Regents Say Yes to UC Employee Salary Increase

By Davia Gray Staff Writer

In an attempt to make salaries more competitive, the UC Regents have granted pay hikes to staff, faculty and senior officials of the University, including Chancellor Henry

T. Yang.
Effective today, University of California faculty members will receive, in addition to merit increases, a 5 percent increase in salary, while staff and administrators will receive a 4 percent increase in salary, Yang said. The money will come from the University's general funds, which are included in the UC budget, he added.

The pay raises, approved by the regents on Sept. 20, are long overdue for UC employees, according to Yang, who received a salary hike of $12,000, making his annual pay $193,000.

"Due to the budget reductions in 1990-94, our faculty, staff and administrators have been doing more work with less workforce,' he said. "Our salaries have fallen behind the eight comparison institutions. The pay raise is essential to our morale and helps our recruitment and retention effort."

The need to make the UC schools more competitive with other schools such as MIT, Yale, Harvard and Stanford was the reason cited for the salary hike, according to Yang.

This year's increase is part of a multi-year plan to gradually make our faculty salaries competitive with our comparison institutions," he said.

Chancellors, vice presidents, officers of the regents, the University auditor and UC President Richard C. Atkinson were also given similar pay boosts.

While there is little disagreement that faculty and staff deserve the raises, some controversy surrounds the inclusion of the senior UC officers in the pay hike, said Student

Regent Jess Bravin. "I agreed to the pay raises for the faculty members because the quality of the University really does depend on the caliber of teaching and research they do, but that doesn't carry over to the bureaucrats," he

"To me, it doesn't make sense to grant these massive pay hikes while clamping down on the graduate students who just want the chance to ask for a pay increase. They seem to be rewarding the wealthy and comfortable while striking back at the poor grunts who do all the work."

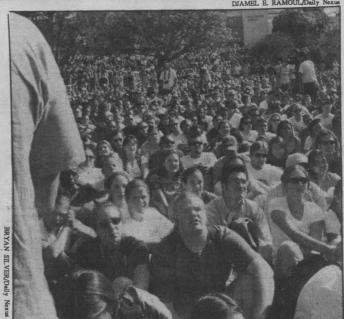

Competition should not be the main factor in granting raises to the senior officials, according to Associated Students External Vice President for statewide affairs Colin McCarthy.

"I agree that we need to have competitive salaries, [but] the University could be doing other things to make it a better place, to up for grabs Nov. 5, with six candidates vying for the support of I.V. voters.

The three positions up for election are those of current

WASHINGTON (AP) Under pressure from the White House and Senate Democrats, congressional Republicans agreed to a sweeping domestic-violence gun ban, abandoning most of their alternative proposal.

The final language was hammered out over the weekend as part of the huge spending bill before the Senate. It expands the current ban on gun ownership or possession by felons to include virtually anyone convicted of a misdemeanor involving domestic violence.

Barr contended Lautenberg's original bill was unconstitutional. States do not uniformly define misdemeanor crimes, he said,

He also complained that the Lautenberg proposal ignored the general-law exemption that would have kept the gun ban from applying to police of-ficers and military personnel. The final agreement included Barr's language removing the exemption.

In the agreement reached during the weekend, congressional Republicans dropped Barr's language requiring notification of the gun ban at the time of arrest. They also agreed to modify Barr's language extending the ban only to persons convicted after a jury trial, or after having waived a jury trial.

Deletion of Seizure Provision Preserves New Smog Check

SACRAMENTO (AP) - A bill signed into law Monday revamps portions of the state's Smog Check II program, but regulators say they have no intention of doing away with the controversial emissions testing altogether.

The beefed-up clean air effort has drawn loud public protests and a letter signed by more than half of the members of the state Legislature requesting that the program be put on hold at least temporarily.

The program requires each of the state's 24 million cars to have a smog test every two years. Smog Check II, in particular, aims to eliminate "gross polluters" — the worst 10 percent of cars, blamed for half of auto-related smog in the state.

The bill signed by Gov. Pete Wilson removes one of the least popular elements of the program, a provision which opponents of the checks said would have allowed the state to seize and destroy gross polluters.

Backers of the checks denied that the government ever planned to seize vehicles and didn't fight the removal of the provision.

