

Committee Looks At Local Housing

By BARBARA POSTMAN
Nexus Staff Writer

The cost and availability of housing for UCSB students is a major problem requiring attention and action by the university, a study conducted by Robert S. Zarkin, an intern for the Registration Fee Advisory Committee, states.

The committee hired Zarkin because they are "concerned as students about housing," Alisa Fredundlich, chair of the committee said. The student-run committee recommends to the chancellor how registration fees should be spent, and therefore, works closely with the administration and service organizations such as the Community Housing Office. Fredundlich said all the parties involved want to "look at what we can do in the housing area," find out how bad the situation is, and discuss the available options.

The study, which was done last May, focuses on the Isla Vista housing market where nearly 50 percent of all UCSB students live. The report was divided into three major topics: the rent structure and condition of apartments, the cost of acquiring new and existing housing, and suggestions for improving the quality of student housing.

According to the report, the average rent increase for a one-bedroom apartment from 1980-81 to 1981-82 was 18.6 percent, and the average increase for a two-bedroom apartment was 14.2 percent.

In addition to these increases in rent, the report notes that housing owners and property management firms are more reluctant to spend money on improvements and upkeep. In fact Rentals, Etc., an I.V. property management firm, states in its list of rental procedures, "Know what you are renting. Do not plan on any improvements over what you see now... 'What you see is what you get.'"

The problem of poor maintenance and repair of apartment buildings is aggravated by absentee landlords who purchase buildings purely for investment purposes. According to the report, these owners, along with the management firms they hire, are concerned mainly with maximizing their profit, at the expense of renters.

Another obstacle faced by students is the discrimination that occurs when some owners simply refuse to rent to students, as is the practice at the Kimberly Apartments and The Sesame Tree Apartments.

Because the university would like to purchase housing in Isla Vista and thereby alleviate some of the difficulties, the second part of the report discusses the costs involved in such a plan.

A comparison between the different possibilities, including apartment buildings, houses and vacant land, revealed the average price for

County Is Financially 'Not In Good Shape'

By STACEY BOYLE
Nexus Staff Writer

The Santa Barbara county budget may be faced with serious program eliminations next year, depending on the extent of next year's state budget, to be finalized in January.

David Elbaum, assistant administrative officer for the Santa Barbara Board of Supervisors, the body which formulates and approves the county budget, appraised the county's current financial situation. As "overall...not in good shape."

"The best you could say is that we've survived this year relatively unscathed, but next year, if our budget is cut, we are at the point where we have to start cutting programs and department budgets. We've survived by shrinking; next year we might have to start eliminating."

The California state budget has a great effect on the county's new budget. This year Governor Brown implemented major across the board budget cuts, which all state-affiliated institutions are feeling. The county budget has been lucky so far, Elbaum said.

"We haven't had to make any cross the board cuts, as of yet. The effect of Brown's state budget is felt most strongly in that we couldn't expand to add any of the new programs that we would have liked to. We couldn't raise our budget to accommodate rising inflation. We have calculated that the state budget cuts cost us approximately $400,000. This is money we could easily have put into the contingency fund for unforeseen emergencies."

Next year's state budget will have a very profound effect on the county, he added. "In January, the Governor will have completed the new state budget for next year, which we anxiously are awaiting to see our fate and the fate of our various programs."

Elbaum explained that as a result of state cuts, fire departments in the county received less economic support than they had hoped for. "We couldn't give as much money to the Carpinteria/Summerland Fire Department, nor to the Montecito Fire Department as they wanted."

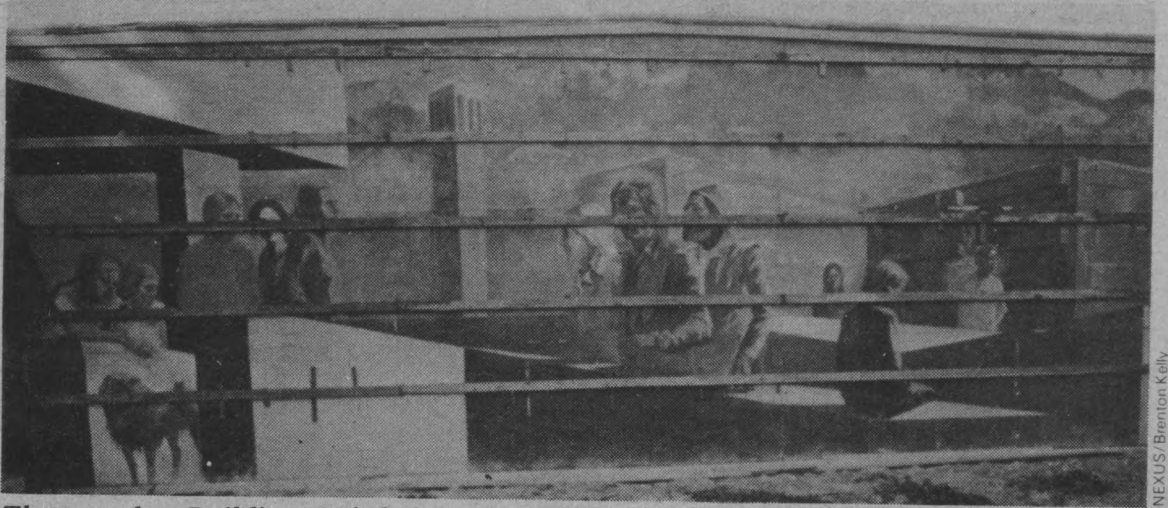

Elbaum also expressed concern about the county's ability to cope economically in the event of a major crisis noting that the idea of an emergency of unforeseen expenditures is very uncomfortable.

"If the Diablo Canyon thing had been more expensive, we just wouldn't have funds to cover something like that. We, as a result of this tight budget, have no cushion to fall back on as a private enterprise would. We have no money for a rainy day," he said.

The annual creation and confirmation of a new county budget, is a long and taxing process. Elbaum detailed the eight month long procedure Santa Barbara County follows in the formulation of the budget.

"First, various county departments submit their requests for the upcoming fiscal year to the Board of Supervisors in Spring. The board then evaluates and investigates the diverse needs of the county, and by June, formulates a proposed budget. In July, we close the books on the previous fiscal year, and we can then figure out how much money, if any, can be carried over to the new fiscal year. Also in July, we complete our property taxes. The state will then have completed and adopted their budget. Next, public hearings are

Elimination of Mural Contested at UCSB

By LINDA BERBEROGLU

Despite the student and faculty complaints, the mural on the end of Building 434 will be boarded up by the end of November when renovation of that building is completed.

Building 434, which accommodates offices for the Women's Center, Educational Opportunity Program and the Community Housing Office, is undergoing the final stages of exterior restoration which will include covering of the mural painted in 1971 by UCSB graduate student Ralph Gilbert.

Art Professor William Dole described the mural as a "very effective piece of decoration because it was low-key as far as color is concerned — I always liked it." The figures on the mural were the artist's friends and the architectural setting is based on the UCSB campus, though there is no particular message or theme associated with the mural.

Supervisors Delay Creation Of Additional Municipal Judgeship

By MICHAEL GONG
Nexus Staff Writer

The creation of an additional Municipal Court judgeship for Santa Barbara area has been delayed again by the County Board of Supervisors pending two studies regarding the possible realignment of court districts and the amount of floor space that would come about from the remodeling of the present Municipal Court in Santa Barbara.

Two weeks ago the board delayed submitting the legislation for the creation of the new judgeship because of possible potential housing impacts that the new judgeship may bring about.

