ski. The repair department features the latest equipment for checking binding releases. The staff is trained to handle normal repair problems. Over the summer the ski section of Ski West was expanded to allow more room for fitting equipment and to show new lines.

A new Alpine store will be opening up shortly on Calle Real. Mountain Sports will feature an exciting decor to show off its equipment and make even the novice skier think snow. The store will have a complete selection of downhill equipment and accessories. Look for the opening within the next two weeks.

The oldest locally owned ski store in Santa Barbara is All American Sporting Goods at 1025 Chapala. The downstairs area is devoted to downhill equipment and repairs. The latest in ski fashions are featured on the mezzanine. Visit Paul Kurth, UCSB Ski Team Captain, at All American, for advice on buying or renting equipment.

Whether you're into Alpine or Nordic skiing, don't wait until you get to Mammoth, Vail, Aspen, or wherever you're headed to rent equipment. There are plenty of local suppliers to help you out and usually you'll get a better fit and better advice.

Southwick's

Tobogganer to downhill racer, you'll find the right outdoor clothing at Southwick's. Come in and take a look at our huge inventory of down filled jackets, polyester jackets, and casual pants; you'll be pleasantly surprised at the selections. And you'll like the relaxed atmosphere of no pressure browsing.

Sweaters: Turtlenecks, crewnecks, V-necks, scoopnecks, cardigans, in all acrylic to all wool, in bulky knits or smooth. Priced from $5.98 to $22.98.

Start Shaping Up Now for Fun on the Slopes

By Dan Shiells

Trite but true, the best advice anyone can give to someone planning for action on the slopes is simple and direct. "Be in shape."

Conditioning sharpens one's skills, accustoms muscle groups to unusual stress, and, most important, goes a long way towards the prevention of injury.

There are specific exercises designed to improve every aspect of skiing. The more advanced your goals, the more specific the exercise program.

But for starters there is no substitute for overall fitness which can only be achieved through conscientious effort well in advance of the season. There are no short cuts in conditioning.

A good conditioning program seeks to develop endurance, muscular strength, flexibility, and the ability to relax. All are critical if the skier hopes to 1) avoid the aches and pains associated with the use of long dormant muscle groups, 2) avoid injury, and 3) advance his skills effectively.

The best exercises for endurance, and also leg strength, are running, swimming, walking, bicycling, and rope jumping. By building up cardiovascular capacity you accustom your body to stress it might otherwise be unable to cope with effectively.

A caution in this aspect of conditioning, however, is not to go too fast. Give yourself time and pace your development.

Muscular strength in the upper body can be achieved by many methods, one of the simplest of which is pushups. Other exercises, designed to increase flexibility and promote relaxation, include back, neck, shoulder, and thigh stretches.