But otherwise, Smog Check II will proceed as planned, Environmental Protection Secretary James Strock said in a letter to Sen. Ray Haynes (R-Temecula). "The California Constitution forbids state agencies from declaring laws unenforceable or unconstitutional," Strock wrote.

Weather

They're gone, all gone.

One minute, it was full, and the next empty, vacated, devoid of life. Only stray pieces of campaign flyers blew across the empty plaza in the cool wind of the fading evening, leaving the ghosts of the day's events to haunt the silent twilight. The students, the faculty, the organizers and the politicians had vanished, their physical mark removed as quickly as the bus that fled from Santa Barbara to continue its cross-California crusade.

But the fundamental message, a message that cuts deeper than partisan politics or mere ideology, was not forgotten. We are the future, the stewards of this planet and this great nation and state. We, the students, possess the ability to make a true and wonderful difference.

Yet how can we make that difference if we do not see the wraith of apathy that haunts our every step? How can we stumble into a brighter future when we can't even stumble into class with the enthusiasm to learn the knowledge that will empower us? Why do we settle for apathy and

Are we so lazy that we would rather sit on our asses and watch the world go to hell rather than engage in a little effort that could make a big difference? I don't think so - at least, I hope not.

On a meteorological note, we should still have weather today.

Students Seek Best Textbook Buys

By Kerri Webb Reporter

After facing the costs that surround moving into dorms or a new apartment, students find themselves with additional financial choices when the time arrives to purchase course texts.

According to junior physiology major Marina Pejcic, the task of buying textbooks and supplies frequently equates to hundreds of dollars each quarter in addition to frustration over the cost.

"I'm kind of pissed because I have to spend $200 on books three times a year," she said. But book retailers are not to blame for the high totals encountered at the cash register, according to one local bookstore manager.

"It's the publishers who adjust the price of a book," said Kathy Bryant, UCSB Bookstore textbook department assistant manager. "The bookstore doesn't make that much money.

Most money brought in by text sales goes directly to the publisher, with additional money taken out for state taxes, leaving little for profit, she said.

Many college book re-tailers also offer students the alternative of used textbooks at up to 25 percent below the original cost, an option that makes the previously owned materials popular.

"We try to have as many used books as possible," said Dan Daly, Isla Vista Bookstore manager. "Saving money for the cus-tomer is our greatest interest."

Stores offer to buy back texts during the year, offering a sort of rebate for students who prefer to use virgin texts.

Students can receive up to 50 percent of the original price when they sell their books back to the bookstores at the end of each quarter," said Jan

Goodrich, UCSB Bookstore textbook department coordinator.

Books are bought back on a supply-and-demand basis. If stores have too many copies of the same book, students may not get much compensation, Daly

According to some students, this factor makes the practice undesirable.

"I never sell my books," said senior biology major Christine Chen. "I know that I'll only get one-tenth of what I paid back, so I just keep them for my own reference and library."

Other students are frustrated at the price paid for the books compared to the amount of use they get

Parking Problems Can Be Solved Through Individual Initiative

Editorial

Witness the future:

The skies above Storke Tower are black with soot, and so are the parking garages. That's right — parking garages. After the Great Campus Parking Crisis peaked at the turn of the century, emergency plans were authorized and the high-rises began their assault on the horizon. They started building them outward from the center of campus, and Storke Plaza was the first to go. Now the beastly behemoths dominate the skyline, blocking out the sun. Everyone's slowly losing their tans....

OK, enough clairvoyance. It's 1996 and a parking crisis threatens the quality of campus and Isla Vista life as we have known it. Streets once desolate during the summer are now choked with vehicles. It appears that every student has decided life wouldn't be as sweet without wheels. Campus parking is packed where it's crucial, i.e. near classes, and amply available where it's least used, i.e. in the boondocks of San Rafael.

Simply put, there's not enough parking to go around, and sacrifices are being made to compensate for auto overpopulation. Most recently, the campus archery range has been scheduled to be buried by new tennis courts when the current Lot 16 courts give way to a proposed four-level, 800-space garage.

All this in spite of a highly developed public transportation system that will become more extensive with the coming of the Associated Studentsorganized I.V.-campus shuttle in fall next year. All this in spite of a supposedly "environmentalist" student body with no compunctions about motoring to campus, unnecessarily spewing carbon monoxide, because it's just too much of a strain to walk those grueling 15-20 minutes that separate I.V. from UCSB.