After much discussion, the supervisors did not act upon the Regional Growth Impact Study but decided to look into other alternatives, as well as following up on a decision that approved the new judgeship last Oct. 26.

The Regional Growth Impact Study found that the new judgeship would create the need for approximately three dwelling units for six new staff positions necessary to operate the new municipal court.

The possible realignment of the court districts in Santa Barbara county was proposed by Supervisor Harrell Fletcher of the north county. He felt that the 1.9 percent decline in Goleta's population growth, along with the increased costs of the new court may not necessitate creation of a new judgeship.

"If we are getting by at the present time, why would you want to build another court," Fletcher said.

In an earlier report the State Judicial Council determined that the Santa Barbara-Goleta area was in need of 5.6 judges considering the current case load undertaken by the municipal court. However, the Santa Barbara-Goleta Municipal Court currently has only three judges, as well as one commissioner acting as a judge.

The board decided on a 4-1 vote, with Yager dissenting, to conduct a study that would provide more information regarding the realignment of the court districts and mitigate the judicial needs of the county by spreading the case load throughout the county. However, the board did not terminate the earlier approval of the judgeship and remodeling of the current municipal court that serves Santa Barbara and Goleta.

On a motion by Supervisor DeWayne Holmdahl, the board approved on a 4-1 vote, with board member Fletcher against the proposal, the transfer of $20,000 from the county general fund to continue a study regarding the impact of the remodeling of the municipal court.

The remodeling of the Santa Barbara-Goleta Municipal Court that would convert storage space into office space, increases office floor space by approximately 4000 to 5000 square feet. The remodeling study, which will be conducted by the Public Works Office, would provide pertinent information on the design and square footage of the remodeling.

STATE

SANTA BARBARA— With the congress laboring over a new budget proposal in an unusual weekend session, President Reagan on Sunday postponed his scheduled holiday trip to his California ranch, a White House spokesman in Santa Barbara said. The President and Mrs. Reagan had planned to arrive late Sunday for an eight-day stay at their 688-acre ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains.

SAN BERNADINO— Seven of 10 inmates who escaped during the past month from a state mental hospital are still at large, while two more were apprehended by law enforcement officials over the weekend, authorities said yesterday. Officials said the unusually high number of inmate escapes may have been triggered by workers beginning the installation of new security devices.

SAN FRANCISCO— Bare-boned-staffs were left in some federal buildings in four Western states and dozens of national parks were ordered closed yesterday after President Reagan vetoed an emergency funding measure. Workers in many regional federal agencies were confused as they awaited word from Washington headquarters about their operations. The closures and uncertainties are due to a dispute between Reagan and Congress. Federal workers passed out a handbill inviting "all furloughed employees" to rally outside the Federal Building in San Francisco at noon today.

SAN FRANCISCO— After a chase that spanned two continents, an ex-Brink's guard suspected in one of the nation's largest thefts is being held on $2 million bail in San Francisco. The FBI said 26-year-old George Bosque, who was arrested Sunday, has provided leads to help trace the $1,850,000 that vanished when he did more than a year ago.

NATION

WASHINGTON— An emergency funding measure designed to trim $2 billion from the federal budget was vetoed yesterday by President Reagan after it was passed in Congress in a rare weekend session, leaving most federal agencies with skeleton staffs and putting 95 percent of government employees in four Western states on furlough until further notice. Reagan wants to slash $8.5 billion from the federal budget.

WASHINGTON— The Pentagon created a new U.S. military command for the Caribbean yesterday in an apparent signal of concern about growing leftist strength in Central America. The announcement came after Haig Sunday described a "drift towards totalitarianism" in Nicaragua and reported outside arms support for anti-government guerrillas in El Salvador.

WASHINGTON— The Reagan administration has quietly ordered the Federal Communications Commission to junk a questionnaire used to determine if broadcasters are treating minority and female job applicants equitably.

WASHINGTON— The Secret Service said it is "aware" of reports that Libya's Moammar Khadafy has plotted the assassinations of President Reagan, Vice President Bush and two top Cabinet members. A Selective Service spokesperson declined to comment on what security precautions have been taken.

NEW YORK— Testifying before the Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians, the son of a Japanese-American said "the injustice that was done" in the mass evacuation of Japanese-Americans during World War II cannot be ignored. The commission has been considering suggestions to compensate the individuals who were involved in the internment process.

WORLD

LONDON— Britain, France, the Netherlands and Italy announced yesterday they will take part in a U.S.-sponsored force to patrol the Sinai after Israel completes its withdrawal from the Egyptian territory captured in war last April. Syria called the plan "American occupation of Arab territories," and has protested European approval.

WEST GERMANY— Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev rejected President Reagan's proposal for eliminating European-range nuclear missiles Monday, but offered a reduction of Soviet missiles as "a gesture of good will." He also made clear the United States would be expected to follow suit.

POLAND— Police broke up a meeting of anti-government activists and Solidarity union members Sunday, but made no arrests. The raid came amid persistent strikes by 500,000 college students demanding higher education reforms from the Communist government and election of a new headmaster at an engineering college, where students were in the 27th day of a sit-in.

MOROCCO— A majority of Arab League members favor Saudi Arabia's Mideast peace plan but opposition from hardliners probably will prevent the league from formally endorsing it, conference sources said yesterday. Crown Prince Fahd's eight-point plan has received favorable comments in Washington and European capitals and condemnation from Israel.

NICARAGUA— After months of increasingly strident bickering between Managua and Washington, a leader of Nicaragua's revolutionary regime said his nation now wants a "stable relationship" with the United States.

WEATHER - Low clouds today with the chance of rain increasing to 30 percent. Highs 60 to 65. Lows tonight 52 to 57.

Cites Scapegoat Method

Johnson Attacks U.S. Institutions

By LAIRD TOWNSEND
Asst. Campus Editor
During a fiery speech Friday Night, political activist Nelson Johnson described what he viewed as a serious socio-economic crisis eroding United States institutions in the 1980's, one that instills the need to find "scapegoats" for the problem.

During the speech, sponsored by the Black Students Union, Johnson argued that when a country's economic and political base is crumbling, it resorts to oppressive methods and seeks to find one or more scapegoats.

The U.S. today, Johnson said, is one such country. "The system is falling apart. (Today) American people are disoriented," and the country is in, "a deep, deep, deep, crisis," caused by the depression, "plus the last 50 years on top," and are therefore looking for scapegoats, Johnson said. "First communists (became scapegoats) then Blacks, Chicanos, and others."

Now, a disgruntled labor force is saying, "if you fight someone, fight the alien (workers)." Reagan is saying that, "Black people like to rip off, they're born that way." Welfare recipients are being blamed for economic ills; and white youths who are looking in vain for a job, are told "Blacks are the reason."

In order to illuminate and focus his theme, the black activist showed a film before he spoke depicting a Ku Klux Klan/Nazi killing of Communist Worker Party leader members, during an anti-Klan rally Nov. 3, 1979 in Greensboro, North Carolina. Johnson, who is a member of the CWP, alleged that one of the Klan leaders in the rally was an informer to the Greensboro Police force and the FBI.

The alleged informer, Ed Dawson, was able to tell police about the rally by obtaining a copy of the rally's permit, Johnson charged, and had participated in recruiting and instilling enthusiasm among members of the Klan. All six Klansmen were acquitted of charges, under a plea of self-defense.

Peace Corps Successful With UCSB Recruitment

By SHARON WATERHOUSE
Nexus Staff Writer

Recruiters from the United States Peace Corps visited the campus for the second time this year, after the strong interest demonstrated by UCSB students in the organization's last drive.

Last week recruiter Linda Lane interviewed four prospective volunteers and received return visits from many interested students who had spoken with recruiters during the Peace Corps' last visit. She also nominated two volunteers during the course of the week.

UCSB students are generally more responsive to the Peace Corps and its philosophy, Lane said. She said UCSB students are "good applicant material" and that many are majoring in the fields the Peace Corps is interested in, such as English, French, nutrition, education, ecology, and biology.

Although some programs remain open for applicants longer than theirs, Lane said, they are currently nominating volunteers to begin work in the fall of 1982. Within each program there are a certain number of positions for volunteers. Those who qualify and apply in time generally are accepted, Lane said, but specific areas are closed once the limit is reached.

Prospective volunteers are interviewed by recruiters and although the students may not be majoring in the particular field the organization is looking for, the recruiter searches for other interests and abilities in order to find the right program for each individual.

Once selected, the Peace Corps volunteer spends three months in training and two years actually serving as a volunteer in any of a number of Third World nations.

The more aware the public is of the Peace Corps' activities, the more support the agency receives, Lane said. However, being a govern- (Please turn to p.7, col.1)

Summit

Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev arrived in Bonn, West Germany Sunday night for a summit meeting with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt. The central focus of discussion is expected to be limitations on deployment of intermediate-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

The summit comes at a particularly strategic time in East-West relations. In addition to President Reagan's recent foreign policy speech outlining American willingness to cancel installation of new Pershing 2 and ground-based cruise missiles in Europe, the West German government has just reached an agreement with the Soviets to import 1.08 trillion cubic feet of natural gas a year from Siberia. The project has prompted fear that Western Europe may become too dependent on Soviet energy supplies.

The tenor of the talks will likely affect the Geneva arms limitation talks between Reagan and Brezhnev scheduled for next week. Yesterday, in his first public response to Reagan's proposal, Brezhnev rejected the elimination of all medium-range nuclear weapons from Europe, but stated that the Soviet Union would be willing to reduce the total number as a gesture of good will.

Since the end of detente, regardless of its relative merits, relations between East and West have been notably chilly. The current round of negotiations have the potential to alter that, and it is to be hoped that a new spirit of common sense will enter the international arena. Brezhnev, Reagan, and the leaders of other NATO countries now have the opportunity within their grasp. Global survival depends on how well they avail themselves of it.

True Art

Art, it is often said, is a personal matter. What appeals to one artistic eye may not necessarily appeal to another. But in any case, art is a visual presentation of an idea, or concept.

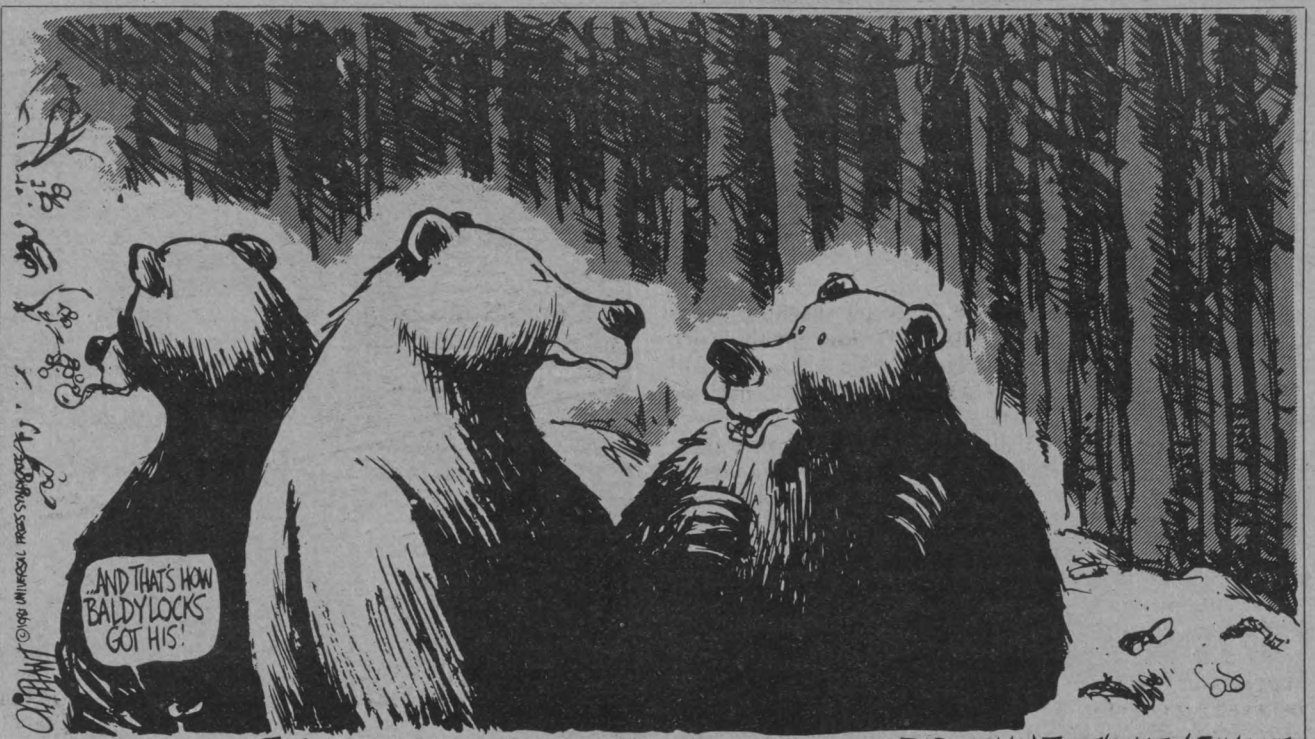

The mural on the end of Building 434 is one example of such a work. A painting which characterized aspects of the UCSB campus, the mural has been an inspiration among the bland, grey concrete buildings so common on campus.

At the end of this month, the mural on the end of Building 434, painted by UCSB graduate student Ralph Gilbert, will be covered as part of a renovation project designed to upgrade the building which houses the Women's Center, the Educational Opportunity Program, and the Community Housing Office.

The decision by the Physical Planning Committee to cover the mural was a poor choice, considering the fact that several students and faculty members expressed a desire to see the mural remain. It is hard to believe that a bare wall could offer the sort of inspiration characteristic of Gilbert's mural.

Art Department Chairman Michael Arntz stated that "We don't, on principle, save student work...student's work shouldn't be planned to be permanent anywhere on campus."

We disagree. Gilbert's mural is a valuable and important part of the UCSB campus that depicts a part of student culture at UCSB. That alone is reason enough to preserve it.

Calculators

Editor, Daily Nexus:
Programmable calculators have never been a threat to those who do not possess them. Even novice programmers know that programming a process is the best way to learn it. They also discover that old-fashioned study takes less time. Also, calculators will not help the student to show his/her work.

I am an electrical engineering major and I own an HP-41C calculator. It's nice, but it's no miracle machine. No computer is. Given free use of any computer, it is doubtful that a student could develop, debug and utilize programs to his or her advantage in an academic environment. Computers are only useful when a process is to be performed repetitively — this is not the case with exams.

I urge students and faculty members to look at all programmable calculators as tools suitable for data processing, not analysis. The wise student will rely on doing homework and studying in preparation for examinations, using the calculator for processing lab data. Few would feel compelled to spend hours programming cute messages or filling the memory up with tricky equations, then waste time during an exam retrieving them.