Come on. The upward trend of collective laziness will eventually result in an even tighter parking situation than we are presently feeling. If we don't begin better utilizing our resources, our campus will become a parking-palace wasteland. To consider:

• Use alternative forms of transportation — buses, bikes, skateboards, feet — whenever possible. And fer cryin' out loud, unless you have a disability, you've got no bloody business driving to campus from I.V. or Francisco Torres! Get some exercise! Walk the dog! Stop being such wimps! I.V. dumpster-divers walk amongst trash and broken glass all day to scrounge up a few bucks from what the decadent, privileged soft-soles throw away. And you're telling us a few blocks is too far a stroll for you? Learn to ambulate.

• Get a hold of your representatives in A.S. and tell them to rescue the Ride Board from the bowels of their Purple Palace headquarters. A.S. should set up the board in a place where people might actually know of its existence and can start networking for shared road trips. Out in front of the UCen would be a good place to start. Remember: If it's easier to carpool home from UCSB, fewer people will bring back cars. Ergo fewer people will be stuck for a space. Ergo happiness.

ve way to a proposed four-level, 800-space garage.

All this in spite of a highly developed public cles, preferably ones that don't muck up the air too ansportation system that will become more extenmuch.

• If you must drive, drive smaller cars or motorcy-cles, preferably ones that don't muck up the air too much.

If you have any more ideas on how to alleviate UCSB's parking crunch, pass them our way and tell everyone you can buttonhole. Unless we deviate from our present course, we just may encounter the nightmarish scene from Blade Runner that started out this editorial. And that would be bad for our lungs, nerves and lives — as well as our tans.

The letters were the same in two ways: They both described the positive aspects of their candidate, and both ripped on the negative points of the candidate's opponent.

As I was reading this, I began to ponder whether ordinary students at this campus actually took the time to write these letters. Thoughts ran through my mind that possibly these letters were not written by students presenting their opinions. Instead, they appeared to be letters planted by the campaigns to get some free press coverage.

Having worked on numerous campaigns and experienced firsthand how they are run, I didn't come to this conclusion without understanding the system. At both the state and local levels, one of the key strategies in a close race is to acquire as much free media coverage as possible.

To acquire this coverage, campaigns will organize letters-to-the-editor meetings in which they gather a group of supporters and brainstorm possible writing topics for publication in newspapers. The supportersturned-writers are mere pieces that fit into a greater puzzle of campaigning.

This is a general problem with today's campaigns that cuts across partisan lines. Candidates and their managers are pursuing this tool of media manipulation now more then ever, no matter what the costs are. In this case, it is at the expense of cynicism among students who read the letters.

Already, students have so little faith in the political system that few issues matter to them. Clearly contrived letters only add to this problem, and do nothing more than create a hostile relationship between politicians and their constituents in the student population.

What's more shocking is that the UCSB students would participate in coached writing. For students to pour gas on the fire by blatantly abusing their own college media system is wrong. There is no need for campaigns to use the students' voices — as well as their publication — as a form of attacking their opponents.

I have no qualms with a good issues debate. Anyone who can make a compelling argument on solid issues deserves my respect whether I agree with their opinion or not. However, manipulative campaigning tactics serve a political agenda more than presenting a topic for debate.

Cloning the politicians' messages in the guise of student opinions detracts from the purpose of the Nexus. The Reader's Voice should be exactly what the title suggest the students' voices.

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I want to congratulate you on the recent article I read in your paper by Henry Sarria about "the Heroin Demon" (Daily Nexus, 'The Heroin Demon Thrives in Isla Vista,"

Mr. Sarria's article was on point and accurate. His friend Dave suffered the way countless other heroin users have. It is indeed unfortunate that this nasty drug is experiencing a renewed popularity. Heroin has always been and will always be a oneway street and is, as Mr. Sarria illustrates, quickly addictive and almost always causes life-long problems, however long that is.

Your paper's responsible attitude of educating your readers on this horrible problem shows maturity and the type of leadership that is needed to remind our peers of the pitfalls in life they may not see

Santa Barbara Channel Features Host of Sealife

Whale Watching With the Santa Barbara Museum of Natural History Provides Summer Excitement

Join Nexus reporter Caroline Blake as she takes a voyage with photographer Erin Derby on the Condor in search of the elusive blue and humpback whales.