Convocation

Editor, Daily Nexus:
Deep thanks go out to Walter Kohn (Director of the Institute of Theoretical Physics), Dr. Larry Badash (UCSB History Professor), and the many other individuals responsible for organizing and promoting the UCSB version of the National Convocation on the Threat of Nuclear War.

To fulfill the dual-purpose of this letter, I plead with the other campus departments to become actively involved in putting sand on the greased tracks of the nuclear arms race. We must all have the courage to show our faces, and voice our opinions in opposition to this dangerously directed momentum. Those of us who do not play an active role in halting the arms race are as responsible as those souls who stand at the buttons. Don't forget the blunder made by the "silent majority" of the Vietnam era.

We must look beyond the governments which stand between the peoples of this world. We must pledge allegiance to the Europeans who have recently gone to the streets in an effort to awaken the world to a reality that they feel explicitly.

As with the fashion scene, the people of the United States are once again tagging along behind the Europeans. It is time we caught on to what they already know — the international movement to stop the Nuclear Arms Race is well under way. "If you're not part of the solution, you're part of the problem."

Nicholas Von Hoffman Dishonesty

After four years and 10 months of first Carter's and then Reagan's honesty, the country is up for a dishonest politician who knows what he's doing. Ah, for a shifty-eyed, duplicitous, oily-tongued prevaricator who sees where he's going and has the guile to get there.

In the past weeks the number of people drinking in the swisher sort of Capitol Hill restaurants who openly yearn for effective dishonesty has grown. There is talk in praise of knavishness and speculation that Richard Nixon may be asked to run as a disreform candidate.

Yet even as polished political minds stared into their Stolnichaya vodka martinis (pledges never again to drink the Russian import vanished with the lifting of the grain embargo), it appears there was a varmint as deceptive and dissimulating as any practitioner of realpolitik would want up the corridor from the Oval Office. There was Mr. David Stockman, the head of the Office of Management and Budget, the president's main man on matters fiscal.

It was he who did the heaviest selling to Congress of the supply-side economics tosh and who, we now learn, never believed a word of it. Even as he sat in hearing rooms day after day telling senators the tax cuts would make new jobs, he was telling a magazine writer that his words were really but a fancy new rationale for shifting the tax burden from the rich to the slaving white-collar masses.

Hardly news to anyone who has bothered to study the Reagan tax legislation, but it is unusual to have it revealed that the president's main spokesman is privately in agreement with the president's opponents. If you are going to be a lying, dishonest politician, you must keep your own counsel. You should not corner magazine writers to brag about what a double-talking, fork-tongued operator you are.

A man who lacks the courage of his own villainy should stick to virtue and truth telling. Some people don't have the talent and the character for smarmy behavior. You must not only tell the lie; if you're going to be a crooked politician, you must shut up about it.

It seems that Mr. Stockman told The Atlantic Monthly magazine how he habitually gives false testimony and disbelieves in his boss' program not out of guilty need to confess, but out of simple braggadocio. He wanted somebody to boast to, somebody who would listen as he explained what a lacquer-haired chump the president is.

Ordinarily when a politician tells a publication little nuggets designed to make him look good and others less so, the purpose is to impress the voters or it is part of a campaign to get a bigger or better job, or to knock off a rival. The wonder of the Stockman confessings is that they had no political purpose whatsoever. They were self-indulgent egotism in a calling where you must be very lucky and-or very powerful to afford such pleasures in public.

Now he must pay the price. At the minimum he will be required to testify barefooted in front of congressional committees so they can be sure he doesn't have his toes crossed.

Mr. Stockman has proved that you can't combine candor with duplicity but what are we to make of the case of Mr. Richard Allen, the president's National Security Advisor, accepting $1,000 from a Japanese publication to set up an interview with Fancy Nancy? The sum is so small that it is an affront to our national honor. Even when Agnew was taking money under the table in the vice president's office 10 years ago, the donations were $1,500 and that was before inflation.

So Mr. Allen's case is not, like Mr. Stockman's, one of dishonesty so much as it is of a decidedly infra dig itchy palm. You can't call a sum that small a bribe. It is more in the nature of a tip, a pour boire, a gratuity. Tacky, tacky, tacky. Indeed, quintessential tack.

Next thing you know he'll be demanding the White House checkroom concession or we'll see him out in front of 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue in a rented doorman's uniform with his white gloved hand sticking out. They say, if you're short of change but would like him to let you in to inspect Nancy's designer lingerie, he'll take food stamps.

Can the System Be Salvaged?

Jeez, David Stockman has really done it this time, hasn't he? He went and told the truth about Reaganomics and made the president mad. For that, Stockman had to contritely offer his resignation and apologize to Reagan, claiming he really didn't mean those nasty things he told the Atlantic. Better he should apologize to the American people for lying through his teeth for the past year about the true nature of supply-side economics. That's not likely to happen, however. Stockman likes his job too much to jeopardize it again.

It's interesting casting; Stockman as a whistleblower on the policies he helped sell to Congress. Of course, the whistleblowing was unplanned. The whiz-kid budget director thought he was speaking off the record when he let down his blow-dried hair and dissected Reaganomics by allowing that:

—Government budget-cutters made "snap judgments" about what programs to slash during the search-and-destroy hysteria of last summer.

—The Pentagon is a "swamp" awash in "blatant inefficiency, poor deployment of manpower (and) contracting idiocy."

—The Kemp-Roth tax cut plan is a "Trojan horse" designed to hide tax breaks for the rich.

—Supply-side economics is just a trendy name for traditional conservative trickle-down policies, in which the rich are allowed to do what they want, in hopes they'll toss a few crumbs to the rest of us when they have finished their repast.

Stockman even acknowledged that, "Whenever there are great strains or changes in the economic system, it tends to generate crackpot theories, which then find their way into the legislative channels." Thank you, David. That's just what some of us have been saying for some time, and you put it very nicely.

Stockman will apparently keep his job — at least for now — because of his high visibility and encyclopedic knowledge of the budgetary maze. If only that was the case with less entrenched but more civic minded government employees. You know the type — federal workers who go public with criticisms of pet Pentagon projects and end up manning a desk in Tierra del Fuego. Or, say, the diplomat in the Carter years who was so impolitic as to actually apologize to an international conference for destroying the Allende government in Chile, and was then made to apologize for apologizing.

As for Stockman, his mea culpa to the White House is a case study in the fine art of covering one's behind. While sputtering that he didn't mean to embarrass the president, Stockman didn't deny saying what the Atlantic reported, and his explanation that his words don't mean what they say is as strained as Nancy Reagan's smile.

The real point of all this, in any case, is not whether Stockman's career is or isn't in jeopardy, but what the policies he's promoted mean for the country and the world. A hint of that can be gleaned from some statistics out of Washington in recent weeks.

One is the 8 percent unemployment rate, highest since the recession of 1975. The other is the U.S.'s continuing double-digit inflation, a skyrocketing stat that will continue to climb despite the Tweedledum and Tweedledee policies of Republicans and Democrats, and despite a sly bureaucratic decision to stop including soaring housing costs in the inflation index. That's the way to whip the economy into shape — just jiggle the numbers and redefine your problems out of existence.

Clearly that solution — so comforting in the suites of Capitol Hill and the chic restaurants of Georgetown — won't wash in the lengthening unemployment lines elsewhere in the country. Reaganomics, as our budget director has acknowledged in spite of himself, is simply a restatement of 19th century laissez faire capitalism, and laissez faire never worked for any but the few millionaires whose descendants now back Ronald Reagan. That's why the reforms of the New Deal were so hastily enacted during the system's most severe crisis. As Reagan and his advisors — with or without David Stockman — undo those reforms, they will not salvage the system. Rather, they will hasten another fiscal collapse, maybe the final one.

Reagan's Report Card

One of the great problems of the American electorate is that once the hoopla of an election has subsided and the elected official has been subjected to the realities of public office, the public demands action — fast action. When it becomes hopelessly evident that the elected individual cannot deliver most or all of his campaign promises Americans become disillusioned and either put their hopes in some other "savior" or alienate themselves from the political arena entirely.

Taking full cognizance of these harsh realities I will attempt to grade President Reagan's performance thus far after being elected over one year ago. Some may sarcastically say that this should instead be a report card of Edwin Meese, James Baker, and Michael Deaver. One cannot overlook stories like the article featured in Newsweek magazine last summer. The article contained information leaked by a White House "staff member" who stated that the president only spends "about three or four hours a day on the presidency" and spends the rest of his time relaxing or reminiscing "about his old Hollywood days."

I suppose this is one campaign promise Reagan kept, for during his campaign he said he planned to delegate a lot of authority. Nevertheless, this does not detract from the fact that Reagan is the president and is held accountable for the actions of his administration.

For the past nine months, Reagan has said he would cut taxes and have a balanced budget by 1984. Using the logic stated earlier, I took the talk of a balanced budget with a grain of salt. Recently it was revealed that the deficit for 1984 may be as high as $145 billion.

I think it would be unfair to find fault with Reagan. Indeed I think a modicum of praise is in line. By skillfully passing his three year 25 percent tax cut, and by cutting government expenditures, Reagan has planted the seeds for curtailing the excessive growth of government. My major qualm is where the tax cuts have been made — or actually where they have not been made.

When Reagan was elected, he said that all beneficiaries of the public purse would feel the pinch of his tax cuts (except, of course, defense). Why then, have subsidies to nuclear power increased while subsidies to solar power decreased? Why have subsidies to the sugar industry surged while funding to the arts have diminished? If the government will not subsidize one form of energy (in this case solar) isn't it logically consistent that Reagan should refuse to pour more dollars into another? Unfortunately, the president's logic hasn't been as consistent as I would like it to be.

When Reagan said he wanted to achieve total military superiority over the Soviet Union, he wasn't joking. Reagan plans to spend $1.5 trillion on defense over the next five years — the most massive military buildup mankind has ever known. It's hardly contestible that after repeated Soviet expansion, the U.S. needs to reassert herself. The question is, is a costly, hardened MX missile silo sitting in the Nevada desert going to make any bit of difference? I suspect that, when budget cut talks resume some time next year, a lot of fingers will be pointing at defense.

I also believe that Reagan's foreign policy needs to be more than just a condemnation of the Soviet Union. Reagan has shown that he is willing to back up his get-tough rhetoric. He has sent military "advisers" to El Salvador and it appears he pretty much authorized the air skirmish with the Libyans. It's time for Reagan to back off, and as Teddy Roosevelt would say, "speak softly and carry a big stick."

In other areas of foreign policy, Reagan has shown no interest in working with our allies (namely Canada and France) in forming a cogent plan to eliminate some of the appalling income disparities which exist between the West and third world nations.

Besides his domestic and foreign policy, there is also Reagan the person. It cannot be denied that he can work with Congress like no other president since Lyndon Johnson. Furthermore, he communicates on television better than any president in history, save perhaps John Kennedy.

There are some disturbing sides too. While Reagan attacks waste in government, he has made his presidency into an ostentatious display of pomp and extravaganza. It must be pretty tough for the ghetto dweller, told to accept his cut in aid for the "good of the country," when he sees Nancy Reagan worrying about the type of new china she's going to buy.

If I had to give Reagan a report card, I would give him a "B" in effort and a D+ in performance.

Program Board Schedules Bowl Competitions

Do you remember watching intercollegiate College bowl competitions on television in the fifties and sixties? The A.S. Program Board is attempting to revitalize these competitions and has scheduled the first competition during the period of Jan. 12 to 20. There will be a mock showing Jan. 7 between a few administrators and student government leaders from noon-1 p.m. in the UCen Catalyst.

For those who never watched the competitions, College Bowl, called the "Varsity Sport of the Mind," is a question and answer game played between two teams made up of four players each. Teams are asked to provide the correct answer as quickly as possible to questions on a broad range of topics.

Any full-time UCSB student is eligible to enter the competition. Teams are encouraged to enter (teams representing clubs, honor societies, or dorms would be natural groupings) or individuals desiring other team members may register at the Program Board Office.

This story was omitted from the Program Board page of Nov. 19.

Housing

(Continued from front page) an apartment complex with two, two-bedroom apartments to be $139,500, and the average price of a complex with four three-bedroom apartments to be $395,000.

Though there are very few single family dwellings in Isla Vista, the average price for a three-bedroom house is $123,000, according to the report. The cost for vacant land is difficult to estimate because there is little available, as a result of the water moratorium imposed by the Goleta Valley Water District in 1972. Without a water hookup, land is essentially undevelopable.

The cost of building new housing is also discussed in the report, with both conventional and unconventional housing being compared. According to the report, geodesic domes have several advantages over conventional housing structures, including lower building costs and shorter construction time.

Two major methods of improving existing housing were presented in the report. The first is the Davis Model Lease Program, instituted originally at U.C. Davis, where a group of students, administrators and the Davis Rental Property Association negotiated a standard lease form that could be used by rental housing owners on a voluntary basis.

The creation of student housing cooperatives, such as the I.V. Rochdale Housing Project, was also discussed in the report.

The report concludes that the current housing market is "characterized by low quality construction, poor maintenance, and an apparent lack of concern on the part of some rental property owners to acknowledge and provide for the special needs of students."

The report makes several recommendations on how the housing situation can be improved. First, the university can purchase apartment buildings in Isla Vista. There should also be a student housing lobby, whose efforts would focus on lobbying to the Goleta County Water District, the South Coast Coastal Commission and various levels of local government.

That police were not

ment program, the Peace Corps changes with changes in the administration. While the last administration was quite supportive, the budget of the current administration can be looked at as an indication of its attitude towards the Peace Corps, Lane said.

Yet the original goals expressed in the Peace Corp Act of 1961, through the ideas of Senator Hubert Humphrey, and President John F. Kennedy, are still in practice today. These are:

—"To promote world peace and friendship by making available to interested countries Americans willing to serve overseas who will help people of these countries to meet their needs for trained manpower;

—"To help promote a better understanding of the American people on the part of the people served;

—"And to promote a better understanding of other people on the part of the American people."

Although the recruiters' week-long stay ended Friday, with a film presentation, they plan to return in February as a result of the warm response they received.

The biggest appeal of the Peace Corps to Americans is "the experience they could never get at home," Lane said, adding that volunteers gain a unique understanding of other cultures as well as all humanity through the two-year term.

present during the rally is conspicuous evidence of collusion, Johnson said. Police arrived several minutes after the shooting. Other evidence, Johnson added, included that Dawson was pictured in the movie as driving the lead vehicle when Klan and Nazi members drove down the street where the rally was underway.

Johnson told the audience to look at the event not as isolated, but to interpret it in the light of the "reality that is confronting us."

Both the petty bourgeoisie and the working class are being oppressed by "monopoly capitalists," and the situation is being made worse by the "thickness of racism," Johnson charged. "The people have the power," he said, "they must unite."