It was a perfect Santa Barbara day as three humpback whales swam alongside the sightseeing ship Condor and blew plumes of atomized water onto the enthralled passengers.

Even the saltiest seadogs were impressed. "I have been whale watching so many times," said Capt. Ron Hart, "but they never cease to amaze me.

On a unique day such as this, Hart prefers not to call the trip "whale watching," but "whale experiencing," for sealife ranging from blue whales to humpbacks were joined by porpoises, sea lions and 2,000 dolphins.

According to Condor owner Fred Benko, this trip was a very lucky experience because of the magnitude and closeness of the sightings, since only about 10,000 blue whales are left in the world and they only spend 14 percent of their time at the surface. It is a very exclusive club of whale watchers who have actually seen blue whales, Benko added.

The trip began with a presentation by Jeff Dominelli, a volunteer with Whale Corps, a group from the Santa Barbara Museum of Natural History dedicated to whale education and research. The lecture was accompanied by discovery materials, including baleen an appendage in the mouths of certain whales that helps strain and retain food — and specimens of whale lice, krill and whale bones and Three humpbacks performed around the Condor, and according to Dominelli, the humpback whales are quite playful and like to approach the boat and flap their fins and flukes on the water. Weighing in at 80,000 pounds each and measuring up to 55 feet in length, the humpbacks blew plumes of water 15 feet into the air.

They can go down as deep as 250 feet to feed on plankton, and as they leave the surface, they leave a large circle of still, glassy water that sailors have named the whale's 'footprint.'

Humpbacks are very willing to approach the Condor. The boat poses no threat to the whales because the large mammals have better hearing than any land animal — especially in the dense water - which warns them of the vessel's proximity.

A distinct group of 1,200 humpbacks has been identified in the channel due to the catalog of photographs taken by Cascadia Research and other whale watchers. All 1,200 whales have the same song, comprised of whistles, clicks and tones, even though the song changes from year to year.

Humpbacks are now an endangered species — only 28,000 exist worldwide.

As soon as the humpbacks swam away, a group of 100foot-long blue whales had the watchers' full attention. These animals grow up to 110 feet and weigh 25 metric tons. They can also put away two to six tons of krill each day and shoot plumes of water 30 feet into the

Scientists have estimated that at the turn of the century there were 4,500-5,000 blue whales in the North Pacific, but from 1910-1973 approximately 360,000 blue whales were killed worldwide. Today it is estimated there are as few as 1,400 blue whales left in the North Pacific. For the last four years, blue whales have been spotted in large numbers off the Santa Barbara coast and their population increase looks promising, said research biologist John Calambokidis of Cascadia Research.

Blue whales can communicate over 1,000 miles and use a low-frequency ground wave that can sound louder than a Concorde on take-off. When they dive below 1,200 feet, the whales pass into denser water that helps to bounce back the signals of the whale song. It is believed the whales can communicate globally, but information on how remains sparse.

ful weather — a perfect whale watching day, but it was far from over. The Condor headed out to Santa Cruz Island, home to the ancestors of the Chumash Indians and hundreds of sea lions. The island also has one of the world's largest sea caves — the Painted Cave, named by the Indians but painted by nature as water and lichens have bleached and colored the rocks.

There was one last awe-inspiring whale watching sight. Many people have seen a dolphin pick a fish from the hand of a trainer at a seaside resort, but 2,000 dolphins following a fishing charger in the Pacific was much more impressive. As far as the eye could see: dol-

In their natural environment, dolphins live up to 35 years, while in captivity they only survive for five years despite being one of the more hardy sea mammals.

The god did not want to see her people suffer, so she turned them into dolphins. Hence the 2,000 dolphins that accompanied the Condor are the ancestors of the Chumash Indians who guard the channel today, according to the tale.

Dominelli rated the trip as one of his top three whale experiences

'It is really rare that the humpbacks will come so close to the boat. They usually just surface and then leave. This was a really unique day," he said.

Other enthusiasts included Kelly Read and Danny Lyon, on holiday from Pickham, England. "I've got to get loads of photos. My mum loves dolphins," Read

Researchers are continually trying understand the whales sighted between the Channel Islands and the Santa Barbara coast Recently, seven government agencies including the Channe Island Marine Sanctuary, the Marine Mammal Center and the National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration — have carried out studies on whale feeding patterns.

One study involved tagging two whales for 48 hours to see how deep they dove in order to get food. It was discovered they go as deep as 600 feet in the 1.800-foot-deep channel

Condor crew member Richie Smits said that although studies on feeding patterns are not conclusive, t is possible the whales have come to the channel over the last four years to feed on the krill population that thrives in the currents off the Santa Barbara coast. This theory of following the food supply has been used to explain why the whales go down to the Baja California coast during the winter months.

"Blue whales have been seen in large numbers in the channel for four years, and this area seems to be a catchbasin for southern animals at their most northern point and vice versa," he said. "About two-thirds of the world's whales have been documented in the Calambokidis said Cascadia Research has been studying the whale population and their movement and migratory patterns.

"We can identify individual whales by their markings, and we have counted 800 humpbacks and 900 blue whales in the channel," he

For identification purposes, Cascadia Research photographs all whales spotted in the channel. Many of the photos are taken by Benko on his tours.

Calambokidis said years of research have found the same humpback whales return to the channel each

The Whale Corps has also been studying whales in the area. Only in its first year and staffed by around 70 volunteers, the group works with the Condor from February to April, concentrating on the gray whale population. Gray whales can be seen from the land and appear in the channel twice a year

Tours have attracted people from all over the world. Hart said. Groups from Scotland. Germany and Japan have made special trips to Santa Barbara specifically to catch a glimpse of the endangered blues.

"Whale watching is on the increase, and we even have people from Greenpeace who have devoted their lives to saving these animals, but have never actually seen one," Hart said.

Whale watching as a commercial activity along the Southern California coast began in 1955. The Condor has been giving tours since it was built 20 years ago.

The captain also pointed out that whale watching is excellent for the Santa Barbara economy and that the boats pose no threat to the whales themselves, and the study of mammals can help people understand nature.

"People tend to destroy what they don't understand and so we need to heighten awareness," Hart said. "The more people that know, the higher awareness there is and the more chance the whales have of making it.'

What a whale of a tale! This humpback's tail brought tour goers to the edge of the boat in marvelous wonder.

As the Condor headed home, Hart related the legend of the Rainbow Bridge: The Chumash Indians believe that dolphins were created on Santa Cruz Island.

The Chumash ancestors lived on the island, and when times got hard and food was scarce, the Indians spotted a larger island that promised better supplies. This larger island as actually the mainland of California.

The Indians prayed to their god for help, and in reply she created a rainbow stretching from the island to the mainland for the Indians to use as a bridge. The Indians were warned not to go near the edge of the rainbow bridge, but human curiosity got the better of them and many fell into the sea.

The fact that the regents have approved student fee hikes in the past but increased pay is another concern for McCarthy.

"We are still facing a projected 8.7 percent fee increase this year that's going to be on the budget presented to the regents this month, on top of a $40 technology fee they are proposing," he said. "I think it's pretty ridiculous that they complain about students and that we should pay more. If you took one percent of all of the salaries of these people and you gave them to stu-dents, think about how many students you could send to school."

According to Bravin, the pay increases may have a negative effect on the University's public image.

"It sends the wrong message to the public," he said. "It shows people that the UC has too much extra money, or that their priorities are backward if they can raise [student] fees and then give pay in-creases to some of the wealthiest people in California, so why support them?"

Aries (March 21-April 19) - Today is a 9 - You'll be able to find an interesting conversation on just about any subject today. If you're not in the mood to argue, burn up your energy with physical activity instead. Run errands first, so you have plenty of time for team sports later.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) - Today is a 4 - Paperwork will take up way too much time, especially if you put it off. Extra work could bring in extra money. Or you could sell something. An objet d'art could mean more to somebody else than it does to you. Don't peddle anything that belongs to Gemini (May 21-June 21) - Today is a 10 - You're in fine form today. Settle a dispute with a neighbor by doing what you both want. A romantic decision will last, and push you to take action. Don't worry, you're on the right path. Stop fretting about what might happen and get busy doing it. Cancer (June 22-July 22) - Today is a 3 - Today, you really must write that letter or make that phone call you've been avoiding. It may be difficult at first, but you'll feel better once it's done. A private conversation with a mutual friend helps you understand your roommate better.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) - Today is a 10 - Your team is red hot today. It may be more intellectual than physical, however. Your friends can help you achieve a goal that's been hovering just beyond your reach. You provide the motivation and they provide a wealth of expertise.