Evidence for his contention that America is crumbling centered on what he called the inherent hypocrisy and contradictions of the "monopoly capitalist system."

For example, Reagan, a "smooth talking cowboy, rode into Washington D.C." with a "mandate" to reverse labor and welfare policies, Johnson said. However, he noted, 100,000 people met him at a labor rally and said, "Cowboy, you don't have no mandate."

Domestic changes reflect worldwide trends, he said. Reagan is a "hypocratic liar," because at the same time he is "talking hard to Libya," he is begging the sale of AWACS to the Saudi Arabians, Johnson said. The recent decision to suggest nuclear arms control to the Russians, suggests to Johnson that, "Reagan came out talking war, now he wants peace."

"The basic contradiction keeps on intensifying," Johnson said, adding, "It's safe to say that things are not going good for the cowboy."

Today, people must back away from the fight with "the power block on the right," which is "suicide," Johnson concluded. Instead, he urged, people must, "fight for an understanding of the situation," to find the "significance of Greensboro," and to therefore "figure out what you can do."

Scholar Reconstructs Ancient Coptic Texts

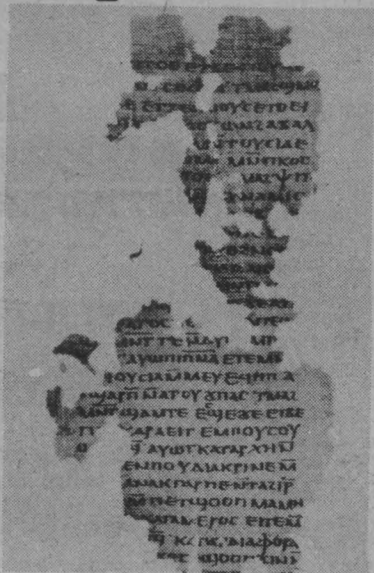

Hoping to find gold but fearing ghosts, two Egyptian farmers in 1945 stood hesitantly over a long-buried jar they had uncovered while digging for nitrates.

Gathering courage, one of them smashed it. Out poured not devils or golden coins, but a swirl of delicate papyrus fragments, the scholars' treasure which became known as the Nag Hammadi library of Coptic Gnostic documents, an archaeological find that rivaled the Dead Sea Scrolls in importance.

One scholar who engaged in the slow painstaking work of reconstructing the texts is Birger Pearson, professor of religious studies, volume editor of Codices IX and X. After 13 years of laboring over the documents, his contribution to their resurrection has been published in English translation with introductions and notes.

"Reconstructing and deciphering these texts was like putting together a puzzle with very few pieces," Pearson says. "The fragmentary status of the two codices made the work much more difficult than it would have been if the material had been preserved more clearly."

His research was an aspect of his scholarly work in the history of early Christianity and the interplay of various groups and points of view leading on the one hand to an "orthodox" Christianity and on the other to exclusion from the Church of groups and ideas labeled as heretical.

The Nag Hammadi library consisted of 12 books or codices, plus eight leaves removed from a 13th book in late antiquity and tucked inside the front cover of the sixth. It proved to be a collection of what was an originally Greek literary production by largely unrelated and anonymous authors spread though the Eastern half of the ancient world and covering a period of almost half a millennium or more. The documents had been translated and transcribed by equally anonymous scribes into Coptic, the Egyptian language written with the Greek alphabet.

The writings gave a first-hand look at the beliefs and lore of the Gnostics, a group of "heretics" who, during the second century, surpassed orthodox Christians in numbers and power in Egypt and perhaps elsewhere in the Mediterranean world. Until scholars deciphered the texts, the only direct source of information on the Gnostics had come from the hostile writings of the early Church fathers, who referred to their books as "full of abominations and of every kind of magic." They were probably buried to keep them from being destroyed during a time when the Gnostics were persecuted.

In 1971, international agreements allowed access to the Old Cairo museum where the documents, by this time nationalized by Nasser, were waiting. The scholars, Pearson among them, brought their own equipment, at first illuminated readers, magnifying glasses and electrical equipment, and eventually more sophisticated tools such as ultraviolet lamps which could pick out marks left by ink now too faded to be read by the naked eye.

Workmen install new cedar siding on the exterior of Building 434, which houses the community housing office, elements of the Educational Opportunity Program/Student Affirmative Action including the central office, and the Women's Center. The $114,000 project, designed to give the building a more permanent look, is to be completed this week. The project is being handled by J. W. Bailey Construction Company, Santa Barbara. Three new directional signs also are being installed at various points outside the building.

UCLA Psychiatrist To Speak Dec. 1

Louis Jolyon West, director of the Neuropsychiatric Institute at UCLA, will lecture on "Violence in American Society Today" at UCSB on Tuesday, Dec. 1.

The talk at 3 p.m. in the UCen Pavilion will be part of a discussion series on violence in American life sponsored by the Hutchins Center.

West is psychiatrist-in-chief of the UCLA Hospital and Clinics. As an educator, he is known for the systematic inclusion of behavioral sciences in medical education. His research has contributed to knowledge in areas including alcoholism, drug abuse, pain, sleep, dreams, disorders of consciousness, hallucinations, hypnosis, methods of treatment and various other clinical psychiatric issues.

His interests have also included

Louis Jolyon West

developments in social psychiatry, the counter-culture, racism and violence. In these and other fields, West has written or edited six books and more than 120 published papers.

Poetry Program Dec. 2

"The American Fantasies: A Reading of Poems and Performance Poems" will be presented by James and Margot Schevill on Wednesday, Dec. 2, at 4 p.m. in 1004 Girvetz Hall.

James Schevill is professor of English at Brown University and during the 1960s was director of the Poetry Center at San Francisco State College. Twelve volumes of his poetry have been published, including The Buddhist Car and Other Characters, The Mayan Poems, and Fire of Eyes: A Guatemalan Sequence. Twenty-five of his plays have been produced throughout the U.S., Canada and Europe. He has received various awards, including Rockefeller and Ford Foundation grants, the Carlos William award, and a Guggenheim fellowship for 1981-82.

Margot Schevill, singer, actress and music educator, made her debut with the San Francisco Opera Company in 1959. She has pursued a concert and opera career throughout the U.S. and Europe, specializing in the performance of 20th century chamber music.

The poetry reading will feature poems by Schevill for two voices, one singing and one speaking. It is being presented by Arts and Lectures.

Canadian Filmmaker To Lecture Today

Canadian animated filmmaker Ishu Patel will give a free lecture and will show eight of his films under auspices of the National Film Board of Canada today at 7:30 p.m. in 1910 Buchanan Hall.

A leader in the field of animated films, he produces and directs educational and experimental films.

Broader Outlook Urged For Religious Studies

Would the study of religion be different if the contents of the New York Times, "60 Minutes," "Issues and Answers," or the Los Angeles Times were used as texts?

Different — and better, thinks Walter Capps, newly re-elected president of the Council on the Study of Religion, who has offered a challenge to his colleagues on the relationship of religious studies to world affairs. Capps is a professor of religious studies.

"The items of most current human interest in the world about us are religious in nature, substance or implication," he said. "They are there before our eyes in the headlines of newspapers. The larger world knows they are religious, recognizes them as such, and even turns to the religious leaders of our time to provide interpretation and commentary."

Yet, he says, religious studies, which entered colleges as a discrete field of study in the mid-1960s, is in danger of becoming preoccupied with matters regional, specific and parochial, "writing term papers to each other rather than thinking through strategy by which religious studies might...contribute to the welfare of our larger collective life."