Virgo (Aug. 22-Sept. 22) - Today is a 4 - Go shopping for a work-related item this moming. If a passionate friend wants to discuss a private matter, be willing to listen. Don't be talked into anything that's not in your own best interests. Let your conscience be your guide

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) - Today is a 10- If you've got a manuscript hidden in the closet, now's the time to send it to the publisher. If you haven't, get one started. A social event could give you a good idea. If you write about the juicy gossip you hear, make sure to change the names.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 21) - Today is a 4 - This is not a good day for secrets, especially about money. On the other hand, if there's anything you want to know, just ask. A breakdown at home could get expensive, but this is also a good time to take out a loan. Shop for the best rate, of course.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) - Today is a 9 - Definitely attend a meeting or party today. You could meet a person who'll make your life a lot more interesting. You're an excellent teacher, but every once in a while you get to be the student. If you get the chance today, grab it.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) - Today is a 4 - If you're up against a tough assignment, call a friend. With a little help, even the most difficult tasks can be fun. An older person is having trouble making a decision. Your advice is excellent, but may not be heeded immediately

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) - Today is a 10 - You're even better than usual with words today. Answer your correspondence and all your phone messages. You'll still have time for a meaningful conversation. Tonight, let somebody talk you into going a little further afield than usual.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) - Today is a 4 - There's a lot of confusion at home right now. That can be fun, but not if you were looking forward to quiet time. If you want to understand your sweetie better, ask your inlaws that personal question you've been thinking about.

Today's Birthday (Oct. 1). You could get a chance to travel this year. Make it happen. Start studying a foreign language in December. One dream comes true in January, but another's delayed. An old sweetheart has the best advice in February. Accept a dare in April, but take your own safety net. A flight of fancy in June takes you even further than you expected. Settle down to a life you love in August. A detail you remember solves the puzzle in September

UCSB Finds Rhythm Against SMU, Ties Air Force Over the Weekend

■ Miraculous 1-0 Win Over #6 Mustangs Could Turn Season Around

By Steven Large Staff Writer

Do you believe in miracles? At 1-5-1, the UCSB men's soccer team thought it needed one as it went to Dallas to play #6 Southern Methodist University (7-3) and the 7-1 Air Force.

But after beating the Mustangs 1-0 on Friday and tying the Falcons 3-3 on Sunday, the only question the Gauchos are asking themselves now is, "When can we play next?"

"I really don't know what it was that was holding us back,' junior co-captain Danny Mann said. "But whatever it was, we're over it now."

The Gauchos, now carrying a 2-5-2 record, may not be the same team that they were last year when they achieved their first-ever postseason berth. But they also are not the team they were at the beginning of this season, when scoring a goal seemed as far-fetched as producing a

"After we beat SMU, people started showing more confidence," said senior midfielder Kristian Berre. "This might have been the turnaround point in our season.

"When you're losing, people start nagging on each other for little things and don't focus on what they need to do. But that one win against SMU might be enough to pull us all in the right direction.

The win against the Mustangs was even more remarkable considering Santa Barbara was outshot by its opponent 18-4. Mann had two of the Gaucho shots on goal, while senior Ryan Schomberg produced the other two. Freshman goalkeeper Trent Ulicny, who is playing in place of the injured sophomore Stewart Sanders this season, had a busy day at the net. However, he was able to shut out SMU with six saves in the game.

The three goals that UCSB scored in the Air Force tie were equal to the number of goals the Gauchos had scored in the previous six games combined.

Schomberg and Berre scored a goal each in regulation, and sophomore Aron Wellman scored the lone Santa Barbara goal in overtime to keep UCSB out of the loss column for the weekend.

"It was a great weekend," Mann said. "Mentally it helped us a lot. We went in there confident and the energy was there. We really wanted to play - we weren't there to lose.

This weekend, Gauchos will take their act on the road again to face UCLA on Friday and Cal State Northridge on Sunday. With two quality games under their belts, the Santa Barbara team will go into the games with a new perspective.

"The heart and desire is here now," Mann said. "I can't wait

TAKE THAT: UCSB men's soccer wins a crucial game against SMU and salvages a tie against Air Force over the weekend. The team hopes to build confidence from the success.

Gauchos Shut Out Consecutively, Manage One Conference Victory

By Mike Hershfield

The UCSB women's soccer team has a week to regroup before its next game, after playing three tough conference matches in six days.