Phenomena such as the Christian Right, Islamic fundamentalism and international religious strife might be better understood if religion scholars would lend their commentary and expertise, Capps said, since "there is no academic field with better information and clearer sensitivity to global phenomena."

Scholars in religious studies have frequently turned to other fields such as sociology and psychotherapy for comprehensive theories of religious behavior. The current source, according to Capps, is primarily anthropology, specifically the work of the "speculative anthropologists" such as Victor Turner, Mary Douglas, and Clifford Geertz.

Writing in the October bulletin of the Council on the Study of Religion, he reminded his colleagues of theologian Reinhold Niebuhr, who, when he was teaching at Union Theological Seminary in New York, admonished his students that the two source materials which were absolutely essential to their work were the Bible and the New York Times.

Hutchins Center Plans Dialogue On Health Care

A two-day intensive dialogue on "Health Care: Emphasis on Wellness and the Treatment of the Whole Person" will be held Thursday and Friday, Dec. 10 and 11, at UCLA under auspices of the Hutchins Center.

Among participants will be Hoyt Gardner, 1979-80 president of the American Medical Association; Louis Jolyon West, Jr., director of the Neuropsychiatric Institute at UCLA; Virginia Johnson-Masters and William Masters; Lester Breslaw, professor at the School of Public Health, UCLA, and James Grier Miller, president of the Hutchins Center.

They will discuss issues related to the purposes and functions of medical and allied professions, such as the balance of specialists and generalists and the role of nonphysicians in health care, requirements in education of physicians and others which may be related to the escalating costs of health care, and what the implications would be of a shift in the chief emphasis of medical care from disease to health.

The two full days of discussions will be held at the James West Center at UCLA, with a public lecture each afternoon.

11 Grad Students Given Grants

Eleven students have received Humanities Graduate Student Research Grants for the fall quarter.

The grant program, initiated in the 1980-81 academic year, is designed to assist talented graduate students in pursuing original research or other creative projects in the humanities.

Total funding for the grants is $30,000 per academic year, and the maximum grant per student is $1,500. Competition for the grants takes place each quarter. Applicants must be registered graduate students in good standing for the one-year duration of the grant. Faculty sponsorship is required.

A review committee appointed by the Graduate Council makes award recommendations to David

S. Simonett, dean of the graduate division.

Guidelines for grant proposals are available at the graduate division, 3117 Cheadle Hall. The deadline for winter quarter proposals is Friday, Jan. 22, 1982.

The names of recipients of the fall grants and descriptions of their projects follow:

Jeanne E. Arnold, Ph.D. candidate in anthropology, will study prehistoric Chumash craft specializations. Her research will take her to Chumash village sites on Santa Cruz Island and along the Santa Barbara Channel mainland coast.

Deidre M. Boden, Ph.D. candidate in sociology, will conduct a pilot study in her native England to gather data for her dissertation on talk and its interactive social organization.

John Vincent Boyer, M.A. candidate in art history, will study concrete block houses designed and built by Frank Lloyd Wright. His research will take him to the Frank Lloyd Memorial Foundation at Taliesin West in Scottsdale, Ariz.

Rebecca Conard, Ph.D. candidate in history, will conduct research for a study of the California Land Conservation Act within the context of the history of taxation in California.

Anthony J. Goddard, MFA candidate in studio art, will create a painting representing the musical structure of Beethoven's Symphony No. 1.

Hagar Kadima, M.A. candidate in music, will create an orchestral composition. The piece, entitled Silences, will explore the artistic meaning of silence in music as determined by the context in which the silence appears.

Marc Lancet, MFA candidate in studio art, will create several sculptures which will be placed in a public setting, possibly the Hutchins Center.

Heather McKillop, Ph.D. candidate in anthropology, will conduct research on prehistoric Maya sea traders. Her field work will be in Belize, where she already has participated in archaeological projects.

Hector Neff, Ph.D. candidate in anthropology, plans to collect data pertaining to ancient plumbate pottery. He will return to Guatemala, where he has been conducting field work.

Michael Palmer, Ph.D. candidate in religious studies, will conduct research in the children's literature collection of the Library of Congress, Washington, D.C. His work concerns the image of the child in the cult of the home.

Joy Sperling, Ph.D. candidate in art history, will travel to several U.S. museums in connection with her studies of the Northern European influence on 19th century American landscape painting.

Mural

Specific guidelines exist for the placement or removal of any work of public art on campus, which must be approved by the Committee on Art Objects. According to Art Department Chairman Michael Arntz, the committee has long been defunct. When renovation for Building 434, which faces Storke Tower and is next to the parking lot near the campus poll, was planned, it was the Physical Planning Committee's decision to cover the mural.

Arntz, who currently heads the Committee on Art Objects believes the mural shouldn't be preserved. The major reason he cited was the great cost of preserving the mural since it is peeling off its plywood background. "If it was a significant mural by a historically important artist, perhaps preservation would be ordered. However, this is not the case."

Due to a number of student and faculty complaints concerning the removal of the mural a meeting was held on Friday in front of the mural by Arntz and the Committee on Art Objects to make a formal evaluation. In attendance was Peter Chapman, campus planner; Thore Edgre, campus architect; David Farmer, director, University Art Museum; and Brian Beebe, a graduate art student.

"To save the mural would be a futile effort," Arntz said. "It wasn't designed to be a permanent piece of art. At the time the building was put up and the mural painted, no one had any idea about the permanence of this building."

Beebe said it was too bad the mural had to be covered but "agreed with the consensus — the mural is in too great a state of disrepair."

Although they strongly encourage students to create works of art for public appreciation, the committee decided that the mural should be covered because student work should not, in principle, be permanent.

Renovation plans for Building 434 have been under review and in process for the last six or seven years, according to Ernie Zomalt, assistant vice-chancellor for student and community affairs. Zomalt said that the facilities management person responsible for the project at the time the decision was told to consult the Art Department about the mural and asked the department if they wanted the plywood painting. The department told the administration that the mural had no particular value and "from their perspective, was not something they wanted," according to Zomalt.

The project had an original budget for both interior and exterior development of the building. However, according to Zomalt, there was not enough money allotted to perform the exterior work.

It was therefore requested that Vice Chancellor Birch allocate discretionary funds and that Facilities Management provide some of the money from a deferred maintenance fund reserved for painting, roofing, and other exterior work.

Zomalt's office then took this package of funds and asked the Reg Fee committee to match it with an equal amount. However, the committee was unwilling to make this recommendation to the chancellor and advised the continuation of renovation with the funds available.

As a result of the decision, the entire landscaping plan for Building 434 will not be implemented, nor will the planned connection of Building 434 to Building 477 take place.

County Finance

held on what are called policy matters, where we discuss changes in the budget and county departments come before the Board of Supervisors and plead their cases about the money they need. The board then decides whether or not to give them any funds more than allocated by our proposed budget. By Aug. 30, we adopt our final budget for the county," he explained in detail.

The federal budget will also effect the allocations in the Santa Barbara County budget. Finalized Oct. 1, the federal budget forced implementation of welfare reductions in the county.

A program or department which has its county-based funding cut has very little choice in what their response can be, Elbaum said.

"They either have to do things cheaper and more efficiently, using less money for the same amount of services, or they, in turn, have to cut their services. There's no other option."

SDSU Takes A Dive—And Wins

By TRACY ALFORD
Nexus Sports Writer

This past weekend, the women's swim team had a heartbreaking loss against San Diego State, losing by only eight points. The final score was 78-70, with the Aztecs coming out on top. Actually, the Gauchos really outswam the Aztecs, beating them by eight points. However, once again, the absence of a diving team caused a loss of 16 points, which was enough for San Diego to score a victory. As coach Inge Renner said, "The diving killed us. Something really has to be done about the diving program."

Despite the loss, many fine times were turned in by Gaucho swimmers. Donna Shumate won the 500 free and set a new school record in the 1000 freestyle with a time of 10:27.3. Terri Scannell also swam well in the 1000 placing fourth. In the 200 backstroke, Nina Somerville placed first and Deirdre Fisher placed second, swimming a personal lifetime best. Somerville also won the 50 butterfly and Sharon Wilson finished right behind her. Wendy Ray was a double winner in the 50 and 200 yard breaststroke. Linda Grimley also swam well, scoring seconds in the 200 butterfly and the 400 individual medley.

After the three meter diving, the Gauchos were eight points down, but they didn't give up. In the 400 individual medley, Shumate and Grimley placed first and second respectively to pull within one point of the lead. The 400 freestyle relay would be the deciding race, and unfortunately the Gauchos were out touched. The race was still up for grabs until the last 15 yards when San Diego edged Santa Barbara out. Thus, San Diego won the relay and the meet. Penny Shofe, Sharon Wilson, Nina Somerville and Penny Powell did set a new school record though of 3:35.8 in the 400 free relay.

To say the least, this loss was a hard one for Renner to accept. "I really didn't think we'd lose," she said. "It just happened to be the diving part that really hurt us. Everyone swam really well though, and I'm very proud of how the girls performed. Also, the San Diego swimmers were shaved and well-rested and we weren't. We'll just have to show them at national's that we're the better team."

UOP Wins Again

Last Saturday, the UCSB women's volleyball team lost to the Tigers of the University of the Pacific for the second time this year. Scores of the match were 15-10, 15-8, and 15-7.

"We simply did not play well," said UCSB coach Kathy Gregory about the match. "We made 30 offensive errors in three games. It's never easy to play on the road, but we did not play our best."

The Gauchos will have a chance to redeem themselves against the UCLA Bruins at Pauley Pavillion tomorrow night.

A Switching Of Team Allegiance

By BILL ROTHSCHILD
Nexus Sports Writer

Call it Murphy's Law No. 37:

"When you decide to root for a team, it will lose." And No. 38:

"When you give up on a team, it will win."

If George Steinbrenner really wants the Yankees to win the World Series, he'll sell them. Angel's owner Gene Autry could save money, stay out of the free agent draft and take a world cruise next season and then come back to read about the Angels' miraculous mid-season comeback.

It's like when you go to a ballgame with a friend and you've sat through two hours of no-action play. You're in the middle of the snack bar line waiting for a hotdog and beer, when you hear a roar from the crowd as No. 33 breaks loose for an 80 yard, broken-field touchdown run.

You run back into the stadium yelling "replay! replay!" while everyone else is hitting their buddies and saying, "did you see that! Unbelievable!"

And of course, it's the only score in the game.

So what happened to the San Francisco 49ers?

Not to be superstitious, but when you sit through one losing season after another and then leave only to find that the same team you suffered through all those losing seasons with is now leading their division by three and one half games, you begin to wonder; was it me?

In every 49er game I ever went to, the offenses moved in the same direction as the defense.

I'm used to seeing 49er quarterbacks on their backs, not leading the NFC in (Please turn to p.12, col.1)

Successful Debut for Shofe, UCSB

By RON DICKER
Nexus Sports Editor

With the exception of new UCSB swim coach Larry Shofe getting his first two victories at the helm, there was nothing surprising or significant about the Gauchos' weekend wins over San Diego State and U.C. Irvine.

Both opposing schools are desperately trying to keep their swim programs above water and Shofe, by not entering many swimmers in their specialties, and by giving exhibition status to a few of the athletes, mercifully held the score down in both meets.

Because of a heavy training day preceding the first meet, the Gauchos didn't perform quite as well as in the Irvine meet. Against San Diego State, the locals won by a 63-47 margin.

The Gauchos took all the freestyle events, including a surprising win by freshman Joe O'Brian, who raced to a 9:52.0 win in the 1000-yard event. Other winners in the freestyle events were Tore Blichfeldt in the 200 (1:45.3), Greg Asplund in the short sprint (21.8), Swedish arrival Per Bjorkman, who won the century with a 48.0 clocking and a repeat by Blichfeldt in the 500.

Despite sore muscles from the previous day's difficult weight lifting session, Ken Little managed to record a personal record 1:59.6 in the 200 butterfly.

Ending the meet with a victory, the 4X100 relay team of Asplund, Lum, Bjorkman and Neff combined for a 3:16.7 time.

Against the Anteaters, the Gauchos improved their times considerably while gaining a 60-51 victory. Don't be fooled by the close score, though.

The Gauchos began the meet on an auspicious note with a convincing win in the 400 medley relay. Bill Bretschneider, Steve Hatch, Dan Tilly, and Ken Neff teamed up for a 3:37.8 win, a five second improvement over the previous day's race.

The anchor man in the relay, Neff was also double sprint winner (21.4, 47.6). Ken Davis added to his medley win over the Aztecs with a victory in the 200 butterfly (1:52.6).

Other first place finishers for the Gauchos were as follows: Joe O'Brien in the 200 freestyle (1:46.4), Tore Blichfeldt in the 1000 free (9:49.5), Tim Glass in the 200 IM (2:01.1) and Aaron Goldschmidt in the 200 backstroke (2:05.3).

Team Allegiance

passes. I always thought the 49er linebackers were supposed to run into the kicker after he kicked the ball. And the yellow flags kind of gave a 49er fan a sense of patriotism.

The 49ers haven't won a division title since 1972, but they can clinch one this year with an Atlanta loss in any of their remaining four games.

"Aha!" I thought last week when they lost to Cleveland, 15-12. "Here comes the slide."

It seemed reasonable.

Only two years ago I was rooting for the wrong team when the Rams won four of their last five and went on to play in the Super Bowl.

So Sunday, rooting again for the wrong team, I watched the 49ers kick a last-second field goal to knock LA out of the NFC West race.

It was the first time that the Rams have been swept by the 49ers (They lost 20:17 at Candlestick on Oct. 25) in a season since 1966.

It also marks the first time the Rams have missed the playoffs in nine years.

I'm expecting any day now to get a knock on the door:

"Hello. I'm with the Los Angeles Rams. I was sent here by Georgia Frontiers to ask a special favor of you."

"Yes?"

"We were wondering if you might switch your allegiance to another team. Not to be ungrateful, but we have to cover all bases."

Anyone need a fan?

In summing up his team's performance over the weekend, Shofe said, "I think we swam pretty well for this time of year, especially in the Irvine meet. I think it's a good indication of what we have."

Surfriders Win

In their second league match of the year, the UCSB surf team downed Cal State Long Beach 102-84 last Saturday. The Gauchos showed good depth in the three to five foot Huntington Beach surf, putting eight out of twelve men into the semi-finals.

Individually, Matt Rapf paced the waveriders with a second overall, Paul Lauer took third, and rookie Gary Guercio fourth.

Tim Martin led the kneeboarders with a first and Becky Rothstein paced the women with a second overall. The Gauchos' next meet will be at Sands Beach on Saturday, Jan. 23, against L.A. Harbor College.