They came away from the crucial stretch with a close victory and two tough defeats.

The squad began last week by shutting out Cal Poly San Luis Obispo 1-0 in the first Big West Conference soccer match between the two schools. Cal Poly joined the Big West at the beginning of this season.

Freshman Cindy Goebel scored her first career goal in the 30th minute to give her team the win against the Mustangs. Things went downhill for the Gauchos after that first win. UCSB returned home Friday on the short end of another 1-0 score to UC Irvine Two days later, Santa Barbara's defense collapsed as they suffered a resounding 4-0 defeat at Cal State Fullerton. Although the last two games were both shutout losses, Head Coach John Cossaboon saw a distinct difference in the way his team played in the matches.

Ilsa Bertolini

"It was like night and day," he said. "We played a very tight match against Irvine, and it could have gone either way. We were pressuring the ball as a team and every player was playing with intensity. That wasn't the case with Fullerton.

"If we don't pressure our opponents and force them to make mistakes — and capitalize on those mistakes - we're going to have an average-to-poor game. And that's what happened at CSUF," he added.

Junior goalkeeper Ilsa Bertolini continued her tireless effort with 11 saves over the weekend. She is the only Gaucho player to play all 90 minutes of match play. She has recorded 54 saves and has allowed only 21 goals in 153 shot attempts.

With half of their conference games completed, the squad is searching for ways to score and win games. The team has produced only nine goals in 10 games.

Sophomore forward Kristy Witzman believes the potential for success is present. "We have great athletes and we have great players. But if our competition isn't that good, we play down to their level, and that's a bad thing. If we want to win, we can win," she said.

The team will have a chance at some quality competition this Sunday at 3 p.m. when they take on traditional powerhouse USC at Harder Stadium.

Santa Barbara Spikers Set to Play UCLA, Team Without Two Starters Due to Injury

By Yier Shi Staff Writer

Using a mini break in the Big West Conference schedule to heal its top two players, the #15 UCSB women's volleyball team will hobble into Pauley Pavilion today to do battle with a tough

#11 UCLA squad.
The Gauchos (10-3 overall, 2-0 in the Big West) will play to-day without freshman team captain Roberta Gehlke and sophomore middle blocker Katie Crawford. The two have led the team this season with 4.94 and 4.02 kills per game, respectively.

Gehlke, who is also the team leader in digs with 3.29 digs per game, is nursing a sore knee while Crawford has a sprained

"Both Roberta and Katie are at about 70 percent," said UCSB Head Coach Kathy Gregor "They could go if we really needed them for a conference game, but the injuries are serious enough that they need the rest. I expect them to start this weekend in our league matches."

Starting in place of the two injured players will be sophomore middle blocker Hilary Gunsaulus and freshman Kathrine Maaseide.

Gunsaulus replaced Crawford in the third game of the recent Cal Poly San Luis Obispo match and played well. She is currently averaging 0.741 kills per game and 0.741 blocks per

Santa Barbara will be getting back red-shirt freshman Charlene Conley and junior setter Maile Mortensen for the match.

Conley is playing her first game since recovering from a torn anterior cruciate ligament last season. Mortensen will likely start at the setter position after missing games due to back

"I'm excited to be back," said Conley. "I wasn't planning on coming back so soon, but because of the injuries we've had, I'm going to play. I think I'm

The Bruins (10-3 overall, 3-0 in the Pac-10) come into the match after a big five-set win Saturday over their Pac-10 rival #18 USC. UCLA is led by senior Kim Krull (4.00 kpg, 2.81 dpg) and junior Tanisha Larkin (3.19 kpg, 2.83 dpg).
The Bruins also feature one of the most touted freshmen in the country: middle blocker Elisabeth Bachman (2.84 kpg and 1.304 bpg).

"They have five or six players who are very good," said Greory. "They are an exceptional hitting and blocking team. We'll miss Roberta's ball control and UCLA has a commanding edge in previous meetings between the two clubs. The Bruins have a 32-4 career record against the Gauchos and have won the last three matches.

"We are going to give 100 percent," said Conley. "I want to win even if we don't have our best players. It really doesn't matter if it's UCLA or Cal State Fullerton."

This will be the only nonconference match for Santa Barbara, as it will play Big West opponents the rest of the regular
